You is what you is, twithed. And you are a sawed off little fat mouthed federal criminal with a FUGGLY kid. As far as entering n8wwm into google groups, go back, put in order, etc...hey...good deal...you are worshipping your Master in an acceptable method. Let me know when you have the temple built and I will show up so you can kiss my...eh...ring.

As I read below, I see your mating calls to Markie Beckie are intensifying...
That musta been one HELLACIOUS trip you and FUGGLY kid took. Why doncha regale us with more details in week 2...come on twithed....

Yep, Yep...more obfuscation. No mention of the fact that you are a federal criminal...none at all...heheheh
Of course in your delusional world, sawed off little redneck pukes with FUGGLY kids, big mouths and small brains MEAN something...

It all proves what I have said all along. The intensityof these mating call back and forth between keyclowns points up jus how effective anti-keyclown efforts have become. they need SOMETHING, ANYTHING...to make themselves feel validated. That is where the mating calls, like the one below, come in.

IN TWITHED'S BRAIN: "yup, I'm gonna PROVE that the evil hammie n8wwm is the reason for all this fightin and a scrappin! Yep Yep...why if them mean hammies would just leave us federal criminals alone we could just do what we wanna do without anyone sayin doodley squat"

Twithed most femininely meweled:

Hey Shark! You are exactly right. No one here ever did anything to Dogie except correct him....enter the call into google groups, put his posts in order, go back to his first appearance and one can very easily determine for themself what he's about, as his responses began to be frequently filled with such skank as "fag" this and "fag" that. Very pre-occupied with cbers, but then again, he seems to learn rather slowly.

That is some kind of an accomplishment. The AKC has over 100 yahoo accounts ready to launch on command. Plink at em all you want, limpwristed one. WHOAAAA!!! I am SCARED!!! Markie Beckie femininely cried to Google!!!

You do that because of several reasons.

1. You can't stand to have your federal criminality thrown in your face

2. You are a sissy boy of the sort that told on who talked in class.

3. Ratting to Google is the ONLY thing you CAN do. You are impotent otherwise.

Well, for what it's worth, here's my experience with these...

I was getting static and whine from my engine in my radio. It was pretty bad, to the point where the static from the engine would trip my squelch. I ended up with my squelch turned way to high in order to keep the static out while accelerating. I could hear the pitch of the static change with the RPM of the engine.

I went over to radio shack and purchased one if their noise filters and installed it the other day. The filter took care of a great deal of the electrical noise, but I still had some. For kicks, I tried moving my ground wire on the back of the radio from the cigarette ligher wire harness (where I'm pulling power from), and connected it to the same screw into the chassis of the car that I grounded the noise filter to. Bingo. Almost no noise! The next day, out of curiosity, I ran a wire around and through the window to try connecting the power feed directly to the battery instead of through the cigarette ligher. It didn't seem to make any difference in eliminating the last little bit of noise, so I decited to stick with pulling power from under the dash.

I still get a little bit, but it's not dissruptive enough to be worried about. I'm getting much better reception now than I ever did because I don't have to keep my squelch cranked up. I don't know if one of these filters might make any difference with your air conditioning problem, but it could be worth a shot. A filter and a good ground fixed me up.

SIMPLE MOD

You change all crystals in the 10 meter position to 1mhz LOWER

That gives 26 to 28 mhz operation and that is all you need to do 98% of the time.

This is what this hypocrite promotes for himself but chastises others for doing. BEGIN OF QUOTED MATERIAL:

Hi Steve

I have a MINT Radio Shack TRC 457 base ssb unit. It was made in 78!

Has the Uniden 858 PLL chip. I also have the SECRET CB modification info for this radio, The radio itself has NEVER been opened up. It works and looks like new. Comes with a RS amplified base station mike ta boot!

I would take $50.00 cash and the 04AT for it, if the HT is in good shape. Obviously we would each pay our own shipping.

NO!!!!!
(I Don't Do Gay Bashings like you ASSUME that I do!)

You get yourself in kahoots w/ the gay community by making false claims about someone who hates the gay community so as to "cover your ass"!

You must frequent those bars.
NOT all of the Bars on Cary Street are Gay, you dipped-in-shit!!
List the gay bars on this NG!
HUH!!!!
WHAT?!!
You don't know their names.

I DO know damn well where Cary street is and Hull street and Route 10 are as well.
Daddy Rabbits on Route 10/Broad Rock Blvd!! HAH!!!
And "Banditos" is/was on Cary street as well as "Guitar Works" and the "VCU to hang out.

The D201 just came with an unamplified Astatic T-UG8 based D-104 microphone I believe. There are at least 6 listed on Ebay right now, and they should all go for under $45 shipped.

Keep in mind that the MC-320 element for the D-104 is getting a little hard to find, it is still out there, just not as common as it once was. Often old ones have a dead element, I basically consider the element dead when I buy a D-104, if it turns out not to be dead that is a bonus.

Aanal Aaron, are you stoned or just STUPID? Show me where I asked George to "bail me out", if you would please. I said what I did because George Busch, WA3MOJ, posted in another thread that he knew I wasn't Steve Rogovich. Lok it up, dimbulb. I'm not going to do it for you. YOU are the only one who still thinks I'm Steve. Sorry, but you've never been correct before and you're not correct now. I've never been Steve and I'm still not Steve. Steve does not operate a pirate station. There are several online directories that will show you that Steve Rogovich is still living in VA Beach. Are you too damned stupid to look it up? The question only needs to be asked, dimbulb. You haven't been correct about anything yet, why would you be correct now?

It just shows how frustrated and desperate YOU are that you are willing to accept the word of an aknowledged Federal Criminal because it suits you, when you put down other alleged Federal Criminals and don't take their word for anything.

Woodbury McCrae Parr (KE4ENX) is not a credible source of information. Just like you're not a credible source of anything. You are a proven nincompoop.

Are you TIRED of everyone keying-up on each other? Then try SSB. YES... you CAN talk 150 miles with your 12 watts of peak envelope power when the DX is running! ;) GREAT range, good contacts too. Try 37-40 LSB.

What would YOU know about it, Aanal Aaron? You are, at best, a no-code Tech. You can hide your antennas in your attic (or up your butt) and nobody would know.

How would you know that, Aanal Aaron; are you a "freebander"?? If the local law sez "no outside antennas", does that give licensed amateurs a Right to violate it? This is especially poignant in the case of CC&R limited amateurs.

Those "rules are there for a reason", after all. What would YOU know about it?

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a search to prove that. Just search for Radio Bob and/or rbcn1.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

A "Husband Shopping Center" was opened where a woman could go to choose from among many men, for her husband.

It was laid out in five floors, with the men increasing in positive attributes as you ascended up the floors.

The only rule was, once you opened the door to any floor, you must choose a man from that floor, and if you went up a floor, you couldn't go back down except to leave the place. So, a couple of girlfriends go to the place to find men.

First floor, the door had a sign saying "These men have jobs and love children."

The women read the sign and say "Well that's better than not having jobs, or not loving children, but I wonder what's further up?" So up they go.

<Second floor says "These men have high paying jobs, love children, and are extremely good looking" Hmmm, say the girls. But, I wonder what's further
up?".

<Third floor: "These men have high paying jobs, are extremely good looking, love children and help with the housework.." Wow! say the women. Very tempting, BUT, there's more further up!? And so again, they go up.

<Fourth floor: "These men have high paying jobs, love children, are extremely good looking, help with the housework, and have a strong romantic streak." Oh, mercy me. But just think!?!?! What must be awaiting us further
on!

So up to the fifth floor they go.

The sign on that door said "This floor is just to prove that women are impossible to please. Thank you for shopping and have a nice day!"

A woman went to her priest one day.
"Father," she said, "I have a problem. I have two female parrots, but they only know how to say one thing."
"What do they say?" the priest inquired.
"They say, 'Hi, we're hookers! Do you want to have some fun?'"

"That's obscene!" the priest exclaimed, and he thought for a moment.

"You know," he said, "I may have a solution to your problem. I have two male talking parrots, which I have taught to pray and read the Bible. Bring your two parrots over to my house, and we'll put them in the cage with Francis and Job. My parrots

can teach your parrots to praise and worship, and your parrots are sure to stop saying...that phrase...in no time."

"Thank you," the woman responded, "this may very well be the solution."

The next day, she brought her female parrots to the priest's house.
As
he ushered her in, she saw that his two male parrots were inside their cage holding rosary beads and praying. Impressed, she walked over and placed her parrots in with them.
After a few minutes, the female parrots cried out in unison,

"Hi, we're hookers! Do you want to have some fun?"

There was stunned silence. Shocked, one male parrot looked over at the other male parrot and exclaimed, "Put the beads away, Frank. Our prayers have been answered."

Radio Shack TRC-449, which was made by Uniden.
It's one of the oldies-but-goodies, made back when RS actually sold decent radios.
It was cheap to buy, and had killer audio, lots of swing.
Topping it all off was the famous 858 PLL chip that even a novice could do pin jumps on, for all those great funny channels.

Still kicking myself for selling the damn thing......

HELP!

I need some help with the mic wiring on my Johnson Messenger 223. I just picked this thing up. Here is the deal.

Everything appears to be OK except for the mic.
If I short one of the mic pins to ground I can get some receive.
I plug in the mic it switches the TX relay, and transmits carrier.
If I key the mic I don't believe it transmits, (modulates) but it does act as a talkback. It will squeal.
Can someone help?

Thats what I figure. Galaxy's "10 meter" radios have features like echo, roger beep etc - when would you "need" any of that stuff on the ham bands? In general those kinds of things are part of bad operating practice.

So I picked up a Ranger 2950 the other day - I'm licensed to use it on 10 and 12 of course, but has anyone looked at any of the mods on it? I can set a jumper that lets it recieve and transmit from 26-30 mhz continuous. Then the thing has roger beep - and it seems to turn on by default when I turn the radio on.

How this thing became type certified is beyond me... Oh well it seems to work.

You are truly stupid . if You think I am supposed to believe that . Sounds like You're grasping for straws now Mr. Klan Man .
So for in all of You're replying post's it seems You have been trying to justify using the description in Your post .
Well I'll tell You what, There is no justification for the term used . Now if You are indeed in a relation with a black Woman, Why don't You ask Her . Ask Her if it is disrespectful to Use the term that You used in a public forum?.
And if She is a real Nubian Queen She will slap the shit out of You and let You figure it out
So You see Mr. Klan Man, short of an apology There is nothing else You can say to satisfy My taste for blood .
And NO I do not believe You are with a Black Woman because Your mentality would not permit this.
Look at what You posted and look at it long and hard , Then come back and tell Me if You see anything wrong with it.
And something else FYI , Cross fire means crossfire fuel injection as in the 84 vette not the first thing that would come across your mind .

While listening on 27.585 skip was really rolling in from Tasmania. 1101 from New Norfolk was really loud.
Also a lot of skip from the upper mid-east US.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

My radio is already wired up directly to the battery. I am not sure one of those noise filters will help. The radio does a great job at eliminating engine noise. The only problem is when the A/C is turned on. I get no alternator whine at all. I'd rather find a solution to isolating just the A/C noise, and not install one of those filters in the power wires from the radio.

Feminine Little Markie Beckie

Markie Beckie, You said N8WWM was selling illegal equipment. Where is your proof? none here so far Come on Markie <weak wanger> Beckie, is that all ya got?

YOU CAN"T STOP THE ANTI-BOYS!!!!!! IT'S EATIN' YA UP TOO!!!!
Dear Markie Beckie,

OK, if there is LOTS more there, then POST EM. Neither of those posts have any content that can be construed as illegal. You are again grasping at straws to defocus from your own federal criminality. Show me one single illegal thing in those posts. You can not do so and you know it. Weak, Markie Beckie, weak.

Yet that's all you can do because you cannot stop the anti-keyclowns. In your femininely stuttering and impotent rage you grasp for anything at all...and of course come up dry again.
YOU CAN"T STOP THE ANTI-BOYS!!!!!! IT'S EATIN' YA UP TOO!!!!
You are utterly without any possible course of action to stop the anti-boys Markie Beckie. This is exactly why you run your mouth like you do. You vainly hope the stupider of your fellow keyclowns will see your "form", and think there must be some "substance" to it. Too bad there is none.
YOU CAN"T STOP THE ANTI-BOYS!!!!!! IT'S EATIN' YA UP TOO!!!!
We are all waiting in suspense about twithed's vacation journal, week 2. He has not released it yet, Markie Beckie. Since he and FUGGLY kid allegedly visited you, how about cluing us in...was it anything like his visit to Mopar, or Ozark333? Did you take pictures? Fill us in on the whole thing...twithed has become a bit reticent of late.
YOU CAN"T STOP THE ANTI-BOYS!!!!!! IT'S EATIN' YA UP TOO!!!!
Come on Markie Beckie, tell us. We know you idolize twithed...everyone knows how you love him. Just fill us in. If you do I promise not to call you Markie Beckie for 24 hours. Such a deal, 'ay Markie Beckie?

KEYCLOWN LOGIC: WHEN YOU DO NOT HAVE TRUTH TELL LIES

Above all do ANYTHING POSSIBLE to obfuscate the fact that you ILLEGAL CB OPERATORS ARE FEDERAL CRIMINALS.

HE WALKS AND TALKS JUST LIKE A MISSY
MARKIE BECKIE IS A SISSY

Crunch all ya want, we'll make more. Actually it is nice to see all the whining letters to ISP's, etc. for a couple of reasons.
1. It keeps you criminals busy a little while each day.
2. It shows, by your impotent rage and whine posts here, how much effect the anti-boys have on you mouth breathing retards,like Markie Beckie. He is one who JUST CAN'T STAND IT!!! Ooooooooooooh it gripes him big time. <Imagine Yosemite Sam on his "I hate that rabbit!"
tirade>. That is Markie Beckie.

A dope and booze soaked NWA wanna be, a high school dropout who was kicked out by his parents when they realized he was a hopeless drag and a parasite on society. His greatest fantasy is to "pimp hoes". This is logical since it involves trodding on other people in a quest for personal enrichment without deserving it. Dweebo's whole mentality shows that that is what he is about.

Just a wanna be thug without a brain in his head. Definitely headed for prison. Likely already been in jail a few times. People like him are too stupid to stay out of 'em.

Actually, the prioritization of interference cases was run in an amateur group perhaps three months ago. It was something like this (not absolutely guaranteed, except for the first couple).

1: Air Force One. Interfere with this and you are not going to pass go nor collect $200.00. Bad choice. VERY bad choice.

2: military communications. Another bad choice

3: public safety. This would include aircraft, police, fire, ambulance - you get the idea. Poor choice here too.

4: broadcasting. Big Buck$ ensure problems here.

5: everything else. Not overly dangerous unless you keep a very high profile and defy someone to do something about it. This may be subject to change in the future, but just like the local police are going to ignore someone parked in front of your driveway due to more pressing needs, the FCC is grossly understaffed.

I can't argue with it.

Frankly, e-bay is likely (if this story is true) to find it easier to cancel most of the amplifier auctions simply because they have become a pain three feet below the neck and account for a VERY small percentage of e-bays profits (and likely 90% of their problems).

I know this is more car related than radio related, but...

How does the AC in a car work? The more I think about your problem, the more it seems strange. I always thought that the AC compressor was run off of one of the pulleys on the engine, since when the AC kicks on, you can feel a difference in the power and acceleration of the car. Am I completely mistaken? or do some manufacturers use electric AC units, and others use a compressor driven off of the engine?

Here's the basic deal:

You hit the switch

A relay engages the AC compressor.

The compressor is powered by the accessory belt.

Freon is compressed and sent through a radiator. As the gas compresses it heats up.

The effect of compressing a gas and then allowing it to expand causes it to cool. Freon is very good at this.

Then a fan comes on and blows across a coil cooled by the freon in the system into the passenger compartment. Here's a large chunk of noise, the blower fan that is requires more power so the alternator needs to supply more juice, engine has to work harder ect ect. Another spot for noise

This is very simplistic but basically accurate. Make anymore sense? Or did I bungle this one?

Those 6LQ6's are getting pretty rare and pricey. Great amp had one back in the mid-eighties when you could pick up spare 6LQ6's for around $10-$12 at any neighborhood TV repair shop. Those days are long gone!

Dave sounds like your right on the money with your post. Lots of noise from blower motor and some more possible from alt.

The relay that engages is a clutch on the compressor.

A Texas Star runs class AB. That means it is always conducting. Your Dave Made runs class C. You use 1/3 the power. You only put out 1/3 of your input, it's just big peaks. Looks pretty on your meter!!!

Anyone the newsgroup trolls disagree with.

They will argue that it is an "illegal CBer", but they attach the label quite freely to anyone who disagrees with their antisocial tactics within a newsgroup.
LEGAL CBers and radio Amateurs have often been given the label "keyclown".

You will notice that the post makes accusations of pimping and drug use, and is nothing more than a string of insults hurled at anyone who will take the time to read it.
Some "antikeyclowns" have even been caught promoting illegal activity themselves, which leads me to believe that their whole "pro-legal" stance is fake, they just want to cause arguments on newsgroups. One of them has made several attempts to spread the anger to a UK group, but has just been blocked by most of the users.

Peter.

The most likely day for an accident is said to be a Friday 15th.

Hi Jim.

I usually refuse cookies, most of them are only tracking adverts that you never wanted in the first place. If a site insists on cookies, as Maplin (an electronic component supplier) does, I refuse their site.
Maplin redirect you to a dead end "you MUST have cookies enabled" page if you try to access their site with cookies disabled. I wonder how many customers they lose because they will not respect surfers rights to set their system how they want.

If a site needs it for a good reason, such as logging into an account, I delete it after finishing.

Some may also log IP numbers. A local radio station, who do a poll, boast that they use both cookies and IP numbers... but many IP numbers are dynamically assigned, so even that is unreliable.

Hit counters generally use temp. cookies, so they will not count each time a visitor goes back to the home page from within the site. Once you close your browser, these cookies will be deleted and your next visit will be logged. I can see those who refuse cookies on my site, every return to the home page is logged, and it shows that they returned from within the site. This is where detailed logs are needed, the counter figure alone is not an accurate count of different visits or visitors.

Regards,

Peter.

The Ontario Unlisted Frequency Guide is dedicated to scanner radio hobbists. On here you will find lists of Ontario radio frequencies that are not listed on any web page, published in any scannner book (Haruteq or Scantrix) or listed in the government frequency list (Industry Canada's TAFL). The Ontario Frequency Guide mailing list (oufg) is for scanner radio hobbyists so they have a public forum to be able to chit chat with each other about anything relating to the radio scanner hobby in Ontario as well you will be able to recieve updates of what changes I have made to the Ontario Unlisted Frequency Guide web pages.

Good you downloaded this,read on and i guarantee that you won't regret it!
Even though most of this letter is copied,these words are my own,"Now about a year ago I heard about this same thing but I was really skeptical,then when I saw it about a month ago I jumped on it and I am defintely grateful that I did!" Read on: I found this on a bulletin board and decided to try it. A little while back,
I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now, and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands of dollars within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, Yeah right,
this must be a scam,but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept reading.
Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 to each of the 6 names and address stated in the article. You then place your own name and address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200 newsgroups.
(There are thousands) No catch, that was it. So after thinking it over, and talking to a few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured:
what have I got to lose except 6 stamps and $6.00, right? Then I invested
the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!... within 7 days, I started getting money in the mail! I was shocked! I figured it would end soon, but the money just kept coming in. In my first week, I made about $25.00. By the end of
the second week I had made a total of over $1,000.00! In the third week I had over $10,000.00 and it's still growing. This is now my fourth week and I have made a total of just over $42,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly.
It's certainly worth $6.00, and 6 stamps, I have spent more than that
on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works....Also, make sure you print a copy of this article NOW, so you can get the information off of it as you need it. I promise you that if you

follow the directions exactly, that you will start making more money than
you thought possible by doing something so easy!

Suggestion: Read this entire message carefully! (Print it out or download it.) Follow the simple directions and watch the money come in! It's easy.
It's legal. And, your investment is only $6.00 (Plus postage)

IMPORTANT: This is not a rip-off; it is not indecent; it is not illegal; and it is virtually no risk - it really works!!!! If all of the following instructions are adhered to, you will receive extraordinary dividends.

PLEASE NOTE: Please follow these directions EXACTLY, and $50,000 or more can be yours in 20 to 60 days. This program remains successful because of the honesty and integrity of the participants. Please continue its success by carefully adhering to the instructions. You will now become part of the Mail Order business. In this business your product is not solid and tangible, it's a service. You are in the business of developing Mailing Lists. Many large corporations are happy to pay big bucks for quality lists. However, the money made from the mailing lists is secondary to the income which is made from people like you and me asking to be included in that list. Here are the 4 easy steps to success:

STEP 1: Get 6 separate pieces of paper and write the following on each piece of paper; PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR MAILING LIST. Now get 6 US $1.00 bills and place ONE inside EACH of the 6 pieces of paper so the bill will not be seen through the envelope (to prevent thievery). Next, place one paper in each of the 6 envelopes and seal them. You should now have 6 sealed envelopes, each with a piece of paper stating the above phrase, your name and address, and a $1.00 bill. What you are doing is creating a service. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL! You are requesting a legitimate service and you are paying for it!

Like most of us I was a little skeptical and a little worried about
the legal aspects of it all. So I checked it out with the U.S. Post Office (1-800-725-2161) and they confirmed that it is indeed legal! Mail the 6 envelopes to the following addresses:

Mailing Adresses

1.Tia Loske

40 Hancock St.

Ft. Plain, NY 13339

2.shawn woody
6904 bill lundy rd.
laurel hill ,fl. 32567

3.Jazen Brown
1007 Ladson Court
Decatur, GA 30033

4.Brian Warren
204 Pleasant Acres Rd.
Vienna, IL 62995

5.Johnny Reynolds
1333 N. 125th ST. #10
Seattle,WA 98133

6.Jamie Travis
3535 Century Av. unit#43
White Bear Lake,MN 55110

STEP 2: Now take the #1 name off the list that you see above, move the other names up (6 becomes 5, 5 becomes 4, etc...) and add YOUR Name as number 6 on the list.

STEP 3: Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close to original as possible. Now, post your amended article to at least 200 newsgroups. (I think there are close to 24,000 groups) All you need is 200, but remember, the more you post, the more money you make! This is perfectly legal! If you have any doubts, refer to Title 18 Sec. 1302 & 1341 of
the Postal lottery laws.

Keep a copy of these steps for yourself and, whenever you need money, you can use it again, and again.

PLEASE REMEMBER that this program remains successful because of the honesty
and integrity of the participants and by their carefully adhering to the directions. Look at it this way. If you are of integrity, the program will continue and the money that so many others have received will come your way.

NOTE: You may want to retain every name and address sent to you, either on a computer or hard copy and keep the notes people send you. This VERIFIES that you are truly providing a service. (Also, it might be a good idea to wrap the $1 bill in dark paper to reduce the risk of mail theft.)

So, as each post is downloaded and the directions carefully followed, six members will be reimbursed for their participation as a List Developer with one dollar each. Your name will move up the list geometrically so that when your name reaches the #1 position you will be receiving thousands of dollars in CASH!!! What an opportunity for only $6.00 ($1.00 for each of the first six people listed above) Send it now, add your own name to the list and you're in business!

---DIRECTIONS ----- FOR HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS---------- Step 1) You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your cursor at the beginning of this letter and drag your cursor to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into the computer's memory.

Step 2) Open a blank 'notepad' file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'edit' menu select 'paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your name to the list.

Step 3) Save your new notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different settings, you'll always have this file to go back to.

Step 4) Use Netscape or Internet explorer and try searching for various newsgroups (on-line forums, message boards, chat sites, discussions.)

Step 5) Visit these message boards and post this article as a new message by highlighting the text of this letter and selecting paste from the edit menu.
Fill in the Subject, this will be the header that everyone sees as they scroll through the list of postings in a particular group, click the post message button. You're done with your first one! Congratulations...THAT'S IT! All you have to do is jump to different newsgroups and post away, after you get the hang of it, it will take about 30 seconds for each newsgroup!

REMEMBER, THE MORE NEWSGROUPS YOU POST IN, THE MORE MONEY YOU WILL MAKE!!
BUT YOU HAVE TO POST A MINIMUM OF 200

That's it! You will begin receiving money from around the world within days!
You may eventually want to rent a P.O.Box due to the large amount of mail you will receive. If you wish to stay anonymous, you can invent a name to use, as long as the postman will deliver it.

JUST MAKE SURE ALL THE ADDRESSES ARE CORRECT.

Now the WHY part: Out of 200 postings, say I receive only 5 replies (a very low example). So then I made $5.00 with my name at #6 on the letter. Now, each of the 5 persons who just sent me $1.00 make the MINIMUM 200 postings, each with my name at #5 and only 5 persons respond to each of the original 5, that is another $25.00 for me, now those 25 each make 200 MINIMUM posts with my name at #4 and only 5 replies each, I will bring in an additional $125.00! Now, those 125 persons turn around and post the MINIMUM 200 with my name at #3 and only receive 5 replies each, I will make an additional $626.00! OK, now here is the fun part, each of those 625 persons post

MINIMUM 200 letters with my name at #2 and they each only receive 5 replies, that just made me $3,125.00!!! Those 3,125 persons will all deliver this message to 200 newsgroups with my name at #1 and if still 5 persons per 200 newsgroups react I will receive $15,625,00! With an original investment of only $6.00! AMAZING! When your name is no longer on the list, you just take the latest posting in the newsgroups, and send out another $6.00 to names on the list, putting your name at number 6 again. And start posting again. The thing to remember is: do you realize that thousands of people all over
the world are joining the internet and reading these articles everyday?, JUST
LIKE YOU are now!! So, can you afford $6.00 and see if it really works?? I think so... People have said, "e;what if the plan is played out and no one sends you the money? So what! What are the chances of that happening when there are tons of new honest users and new honest people who are joining the internet and newsgroups everyday and are willing to give it a try?
Estimates are at 20,000 to 50,000 new users, every day, with thousands of those joining the actual internet.

Remember: play FAIRLY and HONESTLY and this will really work.

Good you downloaded this,read on and i guarantee that you won't regret it!
Even though most of this letter is copied,these words are my own,"Now about a year ago I heard about this same thing but I was really skeptical,then when I saw it about a month ago I jumped on it and I am defintely grateful that I did!" Read on: I found this on a bulletin board and decided to try it. A little while
back,
I was browsing through newsgroups, just like you are now, and came across an article similar to this that said you could make thousands of dollars
within weeks with only an initial investment of $6.00! So I thought, Yeah right,
this must be a scam,but like most of us, I was curious, so I kept
reading.
Anyway, it said that you send $1.00 to each of the 6 names and address stated in the article. You then place your own name and address in the bottom of the list at #6, and post the article in at least 200
newsgroups.
(There are thousands) No catch, that was it. So after thinking it
over, and talking to a few people first, I thought about trying it. I figured:
what
the measly $6.00. Well GUESS WHAT!!... within 7 days, I started getting money in
just
the second week I had made a total of over $1,000.00! In the third week I had
I have made a total of just over $42,000.00 and it's still coming in rapidly.
It's certainly worth $6.00, and 6 stamps, I have spent more than that
on the lottery!! Let me tell you how this works and most importantly, why it works....Also, make sure you print a copy of this article NOW, so you can get the information off of it as you need it. I promise you that if you

follow the directions exactly, that you will start making more money than
you thought possible by doing something so easy!

Suggestion: Read this entire message carefully! (Print it out or download it.) Follow the simple directions and watch the money come in! It's easy.
It's legal. And, your investment is only $6.00 (Plus postage)

IMPORTANT: This is not a rip-off; it is not indecent; it is not illegal; and it is virtually no risk - it really works!!!! If all of the following instructions are adhered to, you will receive extraordinary dividends.

PLEASE NOTE: Please follow these directions EXACTLY, and $50,000 or more can be yours in 20 to 60 days. This program remains successful because of the honesty and integrity of the participants. Please continue its success by carefully adhering to the instructions. You will now become part of the Mail Order business. In this business your product is not solid and tangible,
it's a service. You are in the business of developing Mailing Lists. Many large corporations are happy to pay big bucks for quality lists. However,
the money made from the mailing lists is secondary to the income which is made from people like you and me asking to be included in that list. Here are the 4 easy steps to success:

STEP 1: Get 6 separate pieces of paper and write the following on each piece of paper; PLEASE PUT ME ON YOUR MAILING LIST. Now get 6 US $1.00 bills and place ONE inside EACH of the 6 pieces of paper so the bill will not be seen through the envelope (to prevent thievery). Next, place one paper in each of the 6 envelopes and seal them. You should now have 6 sealed envelopes, each with a piece of paper stating the above phrase, your name and address, and a
$1.00 bill. What you are doing is creating a service. THIS IS ABSOLUTELY LEGAL! You are requesting a legitimate service and you are paying for it!

the
legal aspects of it all. So I checked it out with the U.S. Post Office
6
envelopes to the following addresses:

Mailing Adresses

1.Tia Loske

40 Hancock St.

Ft. Plain, NY 13339

2.shawn woody
6904 bill lundy rd.
laurel hill ,fl. 32567

3.Jazen Brown
1007 Ladson Court
Decatur, GA 30033

4.Brian Warren
204 Pleasant Acres Rd.
Vienna, IL 62995

5.Johnny Reynolds
1333 N. 125th ST. #10
Seattle,WA 98133

6.Jamie Travis
3535 Century Av. unit#43
White Bear Lake,MN 55110

STEP 2: Now take the #1 name off the list that you see above, move the other names up (6 becomes 5, 5 becomes 4, etc...) and add YOUR Name as number 6 on the list.

STEP 3: Change anything you need to, but try to keep this article as close
200 newsgroups. (I think there are close to 24,000 groups) All you need is 200,
perfectly legal! If you have any doubts, refer to Title 18 Sec. 1302 & 1341 of
the Postal lottery laws.

Keep a copy of these steps for yourself and, whenever you need money, you can use it again, and again.

PLEASE REMEMBER that this program remains successful because of the honesty
and integrity of the participants and by their carefully adhering to the directions. Look at it this way. If you are of integrity, the program will continue and the money that so many others have received will come your way.

NOTE: You may want to retain every name and address sent to you, either on a computer or hard copy and keep the notes people send you. This VERIFIES that you are truly providing a service. (Also, it might be a good idea to wrap
the $1 bill in dark paper to reduce the risk of mail theft.)

So, as each post is downloaded and the directions carefully followed, six members will be reimbursed for their participation as a List Developer with one dollar each. Your name will move up the list geometrically so that when your name reaches the #1 position you will be receiving thousands of dollars in CASH!!! What an opportunity for only $6.00 ($1.00 for each of the first six people listed above) Send it now, add your own name to the list and you're in business!

---DIRECTIONS ----- FOR HOW TO POST TO NEWSGROUPS---------- Step 1) You do not need to re-type this entire letter to do your own posting. Simply put your cursor at the beginning of this letter and drag your cursor to the bottom of this document, and select 'copy' from the edit menu. This will copy the entire letter into the computer's memory.

Step 2) Open a blank 'notepad' file and place your cursor at the top of the blank page. From the 'edit' menu select 'paste'. This will paste a copy of the letter into notepad so that you can add your name to the list.

Step 3) Save your new notepad file as a .txt file. If you want to do your postings in different settings, you'll always have this file to go back to.

Step 4) Use Netscape or Internet explorer and try searching for various newsgroups (on-line forums, message boards, chat sites, discussions.)

you hit the switch & if the thermostat wants cool it energizes the compress clutch coil causing the clutch to engage the "drive" belt which circulates freon in a GASEOUS form to the "condensor"(heat exchanger" in front of the car) where the GAS is turned into a LIQUID leaving the HOT compartment air to be removed by the engine FAN blade, along the way the freon passes thru the reciever drier where any moisture is removed then on to and thru an expansion valve/accumlulator (throttle valve) then into the evaporator(heat exchanger) in the inside heater A/C box in the dash where the heater?A/C blower motor blows air on the evap and into the duct work, the same blower motor ALSO blows hot air in the winter A door closes on the evap and a water valve turns on hot water to the heater core(which is alongside the evap) so you think your noise is the A/C blower motor turn on the heater,,does it make noise with the engine off & the blower running

I hope to visit the UK and its beautiful castles some day. However, I have watched some of BBC's and Discovery Channel's documentaries on "haunted" castles. While I have never encountered a "ghost", and therefore, don't believe in them, they sure make it sound convincing! The idea of meeting some long-dead queen or nobleman in some dark hallway isn't my idea of adventure! If I know it's alleged to be "haunted", I am not going in 'ere!! LOL!

Hiya Jer! Let's get real about it. If one buys into a place with restrictions, too bad for you if you wish to VIOLATE those RULES in the future. This forum is a perfect example of how what constitutes "within reason" greatly differs among us.
When you buy a house in a subdivision and it says "no commercial trucks or vehicles", then you don't bring home the 18 wheeler or cement truck with "Bill's Construction" on the side.
My area was zoned for agricultural not too far back...now I can walk to what is zoned as "business" on the other side of what is zoned "residential", of which is shrinking. I must now garage one of my recreational vehicles/crafts at all times, as only one is now permitted per property owner. In other words, I cant have my camper AND a boat in my yard at the same time if it is visible from the street.
It wasn't like this just a few short years ago.
Even had a visit from a councilwoman to see if I was running a kennel...(business in residential = special permit) I was tempted to tell her "only on the internet" <g>,, but kept quiet. She put down a reserve for Christmas.
Using your stated input as a means of showing how well I understand your position, some that wish to violate those rules may say, "Well, I happen to think commercial vehicles are fine as long as they aren't BIG trucks."
Another point you made to draw from is "Where do we draw the line?" concerning the freebanders. To you, I ask the same. If we allow you to have an antenna, what next? You'll want a mast, or worse, a tower (gasp)!
To debate those rules that you would attempt to circumvent is akin to debating the FCC rules...as I point you in the direction of the many, many posts you reiterated that "The rules are there for a reason."
What's good for the goose.....

I'll agree Jim is pretty good about trying\to stay neutral about it. But let us not forget about Bert, Jay and numerous others here.

If you are implying that people, who

held to a higher moral standard than

be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Been there Jerry and it is a hoot. If you like history, that is one great country to go and see. I especially liked the imperial war museum and the tower of London. As for night life, well lots of great little pubs, but if you feel adventurous you could always go to the palladium (if it's still open).

Either misleading or incorrect, depending on exactly what you mean.

A class AB amp is less efficient, so it will get hotter than a class C amp that is running the same average input power.

Very true. I did miss that one. When you kick on the AC switch a relay engages the compressor clutch which allows the compressor pulley (which is driven by the accessory belt) to turn a shaft on the compressor which in turn.......

2LD751,
You have two choices, putting a filter in the radio's power line, or filtering the AC motor ~at~ the motor, either will work. There should be no 'bad' side affects to putting a filter in the radio's power lead, if there is, then something isn't being done right. The 'filter' consists of a capacitor and a 'choke' (most people don't use the choke). The capacitor should be a fairly large value and it's voltage rating twice the supply voltage, around 24-35 volts. The capacitor is connected from (+) the hot lead to ground (-).
A 'choke' is going to be hard to find if it has to carry fairly high currents (more than 3-8 amperes). An alternative is to use a couple of ferrite cores and wind the (+) power lead through them as many times as you can (the more the better). The closer to the radio that you can connect this filter the better off you are.
Filtering the radio's power lead also has the advantage of 'catching' any other RFI that may be present. The whole thing can be mounted in a 'utility' box and used for any radio connections to power.
Good luck...

Some said it wasn't going to happen, but it's happening. Commercial interests are amateur radios largest threat. 220 has been requested by private interests and the FCC is entertaining all input regarding this issue. If you give a damn, you better drop a line...to someone who cares...it doesn't seem like too many are worried about it. It appears many are content to watch this happen and remain apathetic. We deserve the government we get.

On another note...this was sent to me, but I'm not certain why...I guess the person wants it posted but didn' want to post it themself.

Is it just me or has the ten metre band been a bit dead of late? I don't think it is just me and on that note, wouldn't it be better if we could establish a voluntary calling frequency? How many of us use the 555 on 11 metres as a reference as to the condition of the ten metre band, I know I do. With a calling frequency established you would be able to monitor conditions/activity much easier and you could get more entries in your log. Fair enough, when the 11 metre band is open you could be forgiven for thinking that 555 is unorganised chaos and you would be right, but if you can be heard it works! Say if we adopted 28.500, a usually busy area of the band, thst would not be too high or low. Also this would encourage better usage of the band. At present, unless there is a popular contest on you will raely hear anyone above 28.600 which apart from the odd beacon you may find further up the band equals a terrible waste of valuable spectrum. What do you all think?
Chris/MØNTY

Yes, the ten meter band is dying also. Now that we notice it, its only a matter of time 'till interested parties are aware of it as well.....just like 220. As a matter of fact, 220 isn't the only hammie freq being hungrily eyed by commercial interests.
There will be those raising cane over these losses, but it will be too late.
Stay tuned as more frequency losses are to come.

Well Brain since you have only been around for a short while I'll fill you in. The "Keyclownbuster" is a Ham named Doug Adair N8WWM. He was flooding the newsgroup a year or so back on a daily basis with the same foul language accusation and insults. He has lost his AOL account, Concentric, UUnet now he's working on another one.
Now what I find strange is, that Doug and a couple of others are ham operators, now just because they are hams doesn't mean that they are morally right, but they wouldn't and couldn't talk like this on the ham bands, let alone on the cb or for that fact in person.

Hello!

I'm hoping you will help me with a little history.

I was the proud owner of one on the ORIGINAL Cobra 148GTL-DX radios. This radio had, as I believe, the Uniden PB010 Chassis. I have heard that there was a FAKE GTL-DX with an RCI board.

What ever happened to the PB010 chassis radios? Are they still being made? What is the history of this chassis?

Since I have you in the mood to educate me, what ever became of the PB042 chassis that was in the President Jackson radio?

Lastly, does anyone have one of these radios that is still working?

The e-mail address is no good, so please reply here. Thanks!!!

I have decided to buy a Washington. I'd much rather have a Cobra 2000, but a Washington is a fine radio.

I was looking on e-bay and see both a "President Washington" and a "Uniden Washington". Since the pictures are horrible, I can only make out that the Uniden model has three push buttons under the channel selctor and the President has two.

What is the difference in these chassis? What one is better?

Lastly, does anyone have one new in the box for sale? I don't need channels, swing, etc. I want a clean radio that I will have worked on here in Southern CA.

Thanks for your help!!!!

The e-mail address is no good so please resond here!

Hey Twist, if you only post the first post of that qrz.com thread people will get the impression that hams are recommending bootleg frequencies to each other. I know you wouldn't want THAT to happen. So I'll help out by posting the rest of the responses. -Aaron-

You use 27.555 USB as a calling frequency for 10 meter Ham? Oh really... ï¿½ Are there any other criminal acts you'd like to confess too? Listen, it's like this... if you have to break the law just to make contact with another living, breathing human being, maybe you should consider a lifestyle change.

27.555 is not part of the legal CB band on 11m, so operating on it to test band conditions would not be legal either.ï¿½ï¿½

10m is open here in Arizona mostly each morning from 1330Z to 1630Z and from 2230Z till 0200Z.
Illegals are rappin' their crap from 28.000 to above 30.000Mcs. Yes, 27.555Mcs is not for CB use, 27.405Mcs is the legal top end.
Listen for the Beacons or call CQ. Activity above 28.5 is growing as we turn into Fall.
My suggestion is to listen from your Sunrise and near your Sunset daily, of course beacons. Why listen to CHAOS and filthy mouths out of the CB Band?

Bet you all didn't think I'd reply, a 4+ year monitoring post for 10m illegal activity and having enjoyment operating 10m while Filthy Mouth Trucker's maliciously interfering daily, so logged and recorded.

Well, Chris may put it a bit rough around the edges, but he is correct. ï¿½27.555 is 100% illegal. ï¿½And from recent enforcement letters I've seen, a HAM is more apt to get nailed for using it than a "CB'er". 28.400 is both legal and middle of the band enough to get the job done. ï¿½73 to all.

Hiya, Jim. If I did, it wasn't intended...well,,not with malice, anyway.
The gist of it was conveyed.
All must be treated equal or not at all.
Classify, index, segregate, or license away......it doesn't usually mean much. We are all people bound by the same law.
What varies greatly are our personal views, and to not allow these views to skewer our posts one way or the other can at times, be a difficult thing for some.
Most couldn;t care less about the hammie that has an indoor antenna or dipole in the attic where antennas are forbidden, but it serves well a prime example of selective disregard for particular laws and that cbers and hammies aren't as different as select individuals would have one believe. Matter of fact, many of these cbers ARE hammies.

FYI, the Ranger 2950 and the Galaxy's you're referring to aren't "type certified" for anything, especially CB. The roger beep, echo features, etc. are there because the radios are intended to be sold to CBers and bootleggers.

Not a bad idea, but a better one would be to supply the link, that way all can read for themselves that some hammies indeed utilize 555 and hold very opposing views than yourself and other "antis" concerning certain behavior. You can learn much from them if you take the time.

Ranger 2950's do not come w/echo, unlike Galaxy's which do..... of coarse Voobner doesn't bother pointing that out, because it doesn't

Forget tattling, fines, jail, and the pin-in-the-coax trick. If you really want the keyclowns to be no more, here's what needs to be done:

1. Severely restrict component sales. Only corporations whose employees are all rabidly pro-gov't should be allowed access to transistors, capacitors, etc., and employees would have to provide lists of contacts every 30 days to minimize the likelihood of any inside jobs.

2. Boomboxes, TVs, and anything else which contains components should have their circuits encased in epoxy resin to prevent cannibalization. Older model electronic goods which no longer work would have to be turned in to licensed gov't loyalist establishments.

3. Miniature alert transmitters should be installed on all 10 meter ham gear, so that if a user transmits outside the 10m band, the unit sends out a concurrent signal to any one of millions of automated "tattle receivers" which would dot the USA.

4. Give all CBers no more than 30 days to register their units with law enforcement, get fingerprinted & profiled, and explain where they stand politically---or else.

Hey, it would work.

canya? HARDEEHARRHARRHARRR!!! You need to take a look at these

Those are all freebies, dorko-boy. <exc. aol, and that was 2 years keyclowns just gonna have to try harder to find the real one. So far you have not made it within a country mile. I think it is a scream to watch you try doing that anyway...bust em if ya can, no biggie. It shows 2 things: 1. Antiboys are EFFECTIVE. We frustrate you because you cannot stop us confronting you with your criminality. That drives you keyqueens NUTS!

2. ALL you can do is get in touch with ISP's, etc. and squeal your feminine fears just like old ladies do when they see a mouse in the kitchen. That's ALL you can do. Every time you attack like this it proves exactly what we anti's say over and over. We are here, you cannot stop us, we will never leave, you will be saddled with people calling you to account for criminality FOREVER.

YOU CANT DO ANYTHING ABOUT IT AND YOUR WHINING PROVES IT DAILY!!!!
HARDEEHARRHARRHARRR, LIFE IS GOOD WHEN YA AINT A FEDERAL CRIMINAL!
Of course, with your minds, what would one expect?

Thanks for playing, Dweebo, but we gotta get to the next contestant!
As a consolation prize please accept the 5 gallon bucket of KY Jelly

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a search to prove that. Just search for Radio Bob and/or rbcn1.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired
for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Yes but the rotor and mast/tower to hold a Raker will be much more than that!
The AstroBeam (if that is what the thread was referring to) is a light duty beam. A standard TV rotor and basic mast will hold it up.

ENFORCEMENT: DONT TAKE 10 ON THE ROAD AGAIN

The FCC has told Cheetah Transportation Company to keep its trucking operation
off of the 10 meter Amateur band. In a letter to the Monroesville North Carolina company the FCC says a driver for a vehicle licensed to Cheetah was operating unlicensed radio transmitting equipment on 28.085 MHz. This, while driving on Interstate 77 in South Carolina last June 5th.

In its letter to the company the FCC tells Cheetah Transportation that this operation will subject the person operating the radio to fine or imprisonment
if the violation continues. Fines normally range from $7500 to $10,000.

Because, when you are switching from Comcast to AOL, it's real tough to figure.

It might work, but that is too extreme even for us anti-boys.
Actually, these federal criminals just need to respect the law. This is impossible for them because of limited mentality, self justifying mass delusional thinking, and possibly the act of denial, which some of them seem to be in about just what a pathetic mess their lives are in.

Nooope...won't happen. Us Anti-boys will just keep riding our white horses and spouting the truth of the criminality of keyclownism.

Afterall, the keyqueens can't stop us, it is a hoot, and we are the ones telling the truth. Why not keep it up?

Well, liverlips...I dont see doodley in this post but an anti-ham rant from some redneck literati wanna be who has no respect at all for government or law.
Where is this pressure? We are actually getting some new bands soon.

As for 10 meters dying...you are even more ridiculously <but typically> fulla doggie turds there. More people on 10 every day...and has been the case for eons. If we just get some of the slimy federal criminal keyclowns off there it would be even better. You obviously dont listen to 10 much, OR look at the increases in participants in 10 meter contests run by various organizations. Typical idiot, thinks ya know something and blather without fact one to support yer retardo opinion.

Now why doncha get back to what you are SUPPOSED to be doing, twithed...your fans eagerly await the rest of your vacation journal...hop to it, or we may pay Fuggly a few bucks to finish the job.

Yes, it's fine to start it AFTER you take your bi-monthly shower. You are welcome.

As I said, Aanal Aaron, you don't have a clue. About my identity (I'm not Steve). About anything (ALL 10 meter radios are "illegal", remember?). But to take the word of a repeater jammer and admitted Federal Criminal (Woodbury M. Parr, KE4ENX) without checking facts shows how frustrated and desperate YOU are.

I'm not "squirming"; I have no reason to squirm. But YOU are squirming frantically! Too bad you're so lazy and stupid that you won't even check directories, but you won't because it would prove you wrong again.

So keep on smearing an innocent person. You don't bother me at all. Like it or not, I'm still not Steve. Just like you're not Aaron.

2020. OT- message from the military

Dear Civilians, We know that the current state of affairs in our great nation have many civilians up in arms and excited to join the military. For those of you who can't join, you can still lend a hand. Here are a few of the areas we would like your assistance with:

1) The next time you see an adult talking during the playing of the National anthem.....kick their ass.

2) When you witness firsthand someone burning the American Flag in protest...kick their ass.

3) Regardless of the rank they held while they served, pay the highest amount of respect to all veterans. If you see anyone doing otherwise, quietly pull them aside and explain how these Veterans fought for the very freedom they bask in every second. Enlighten them on the many sacrifices these Veterans made to make this Nation great. Then hold them down while the Veteran kicks their ass.

4) If you are not in the military, DO NOT pretend that you are. Wearing battle dress uniforms (BDU's), telling others that you used to be "Special Forces," and collecting GI Joe memorabilia might have been okay if you were still seven, but now it will only get your ass kicked.
(Veterans are exempt from this rule)

5) If you witness someone calling an enlisted Marine "Sir," stand back.....a Marine will kick their ass.

6) Next time you come across an Air Force member, do not ask them "Do you fly a jet?" Not everyone in the Air Force is a pilot. Such ignorance deserves an ass kickin (children are exempt).

7) Roseanne Barr's singing of the National Anthem is not a blooper....it was a disgrace and disrespectful. Laugh, and sooner or later your ass will be kicked.

8) Next time Old Glory prances by during a parade, get on your damn feet and pay homage to her by placing your hand over your heart and quietly thank the military member or veteran lucky enough to be carrying her......of course, failure to do either of those will earn you a severe ass kicking.

9) What Jane Fonda did during the Vietnam War makes her the enemy. The proper word to describe her is "traitor." . . . Hate her or else (asses will be kicked).

10) Don't try to discuss politics with a military member or a veteran. We are Americans and we all bleed the same regardless of our party affiliation. Our Chain of Command, to include our Commander in Chief...the President... (for those who didn't know) is all that we acknowledge. We have no inside track on what happens inside those big important buildings where all those "representatives" meet. All we know is that when those civilian representatives screw up the situation, they call upon the military to go straighten it out. The military member might direct you to Oliver North.
(I can see him kicking your ass already.)

11) "Your mama wears combat boots" never made sense to me....stop saying it! If she did, she would most likely kick your ass!

12) Bin Laden and the Taliban are not communists, so stop saying "Let's go kill those Commie's!!!" And stop asking us where he is!!!! Crystal balls are not standard issue in the military. That reminds me ... if you see anyone calling those damn psychic phone numbers; let me know, so I can go kick their ass.

13) Last but not least, whether or not you become a member of the military, support our troops and their families. Every Thanksgiving and Christmas that you enjoy with family and friends please remember that there are, literally, thousands of troops overseas wishing they could be with their families. Thank God for our military and the sacrifices they make every day. Without them, our country would get its ass kicked.

Did you notice that the 10 Meter quote was NOT Twist's words? He

The post was pro-RADIO. I have never been anti-ham. I see both services as meeting a need. Neither are ingrained so as to make such a profound impact on my life...the days USED to be when all boaters depended on eleven meter, one way or another, (in addition to their "marine" radio) even if it was just a walkie-talkie. Now, VHF may even be teetering on obsoletion as far as NEEDS, with a few minor exceptions. No one wants those Loran readings broadcast anymore and I can't much blame them.

Seriously, I doubt commercial interests would want 10 meters much more than 11 meters. Most communications other in VERY sparcely populated areas of the world or very poor have abandoned long-haul hf as a means of communications. 10 meters, like 11, is not open for long haul much of the time (although there is sporadic e propogation at times, it is neither predictable nor reliable). For reliable short range communications, it will suffer if propogation is open to other areas of the world, plus the antennas are fairly large (compared to VHF/UHF). Most of the commercial interests lie at 220 MHz and above.

Some said it wasn't going to happen, but it's happening. Commercial interests are amateur radios largest threat. 220 has been requested by private interests and the FCC is entertaining all input regarding this issue. If you give a damn, you better drop a line...to someone who cares...it doesn't seem like too many are worried about it. It appears many are content to watch this happen and remain apathetic. We deserve the government we get.

On another note...this was sent to me, but I'm not certain why...I guess the person wants it posted but didn' want to post it themself.
It was taken from qrz.com

<snip>

Yes, the ten meter band is dying also. Now that we notice it, its only a matter of time 'till interested parties are aware of it as well.....just like 220. As a matter of fact, 220 isn't the only hammie freq being hungrily eyed by commercial interests.
There will be those raising cane over these losses, but it will be too late.

Well, I'm not a keyclown by any means, but I have to take issue with calling someone a dummy for their assertion that you could have had a "uunet" account. Yes, uunet is a backbone. I should also mention that uunet is now owned by Worldcom. One of my three T1's I recently implemented at work is provided by uunet. At 1.5mbit, a T1 is hardly a backbone. Still, most people (including you I'm sure) don't have a T1 brought out to the house. Many may opt for dialup, which uunet (Worldcom) offers (albeit at kind of a high price nowadays):

He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Well dude, it doesn't look like it. I did get SOME work done to it a couple of days ago - the builder shortened the fender in front of the forks a little, and we changed the radius of the fender around the tire some, near the fork tubes. Kinda hard to explain, I would have to snap a picture. It seems that all of the parts have been purchased, I just need to "encourage" (read: threaten) the bike builder to pick up the pace a little. Shoot, it's getting so bad and busy in that shop, that I have voluntered to work in the shop as an employee - free of charge - after hours and on weekends to help out. He is going to be changing his buisiness model a little bit after the bikes are cleared out: He will only build new custom motorcycles. He doesn't want to do small repairs, handlebar changes, etc any longer. He says there just isn't enough money in it. I just hope that there are enough people here in the valley of the poor with enough cash to purchase custom bikes.

BTW - when and where is Street Vibrations again? I might go anyway just to check out the cool rides (including yours)!

I am getting this CB and it has weather stations on it. Do I need a special antenna to receive weather broadcasts or will my 102" whip or my Wilson Lil Wil do it?
Thanks.

You may be right...I amy just never get on HF...I have a lot more fun and challenge working aurora, psk31, and dxpeditions than anyone can with a box, a wire, and instant comms on a low band. If you are a ham making these comments, which I doubt, you might give it a try.

That is the fallacy of the "no coders are dumb" arguement. Most of us serious sixers understand propogation modes far better than someone parked with a case of beer and a 5kw amp on 75 meters. We have to! So what it is harder...that is how the art and science are advanced. Certainly you wont advance anything getting your barcalounger and your 5K killer warm and your beer cooler empty.

The keyclowns are the same way. They seem to think that no coders should be jealous of them because the violate federal law and talk long range DX. Not at all, at least from where I sit. If you just key the mike and talk whenever ya want, where is the challenge?

It is all what you make it, and most serious VHF DX people make it a hell of a lotta fun. You hear at least 75% general and above calls on 6 and 2 SSB, so don't be so quick to judge something you have not tried.

If you think working 20 meters or some other low band is a challenge, try 6 or 2, ssb or psk31. If you are only 10% as patient and attempt to learn 10% as much as I have about the 2 bands you will be well rewarded. It is a difference in mentality. I just am not interested in a mode of information transfer that is more closely related to chipped out Nordic rune stones than it is to PSK31. Remember, CW is our our ONLY PRESIDENTIALLY APPROVED mode of communication. It was approved by Millard Fillmore.

Having said that, If 20wpm was required tomorrow for VHF, I would be there fast. One person's standard of enjoyment or validity is not always another's.

The only exception to that is in the question "to keyclown or not to keyclown?"
Keyclownism is a violation of federal law, and there is no excuse except accountability for keyclowns not to be hams. 10 meters is next door to 11...so propogation is about the same. You can run 1.5KW...which IS enough...all the bottom line is is that keyclowns do not want to be accountable to the legally constitued authorities. All the rest of their BS arguements are obfuscation of that fact.

Davemade M-80 brand new...what more can i say? its new and works perfect. i would recommend a 20 amp pwr supply to run this. dont put more than 2 watts into it. has a variable pwr control knob on front along with the on/off switch, i'll take 145, that includes shipping or I'll trade for a nice Galaxy DX model mobiles. Sorry, Aanal Aaron, but I'm still not Steve. You can post that crap as much as you want and it still won't make me Steve. But it shows that you are lazy AND stupid enough to believe what a liar and admitted Federal Criminal says.

2053. Re: A GOOD use for a moonraker

I have often found Moonraker 4's at garage sales for as little as $15, got one for $25 with a Ham II rotor and control box one time. So I like using them for things. Despite being a Gamma match fed antenna they are still very nice, the ruggedness helps a good bit.

I once stacked two Moonraker 4 antennas exactly as you have described on 6 M, minus the vertical elements naturally. Currently I have a single Moonraker 4 cut for 6 M, both the vertical and the horizontal side. The vert elements are cut for 52.525 and the horizontal elements are cut for 50.125. The boom length and the element spacing are optimized for the horizontal beam, meaning a slight loss in gain on the vertical side, but not much.

I have another Moonraker 4 doing the same thing but on 10 M, with the vert elements cut for up around 29.600 and horizontals for down around 29.000.

Very nice having both polarities on these two bands.

On 2 M I have both polarities also, but from one set of elements. I use a KLM 20LBX with a central feed through rotor that the boom goes through. This rotor can rotate the plane of the elements, so that the one antenna gives both polarities. Of course, this antenna is really optimized for 144.200, but it does OK on repeaters also...lol

Now, I also have a Moonraker 4 on 11 meters. Just like it was originally designed to be.

I guess my question would be...do any of these applications make me a federal criminal as is suggested by your post?

Hmmm... maybe you'd do better to volunteer your skills to Uncle Sam and see if he'll deputize you? You'd at least get to wear a badge that you could be proud of. It sure would beat the "caped crusader" approach, of which Uncle Sam takes a very dim view, as the Soldier of doug, what will you do when the dx is gone and the cycle is low? we on 11 still have alot of locals to talk to but 6 is no where near as crowded. when the dx dies you'll be left there alone hoping and praying for a temperature inversion or some aurora. i bet this newsgroup will just love you having even that much more time on your hands.

As I remember, these are actually a 100W (60 AM) or thereabouts amp, the model number was not a reflection on the output. If it's in really nice original cosmetic shape, you may find a collector interested in it. It also should be eBay friendly because it really is a "collectible" HF ham amp, not a CB amplifier. More info should be around on the Web, I think I may have an old catalog showing it as well. About 1967-69 vintage?

Well, believe what you like. I never wished ANYTHING on him--he brought his own hardships on himself. All I have ever done is say that this kind of thing was going to become more frequent.
This I know: 1) As long as the CB ops stay below 28 MHZ, they aren't likely to have any trouble-- at least, for now. 2) Licensed spectrum where there are requirements imposed by the government for use WILL be defended against incursion. 3) Those who hold license in various services, and are being interferred with by CBers just simply aren't going to stand by and give up that for which they fulfilled said requirements. 4) There are a lot MORE illegal intruders on the ham bands that will get told on, not necessarily by me. 5) If I DO catch a trucker up on 28.085, he will get the same treatment the other ham gave the guy near Rock Hill. In this case, what makes you think *I told on him? You are assuming something without proof! But I would do it; I listen to 28.085 anytime I am on the interstate.

In this case, the man got caught doing something that, no matter HOW trivial YOU think it is, is against US law. Period. He had to face the consequences which was that his company was not going to pay a fine or stand behind his illegal activity. So, he had to go. This is likely to be the way it will go down in many cases of truckers operating on "channel 19 2-up". Mr Hollingsworth must have been really explicit in laying down the law to Cheetah's Safety Director for it to turn out this way. "Freebanders", if that can be applied to those who operate on KNOWN occupied and licensed spectrum, may yell, obfuscate, spit, sputter, and frantically try to find someone else to blame for their incursions when caught, but the days of impunity are GONE.

As far as I am concerned, between channels 1-40 the operators can burn each others' eyeballs out with big kilowatts--THAT is none of my beeswax, and you don't find me replying to "Amps for Sale" with THAT'S ILLEGAL! THAT'S ILLEGAL! THAT'S ILLEGAL! Now DO you? But 10 meters is an entirely different matter. Sorry, but that driver to whom you express such allegiance and defense of his actions got exactly what he was asking for.

To me, it is the same thing as if I caught Snuffy Smif in my hen house trying to steal my laying hens.

Nothing boring about the FRN. It's been a very useful site since you just sos you know, theres only 1 administrator on the FRN. The owner.

He has a couple of people acting as moderators to keep things in line.

was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired
for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard

What's to speculate on? The use of the area between 28 and 28.300 are reserved by international Treaty for non-phone use. Period. Hams KNOW this because it is on their exams. If you want to find out if there is, indeed, a treaty covering this, look it up. I already tested on it Ask someone
you know who is a ham as well.

See if you can find any "roger beeps" on an Icom, Kenwood, or Yaesu Amateur radio. Listen to any ham frequency from DC to Daylight and see if you hear anybody's radio going SQUEAK!!
BEEEEEEP! The only thing you will find even remotely resembling that are the courtesy tones on VHF/UHF repeaters. Beeps and squeaks appear on CB radios and radios intended for the CB
market (like those "10 Meter" radios like Galaxy, Connex, SuperStar, et al).

Finally, without repeating the vernacular, the dialect often used by CB ops and the 10-code are not used on the ham bands.

So, if it looks like a CBer (trucker), squeaks like a CBer, and TALKS like a CBer, then it must be a CBer.

The info you seek is out there; I don't really have time to bring it to you---I know, go to Radio Shack and browse one of the General Class books.
It is in there!

OK...CB as legally defined is 4 watts AM, 12 Watts SSB. Freq.
allocation of 26.965 to 27.405 mHZ.

How many times you hear a keyclown mention something in that context,

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Now you need a real antenna to go with it. The ducky is good for nothing. CB waves are 36 feet long. You need the equivalent of a 1/4 wave to even put a wave in the air. Go buy a Wilson 1000. No 'lil Wil.

A real mobile radio is always more practical.

For short range use, FRS is much better.

My parents adventure into Ham radio....

About 5 years ago my parents retired and had alot of free time on there hands, As they seemed to have some interest listening to the ham freq's on my scanner, and enjoyed our CB years ago, I sugguested that they might enjoy getting a Ham ticket. They went to the Shack, and picked up the study guides and a CW tapes. With less than a months studing and Code transcibing, they were ready for grabbing general tickets right out of the gate. They decided to attend a local Ham cub function while waiting for the test date to arrive. The next day I stopped by and found that all the studing guides were in the trash along with the tapes? They had decided not to pursue the hobby. When asked why, they just shook their heads and laughed, saying that they had a certian social status in there their click that they rather not trash. hehe, It seems that those ham operators all consisted of overweight ex- navy radio operator GEEKS, and dateless nerds. I couldn't Stop laughing! They were good enough to get that general ticket ,No Problem, But was willing to kiss it all goodbye due to the shock of seeing these people at the dweebfest. This is a true story I kid you not!!!!!!!!!!

Dino, good luck finding a new in box. This item has not been made in several years. I would like to get ahold of a virgin 2000 as well. You might find as new ones on e bay or yahoo just be careful. Also you might try R&R Communications on the web. You could probably find a new Washington easier. I believe that one just stopped being made recently. I have one I have used for ten years and have had no trouble at all with it. I have put in the Lou Franklin bleedover filter and changed a few components in the power supply section with good results.

The Midland 75-822 looks like a good buy. Midland makes good products. The only thing I would look into is the battery packs and what the power output is with them. Normally one needs 8-10 batteries with most walkie talkies on the CB band to get the 4 watts output. If you are using it as a mobile and powering it up with a cig lighter it does not matter.

Good luck.

In this case, the man got caught doing something that, no matter HOW Period. He had to face the consequences which was that his company was not going to pay a fine or stand behind his illegal activity. So, he had to go. This is likely to be the way it will go down in many cases of truckers operating on "channel 19 2-up". Mr Hollingsworth must have been really explicit in laying down the law to Cheetah's Safety Director for it to turn out this way.

The driver definitely had other work related-problems prior to this incident.
Even the company attorney would usually say one violation isn't proper grounds for dismissal, especially one that ISN'T a safety violation or doesn't fall under
"driver safety" according to the trucking company.
I don;t have the time to hunt him down, but if anyone knows this driver or how to get in touch with him, drop me a line.
This driver could use to be steered toward some interesting sites, make certain he is aware of all his options. Maybe have someone fill him in on some things he may or may not already know, some options of which don't look too bad at all.......especially if the truck AND radio belonged to the company. I think the guy has big time recourse...but what do I know? I'm a lowly freebanding cber.

"Freebanders", if that can be applied to those who operate on KNOWN occupied and licensed spectrum, may yell, obfuscate, spit, sputter, and frantically try to find someone else to blame for their incursions when caught, but the days of impunity are GONE.
<

I don't agree with that.....not only is pirate radio alive and well, it thrives.
You wanna talk about getting popped quickly? If I was so inclined, I could probaby key down all over 10 from my truck for the next several years with impunity, but why? There is no one to talk to there, usually, and I have no desire to talk to most of the ones that go there anyway.
10 is buck-assed empty compared to 11.
Now try to actually BROADCAST a pirate station on the commercial band...hmmmm.....gets tricky here....if you are occupying a space that is "empty" or not assigned in your area...you are more than likely safe if your signal isn't covering a huge area. Now broadcast the same content OVER a commercial station in your area and try to cover more than a block or two. Your odds of getting popped just swelled astronomically., to the point of a probability.

As far as I am concerned, between channels 1-40 the operators can burn
each others' eyeballs out with big kilowatts--THAT is none of my beeswax, and you don't find me replying to "Amps for Sale" with THAT'S ILLEGAL! THAT'S ILLEGAL! THAT'S ILLEGAL! Now DO you? But 10 meters is an entirely different matter.
Sorry, but that driver to whom you express such allegiance and defense of his actions got exactly what he was asking for.

It was unfortunate that he lost his job.
Knowing nothing other than "he was talking on our freqs", how can you be certain it was deliberate and the fella KNEW he was on a hammie band unless,,,UNLESS...you had intimate details of the case?
People do need to learn the law, but I feel this guy probably has recourse as far as the firing.

I am familiar with the QSO format used on the amateur bands, and what I heard yesterday afternoon on CB Channels 36-39 USB sounded like a QSO contest. The band was open, and I was hearing canadian stations in my Texas QTH. I heard canadians calling CQ-DX and exchanging 3 digit numbers with their contacts. What were those numbers? They did not sound like a signal report, but rather like some kind of ID number. Are there organized DX contests/clubs on CB? If so, where would one find more information?

Umm.............. Could you come up with something more than your speculative thoughts on this? You know, real facts that support your position.
What's to speculate on? The use of the area between 28 and 28.300 are reserved by international Treaty for non-phone use. Period. Hams KNOW this because it is on their exams.
<

By this statement alone, it reaffirms why hammies should be held to a higher standard
of accountability when they are found deliberately breaking the law, wouldn't you agree, Jerry?

If you want to find out if there is, indeed, a treaty covering this, look it up. I already tested on it Ask someone
you know who is a ham as well.
See if you can find any "roger beeps" on an Icom, Kenwood, or Yaesu Amateur radio.

Is a "k" beep exempt? You have mentioned working the shuttle in the past. Have you scorned NASA for their beeps?

Listen to any ham frequency from DC to Daylight and see if you hear anybody's radio going SQUEAK!!
BEEEEEEP!
<

I have heard this many many times and at times the op isn't even aware it's taking place.

The only thing you will find even remotely resembling that are the courtesy tones on VHF/UHF repeaters. Beeps and squeaks appear on CB radios and radios
intended for the CB

market (like those "10 Meter" radios like Galaxy, Connex, SuperStar, et al).
<

The shuttle uses an export radio?

Finally, without repeating the vernacular, the dialect often used by CB ops and the 10-code are not used on the ham bands.
So, if it looks like a CBer (trucker), squeaks like a CBer, and TALKS
like a CBer, then it must be a CBer.
<

Point taken. I have certainly heard a few of our lesser nocodes on triple 5. It sounds official (call and all), ID's every few minutes (required of hammies) and spews laws on the air like these nocodes, so it must be them.

The info you seek is out there; I don't really have time to bring it to

The radio spectrum is a limited resource, just like air, land, and fresh water. You can abuse any of these resources by polluting them or by interfering with the rights of others to use them; but when you get caught the penalty will be stiff. If you think the punishment is too severe, then what kind of punishment would -you- recommend if someone should squat on your land, piss in your well, or stink up the air you breathe? Do you enjoy breathing the black smoke from a poorly running car? How would you like picking up other people's garbage from your yard every morning? Have you ever had a 'boil order' in your area because the drinking water was contaminated? Ever cut your foot on a broken beer bottle while walking barefoot in the grass? Ever been to a beach or lake where the water was off limits to swimming and fishing because of polluted water? Do you live downwind from a neighbor that never cleans up after their six large dogs? Or are all those things 'insignificant' to you?

The problem is that when people view these otherwise minor violations as 'insignificant' they are committed much more frequently. When they are committed -too- frequently there is a 'collective effect' which can be much more damaging than the sum of the individual violations. In other words, the garbage piles up faster than it can be cleaned up. Now you can't have cops watching everyone every hour of the day. So in order to keep the garbage piles small you need to change the attitudes of the people -- you must make the violation more 'significant' by making the penalty more 'significant'. That's a concept that has worked since the beginnings of civilization.

And just in case you haven't figured this out yet, the punishment for a crime is given with consideration for the public and for the victim, not for the criminal.

An elderly Irishman lay dying in his bed. While suffering the agonies of impending death, he suddenly smelled the aroma of his favorite chocolate chip cookies wafting up the stairs.

He gathered his remaining strength and lifted himself from the bed.

Leaning against the wall, he slowly made his way out of the bedroom, and with even greater effort, gripping the railing with both hands, he crawled down the stairs. With labored breath, he leaned against the door frame, gazing into the kitchen.

Were it not for death's agony, he would have thought himself already in heaven, for there, spread out upon waxed paper on the kitchen table were literally hundreds of his favorite chocolate chip cookies.

Was it heaven? Or was it one final act of heroic love from his devoted Irish wife of sixty years, seeing to it that he left this world a happy man?

Mustering one great final effort, he threw himself toward the table, landing on his knees in a rumpled posture. His parched lips parted, the wondrous taste of the cookie was already in his mouth, seemingly bringing him back to life.

The aged and withered hand trembled on its way to a cookie at the edge of the table, when it was suddenly smacked with a spatula by his wife...

"Screw off," she said, "they're for the funeral."

The damage from pollution is not permanent because it can be cleaned up. You will find out about that soon enough -- they use inmates for road cleanup crews in Texas, don't they?

There are quite a few people that use video cameras to clean up their streets and neighborhoods. Some drive around and spot drunk drivers.
They hit the camera and call the cops. When the cops arrive they have a video tape of the car hitting the curb, running a stop sign, etc.
Other people get sick of drug dealers and prostitutes in their neighborhood. So they cruise around and stick the camera out the window. Lots of these tapes have been used in court.

These people aren't making their efforts because it's a power trip:
it's not. It's usually done out of desperation. It takes hard work, perseverence, and a lot of courage. Some have also found it to be somewhat dangerous. But the intent is to make their corner of the world a little bit better and safer to live in, not to make themselves feel important. But you say that these people should not be proud of what they are accomplishing. Why? Are you one of those drug dealers that got video-taped?

<<that is how the art and science are advanced.
Certainly you wont advance anything getting your barcalounger and your 5K killer warm and your beer cooler empty.>>

Your kidding right? You think your advancing the science of radio? Are you living in the stone age? Here's my attempt at radio advancement......

I'm currently making test flights of a unmanned R/c aircraft. On board the aircraft I have an auto pilot wing leveler, altitude hold unit, a gps receiver, a high power 2.4 ghz audio/video transmitter, Gps video overlay unit, and a TNC. I spilt the data output from the gps into 3 lines. One line goes to a processor and then to the rudder, steering the aircraft to any programed waypoint. The second line goes to a Video overlay board wich projects gps flight info onto the video feed. the third line goes to the tnc and then is broadcast over the transmitters audio channel. Here's how it all works! Using the R/'C controler the plane takes off and then the gps auto pilot is activated. As the plane flys off to some distant preprogramed location, I observe the video feed from the plane at about 3,000 ft altitude. The video is viewed through sony galsstron video monitor glasses, giving me an apparent 6 ft screen to veiw. At the corners of the screen the heads up display shows me ,altitude, speed, and compass heading from the onboard gps reciever and overlay board. The audio from the ground based reciever is fed into the audio input of a laptop, where software extracts the gps data from the audio carrier and displays a "Moving Map" of my area along with the current positon of the aircraft relative to the ground. The glasstron view can be easliy switched between the aircraft view or moving map view. The aircraft can also be flown manually using the video feed and heads up display.

NOW, tell me again how you are advancing radio by talking to people on VHF? Thats sounds like real interesting stuff there partner. Mabye this cber will get a ticket and give it a try after I'm done developing my personal hobby UAV aircraft........

When such a large amount of processed petroleum contaminant enters the

The same can be said with air pollution.
Visit any steel town, former or presently active and anyone can point you to an area where "nothing grows". This is because of the

How is toxic or nuclear waste "cleaned up"?
It is not...it is stored. To date, disposal is not practical nor a reality. The person that figures this out will be quite wealthy.
Tim is right.
Your "tangibles vs. intangibles" argument is old, beat, and doesn't apply to the spectrum you erroneously consider a limited resource.

Dear CB'ers, I'm looking for an antenna for my 2 Cobra 38WXST. Does anyone know if there is an antenna that is not made to be hooked up to a car or leaned agaisnt a house but a mobile one that is better than the rubber duck on now?
I saw at RS one that is about 2 feet tall but it's connector looks too big to be plugged into the handheld Cobras.

Any advice appreciated,

So they cruise around and stick the camera out the window. Lots of these

Your insinuation that such crimes against people (read: direct victims)

"These people" you speak of have nothing in common with your stated

In the case of the self-elevated radio cops, it is frustration.

No, it doesn't. It takes unemployment, probably an inner trauma from childhood, a fractured ego, and probably a divorce to sit around all day long and "hunt" for illegal radio ops and try to sign people up for stuff using their email.

What does this have to with cb? Nothing.

Please do, TW. I am not being smart allecky when I say that. Listen to the bands and when you find someone not IDing every 10 minutes, qrming, using obcenity (that IS actionable, BTW), playing music, by all means, turn him in! One of what may be one of my faults, of which I will freely confess would be only one among many, is that I got my exposure to radio thru USAF and CAP 100-1 Regulations. I get NO joy from foolishness, I will leave the air rather than put up with childish, assinine, or babyish behavior. I admit that I see no thrill in extraneous noises or sounds that contribute nothing to the furtherance of communications. I wouldn't care if you monitored ME because I operate by the book (again, that's the military in me), I ID as required, use only the amount of power necessary (which is usually 100 watts nominal on HF and 25 VHF) to maintain contact. Again, maybe I should not be so strict, but it is simply because of the way I was taught. I just can't get on the air and "play" because it just leaves me with no satisfaction. Now that doesn't mean that I can't get a kick over something that happened over the air like this spoonerism I witnessed one day.

Not long after the Vietnam war (76 or so), I was visiting with an old CAP LT/COL who had a very nice HF SSB station here in town. He had just had his transmitter aligned, and, boy, was it doing a bangup job! Col Joe (I'll call him) had a big 500 watt lightbulb dummyload, and he would periodically remove the antenna and put the dummy load on and, on peaks, the light would nearly blind you. MAN, was he proud. Now, in normal circumstances in both civilian and military comms, profanity was and is not allowed. As we sat listening to a net in Maryland, Col Joe would switch to the lightbulb and say, "HELLO, HEH-LOOOOOOOO!" Then he did the unthinkable;
he forgot to switch to the dummy and, again, said " HEH-LOOOOO, HELLO, HE-----HELL!
I'M ON THE AIR!!!" I just about fell over backwards laughing so hard that my ribs felt like they would crack! Not only that, but everybody from Maine to Florida that happened to be listening heard it, too! And the net control officer in Maryland was snickering as well (it sounded like he caught the gist of what happened. Some of us (Col Joe passed on in '78) still talk about that incident.

Anyhoo, I have digressed. IF you hear anybody misbehaving on the Amateur Bands, you are encouraged to email fccham@fcc.gov and report your findings. You will find that mature hams will welcome the absence of miscreants.

Now, Tim, you don't really know what you are talking about. I use my screwdriver antenna each and every day. Like most of the other builders, the screwdriver is the best and quite highly efficient antenna to come along in years. It provides high "Q" on ANY band from 3-30 MHZ and can even be used on 6 meters. If my product were bad, I wouldn't have them from coast to coast in operation. They are in Georgia, Texas, Mississippi, California, NC, SC, Va, Michigan. I do little advertising other than that website and an occasional blurb on the newsgroups. I don't WANT to work that hard. I have two a-building in the shop; one went to Washington State last week. You're just mad because that driver got slapped for operating out of band.

Umm.............. Could you come up with something more than your speculative thoughts on this? You know, real facts that support your position.
What's to speculate on? The use of the area between 28 and 28.300 are reserved by international Treaty for non-phone use. Period. Hams KNOW this because it is on their exams.
<

By this statement alone, it reaffirms why hammies should be held to a higher standard
of accountability when they are found deliberately breaking the law,
wouldn't you agree, Jerry?

Well, maybe....still debatable, tho. doesn't it say somewhere that CB ops should read the rules governing their service? How many actually do, tho?

e
you know who is a ham as well.
See if you can find any "roger beeps" on an Icom, Kenwood, or Yaesu Amateur radio.

Is a "k" beep exempt? You have mentioned working the shuttle in the past. Have you scorned NASA for their beeps?

hmmmm, I thought that I was hearing _ ._ (Morse for 'k") so I didn't equated it with a roger beep.

EEEEEEP!

I have heard this many many times and at times the op isn't even aware
it's taking place.

The only radios I hear doing that on HF are Motorola Micom IIs. And it can be turned off. However, CAP actually USES it to account for corporate-owned radios.

By the "ding" sound, the assets managers know who is actually using the radios that have been issued out. Personally, I wouldn't use it, and most personally own radios don't use a tone.

ode are not
used on the ham bands.
So, if it looks like a CBer (trucker), squeaks like a CBer, and TALKS
like a CBer, then it must be a CBer.
<

Point taken. I have certainly heard a few of our lesser nocodes on triple 5. It sounds official (call and all), ID's every few minutes (required of hammies) and spews laws on the air like these nocodes, so it must be them.

Turn 'em in!!!! PLEASE? They have no business doing that, and if they think no more of their privileges than that, then they don't need it anyway. Some of 'em just can't be "weaned". LOL!

acation and some R & R.
If fishing ain't your bag, hog hunting is always fun. There are some good hunting areas 'bout an hour or so south of you....

There's more lakes around here than you can shake a stick. My favorite?
Mountain Island Lake.
I'm getting my tackle ready now to spend some lazy days this fall down at the tailrace.

You take such an exception to this that I must wonder if YOU are one of the drivers using 10 Meters illegally. Secondly, I have heard people fuss with Voobner that "WE KNOW THE RISK" and consider their trespassing to be so minor that they aren't going to be bothered anyhow--which is why they make that statement to begin with; they honestly believe that there ARE no conse-quences for their actions. Then when somebody DOES get called to answer for their actions, they scream and try to place the attention on someone else rather than the offender. I don't have one damned thing to explain to anybody. At one time, when I mentioned that enforcement would be returning soon, everybody laughed. They said "FCC ain't got time for CBers". They said, "HA HA, Yeah, right", and "We've got a war on, and FCC's got much better things to do than bother with CBers" "In yer dreams, fella" "FCC don't care about freebanding". Yes, y'all laughed and ridiculed me. Now, when the shoe is on the other foot, and what I said came true, you stopped laughing and started spewing names, crying NO FAIR! "THE CRIME IS NOT IMPORTANT"!
"THE PUNISHMENT IS TOO HARSH FOR SUCH A 'TRIVIAL' THING AS OPERATING ON A 'HAMMIE' FREQUENCY."!!! What you don't seem to grasp is that the line MUST be drawn somewhere. The FCC folks know that if they continue to ignore complaints, then the problem will continue to spread until it impacts even more people--even more radio services. Better to stop it now than to wait until every single truck, every single CB station is running a Kenwood on 6628 KHZ (International Aviation band).

Finally, the simple truth is this: CBers have channels 1-40, and operate even outside that to a point.
The hams have 10 and 12 meters (along with allocated bands in other spectrum); it belongs to them, not CBers. The lower end of 10 meters is allocated to non-voice modes by international Treaty. You can easily find that on the 'net or at Radio Shack--even the library. The hams, the ITU, the International community will not stand by and allow the stealing of the ham bands by unlicensed bandits. That's the bottom line. Get OVER it!!! Most of the people, maybe not all, know that what they are doing is against the law. They proudly brag about knowing the risk and continue to thumb their noses at that law. When one of them gets in trouble over it, it's FUNNY!!

And I will go LOL, or LMAO, or ROTFLMAO~~!! Get over that, too. The solution is simple.
Stay OFF the ham bands without or until you obtain the license. At that point, you will be welcomed with open arms as long as you are willing to obey the rules. Do that simple thing, and there's NO problem. Seems simple and reasonable to me! Keep going into somebody else's pasture and the mean bull will get after you!

Back in the 80s, when CB was at its peak here, I knew someone who had the base section of a basic 1/2 wave antenna mounted on the rear of his van.
When DXing on the hills, he would slide the other sections in.

This one I saw out here was rather different though. The antenna was only small, but the pole took it to the height of the house roof. The connecting cable was losely coiled around the outside of the pole... and was a rather bright red colour.
I still don't know what they were up to or why this location, but the vehicle was plastered with the name of the "corporation" involved.

Regards,

Peter.

Specifically, I have a Cobra 75WX ST.

Thanks in advance.

Hi Bill,

To answer your question, yes. There are organized contests and clubs on the CB. These clubs range from geographically local clubs to the large international "groups." The larger groups operate in the "freeband," thus making it difficult (But not impossible) to be a member and operate legally. They are well funded, host DX activations from remote places, (Like small exotic islands.) and are pretty highly organized. My standard example of the "big two" are:

www.sugardelta.com

www.alfatango.org

I happen to belong to the SSB Network. I happen to like it and there's no need to operate contrary to FCC rules/regs. Of course, some still like to DX on the legal 40 with 12 watts. I personally have no problem with that, but others may take the "In for a penny, in for a pound."
viewpoint. Your mileage may vary, let your conscience be your guide.
They run local nets and I'm more of a ragchewer anyway. Here's the link.

http://www.crbbooks.com/affiliates_2/ssb_network.htm

I believe there's also the American Eagle(s) SSB club. They post recruitment messages on r.r.cb evry now and then too. Whatever your choice, best of luck to you.

My antenna is okay--it's a Firestik 5. But, I do agree with your sentiment. A good antenna (tuned correctly, of course) is by far the best way to improve your transmission.

It was my understanding that peaking a radio could result in 10-30 watts of CLEAN output. I'd rather have 10 watts that way than 100 watts of splatter with an amp (I'm sure those who share the air with me would agree).

jerry, until you guys tell me how your going to clean up the biggest 10 and 12 meter trouble which is the actual pirate dx traffic from south america your just wasting hot air and trying to feel like your doing something to help the world when in reality your worrying about 1% of the total poblem. if you started to worry about the major intruders from down south you'd soon realize again how impotent you really are in this matter.

cb antennas by nature need a ground (meaning a big piece of metal like a car)
to work properly. do a web search for a CB Dipole and build one yourself. you can make a highly effective portable antenna out of a regular piece of coax as long as you cut it to the right lenght and split it accordingly. that will be your best bet but you'll need a swr meter to get it right

Your radio can NOT do 10 to 30 watts of carrier.

An AM signal requires 4 times the power during modulation
then the dead key.

A CB wave is 36 feet long. You need 1/4 wave (electrically or physically) to get out. That is only half the antenna.
The car or ground plane is the other (or return) half.

An Antron 99 is an end feed dipole. This allows the coax shield to become part of the antenna. This will allow your signal to be heard in your neighbor's house.

Pick up a BNC--PL259 adaptor and set a magnet mount on the roof,
the range will improve dramatically.....

LOL---I have heard a few genuinely bizarre uses of ham radio since I got into SWLing, and that's just the QSOs which were on the up-&-up!
The one that stands out most was when I listened in on one Arizona net of grannies who figured out that the 'waves work better for gossip that the phone... this particular on-air gossipfest focused largely on the subject of tortillas.

Not to be outdone, CB had, for many years, these incomprehensible old black guys on Channel 6, who NEVER SHUT UP, even as the war between the Ducks & the CJ's raged around them (this was mid-'80s, post-license era).

Nothing morally wrong with that. Hell, if it was me, I'd photocopy the mod & paste it up on every phone pole in town.

I myself specialized in modding 6m rigs to butt in on cordless phone users (usually to tell them to get a 900 Mhz phone next time)... but alas, most of the old "49s" have gone to that big junkyard in the sky.
Some of the callers were genuinely amused by my technical intrusions... and I actually got one stoned kid to swear off drugs in the process.

You need to read the title of the post AGAIN!

Here's a hint - smart ass!!

Channel 22 - Richmond, VA's Favorite CB-Nigger channel !

It don't imply nor establish the truth that the ones on that Channel are even Niggers!
It is an adjective!
Describes a person, place, and or thing!
It is not written in stone about the person, place or thing EVEN being a nigger -does IT ??!!
NO!!!

The word - "nigger" means one who is IGNORANT!!

The right-wing racists and these other hate groups "tacked" that other meaningless shit onto it!!

Your kind is "Still in Shiloh" - fighting and living the Civil War in your MINDS!
(Just relate that quote to the Charlie Daniels song "Still in Saigon")
That describes your kind and these others who still cryin' bout da Civil War.
Both the Whites and the Blacks -STILL "cryin'" about shit that does not mean a thing in 2002!!
It's a wonder if that kind of society will EVER make it out of the 20th Century!

THE WAR IS OVER!!!!!!!
GET OVER IT !!!

Step into the year 2002 and LIVE!!

Hey, I have a couple of questions about this set up.

1. What kind of GPS video overlay are you using? I have an application I could surely use one of these for, but have been unlucky finding one I like.

2. How much range are you getting out of that 2.4 GHz AV TX?

A comment, you may note that I avoid distinction between CBer and Ham. People are people, some with tickets are dicks, some without them are dicks...that's just the way life goes. But talking to people on VHF is not the only use for VHF (or HF, or UHF, or SHF), by a long shot. By the way, I do something similar to what you are describing (at least the GPS part) to track the location of my car on a moving map, regardless of who is driving it, my daughter hates that feature. But, my link frequency is in the VHF.

I plumb missed this. Would you be so kind so as to point it out? I certainly have seen several voobs get aggravated over this reaction when they rant about the evils of freebanding, but never have I seen incursions/intrusions into the amateur band defended in this forum.

You're right...you don't. And neither does anyone else. It is when such ilk (like the voobs, since you brought him up) ASK US questions and don't like the answers provided when the screaming, crying, and panty-wasting posts are made, and as we know, they are largely originating with nocodes. Like it or not, what you see Dogie doing here is definitely indicative of hammie radio to a newbie that several anti's have professed to (cough) care about! A new cber sitting here reading his bullshit, then sees your gusto for busting anyone who ain't dotting their I's and crossing their Ts, well, damn it all to hell, man. You think a newbie cber will want to advance when there are sharks waiting to pounce on his ass the first time he makes a mistake and forgets to ID on time? Or even worse,,,he slips and returns to what he knows best and says 10-4 on a precious resource known as the spectrum?
You can't really expect ham radio to grow with this image.

>At one time, when I mentioned that enforcement would be returning soon, everybody laughed. They said "FCC ain't got time for CBers". They said, "HA HA, Yeah, right", and "We've got a war on, and FCC's got much better things to do than bother with CBers" "In yer dreams, fella" "FCC don't care about freebanding". Yes, y'all laughed and ridiculed me. Now, when the shoe is on the other foot, and what I said came true, you stopped laughing and started spewing names, crying NO FAIR! "THE CRIME IS NOT IMPORTANT"! "THE PUNISHMENT IS TOO HARSH FOR SUCH A 'TRIVIAL' THING AS OPERATING ON A 'HAMMIE' FREQUENCY."!!! What you don't seem to grasp is that the line MUST be drawn somewhere. <<

Granted. But enforcement directly against cbers hasn't escalated one bit. Enforcement as a whole MAY be focused on for the moment as the hot topic, but you know how the feds are.....escalated enforcement will certainly bring more cbers, but as you see, it brings many more hammies. The cbers are the by-catches, the catches by proxy.....certain fisherman's nets were outlawed some years back...one of the reason was way too much by-catch, the stuff that just happened to get swept up in the nets but wasn't really targeted.

>The FCC folks know that if they continue to ignore complaints, then the problem will continue to spread until it impacts even more people--even more radio services. <<

I am of the persuasion that the FCC is ignoring many aspects of complaints for several reasons, one main being the bogus reports.
Another reason may be to force manufacturers to come up with more reliable electronic devices not prone to such interferences.

>Better to stop it now than to wait until every single truck, every single CB station is running a Kenwood on 6628 KHZ (International Aviation band).

Ahhh....now this gets interesting.....all of the busts so far that included intrusions into public safety bands were hammies, yet you used a cber as an example.

>Finally, the simple truth is this: CBers have channels 1-40, and operate even outside that to a point.
The hams have 10 and 12 meters (along with allocated bands in other spectrum); it belongs to them, not CBers.<<

Well, it doesn't actually belong to them any more than the legal 40 belong to any cber. Permission to operate there is given as a privilege, not a right, yet I agree cbers should not be in hammie bands illegally.

>The lower end of 10 meters is allocated to non-voice modes by international Treaty. You can easily find that on the 'net or at Radio Shack--even the library. The hams, the ITU, the International community will not stand by and allow the stealing of the ham bands by unlicensed bandits.

But they will allow the pilfering of them for a price. Hell, y'all better get busy and start defending 222....

>That's the bottom line. Get OVER it!!! Most of the people, maybe not all, know that what they are doing is against the law. They proudly brag about knowing the risk and continue to thumb their noses at that law. <<

Again, I haven't seen demonstration one of this on this group, pertaining to hammie intrusions.

>When one of them gets in trouble over it, it's FUNNY!!
And I will go LOL, or LMAO, or ROTFLMAO~~!! Get over that, too. The solution is simple.
Stay OFF the ham bands without or until you obtain the license. At that point, you will be welcomed with open arms as long as you are willing to obey the rules. Do that simple thing, and there's NO problem. Seems simple and reasonable to me! Keep going into somebody else's pasture and the mean bull will get after you!

I don't feel it was funny either, but the FCC nor Jerry is responsible for his company's actions.
The FCC and Amateur radio operators are fed up with the BS, the FCC policies are similar to Log book regulations.....they may be old and outdated but nevertheless they exist and need to be adhered to.
Their is no excuse for unauthorized use of amateur frequencies, i'm not saying that 11meter citizens band is totally under control.....to be frank it's chaos.
I for one have been spreading the word about the risks of straying into 10meter territory and my warnings for the most part are not taken seriously.
Well now the industry has a tragic example to look at the repurcussions of such actions.
I'm sympathetic that the driver lost his job over it because i'm a trucker myself but you're right it is no laughing matter.....

Why would this Anal Aaron guy care? Unless he was someone using a false name? The real Woodbury McCrea Parr lives in Cornelia, Georgia, 30531, his wifes P.O. Box is 1551 and he uses that one too, but mainly he uses P.O. Box 193 Mt. Airy 30563 so the FCC won't find his illegal pirate and high powered CB equipment. His Ham callsign is KE4ENX and his home phone number is 706-776-1290, his birthday is July 12th and he was born in 1958. Social Security Number 257-98-XXXX. Don't want to see some lunatic from the Urantia cult get a hold of the whole number and make a mess. but if you keep it up Aaron, I will post it. So Aaron, everytime you post your lies and crap, I'll post the truth about Woodbury McCrea Parr the Famous Radio Bob Pirate and high powered linear CB'er. Tit-for-Tat asshole! That's too bad.

Is it just the Cobra 75WX ST that cannot output more power, or is this true of most/all CBs? If none of them can output significantly more than 4W, then what exactly are the shops who peak them doing (other than collecting money)?

I'm not convinced the Antron 99 lives up to the hype. My 5/8 wave ground plane antenna works pretty darn well. Check out this site:

WHAT are you talking about?

The little will WILL NOT pick it up or it will be worse.

The 102" with the spring will pick it up better because there is NO magnet mount ruining the WX signal (different type of base on antenna will kill WX reception.).

Hi Dave,

Do you have any experience with the Cobra 75WX ST? Is it like another Cobra mobile unit for which there is tweaking documentation? I'm willing to try peaking it myself, if it truly has the head room.

If I do attempt it, I will be sure to take before and after power meter readings, and post them here.

No. If a driver is doing something illegal, no matter HOW trivial it may be considered by some,
the company will do what it must to keep itself from being help liable for a driver's actions. And the driver STOLE the tag off the truck when he left, so his best action is to let that dog sleep.

And it increases quite a bit if you operate on frequencies licensed to others and those others happen to be very much concerned about keeping their territory free from illegal activity, AND those frequencies are NOT for voice to begin with on a worldwide basis--(That's the reason you don't hear anybody talking below 28.300--it is reserved for something else.). What used to be an unlikely occurance (getting caught) is now very likely because the legitimate occupants of those bootlegged frequencies are out watching for those truckers on 10 meters.
With a tape recording,
a tag number, company name, RH WILL warn the company about their drivers operating illegally.

He was doing something against the law and "has recourse as far as the firing". Again, he was dismissed to remove the employer from further actions because of the driver's actions. What do you wanna bet that the Safety Director issued a directive to ALL drivers that, in effect, he'd better not catch any illegal radios in the company's trucks. Hey, it could've been Riley himself that caught the driver--his home town is Rock Hill, SC right where he was seen/heard on 28.085. The way I heard it, the ham was listening on 10 meters, and passed this truck. The driver hailed the ham right dead on 28.085--and it wasn't bleedover, either because, according to that ham, he had his narrow AM filter on as well as attenuation (IC706). He said the driver was clear as a bell. He whipped off at the next exit, and dropped right back down onto the interstate behind the truck (he already had a recording which activated when the driver went "How 'boucha thar in that thar 'Shiv-o-lay'? Yuh got an ole copy SQUEAK!" ---or something to that effect.

TW, the way I see it, there is a very simple solution for the drivers. CBers should spread the word that it is dangerous to one's financial health to be operating on the ham bands without license. I can, tho, understand the previous atmosphere that helped the prevailing attitude to occur. But, still.
what is so hard about this: unlicensed people stay on their own turf, the hams stay on theirs. There then is no problem.

What you have just proven to me is that you have no idea of which you speak.
The best CB ever made, by far, is the Cobra 2000. Sure the Tram and Browning radios are great radios, but the 2000 had a better receiver and solid frequency stability.

Its really undebateable....

Actually Scott, if you don't turn the modulation up a million percent, cut the limiters, run the power to max, it's quite a clean rig.

After people have warned, and warned, and warned that something would happen over the unlawful incursions onto the 10 and 12 Meter band, many made fun, cursed, mocked, and disbelieved. Those who have the most to lose by such actions laughed then, but when the FCC actions came true, suddenly it wasn't funny anymore. Now that it is someone else's turn to laugh, not so much at the misfortunes of one individual but at those who said it would never happen, it isn't funny anymore. I call your attention to Kenneth, the troll who started this thread making fun about the 10 Meter issue. He is mysteriously quiet now. Whassup with that? Seems it isn't funny to him, either since he doesn't seem to want to comment on it. Remember all those threads he started designed to make fun of the "trivial" 10 Meter issue? Where is he now? I think THAT is funny now that he has clammed up!!

Now for the rest of the story. You can expect MORE of those kinds of warnings and "busts" in the future. Go ahead and laugh--like the fellow that kept posting "this is a FAKE". But, sure enough, it came out after I reported it. Where did I get it? Direct from RH himself. I've even noticed more hits against CBers inside the 40 channels as well for amps, etc. Did/Do you actually think that people could just keep on and on and on violating the law, moving farther and farther away from 27 MHZ without something coming of it? Do you REALLY believe that "you" are the only ones who have a "right" to use radio unhindered, and that there aren't OTHER citizens of this nation who have the SAME right? There's more than just me out there getting ticked off over the stealing of frequencies. Once again, the solution is simple: unlicensed persons stay between 1-40 and off the ham bands. If you want to use the ham bands, you have the same option I chose to take advantage of; get the license and be welcomed to all it offers. Get on frequencies that require a license without benefit of same, expect to pay the price.

My parents adventure into Ham radio....

About 5 years ago my parents retired and had alot of free time on there hands, As they seemed to have some interest listening to the ham freq's on my scanner, and enjoyed our CB years ago, I sugguested that they might enjoy getting a Ham ticket. They went to the Shack, and picked up the study guides and a CW tapes. With less than a months studing and Code transcibing, they were ready for grabbing general tickets right out of the gate. They decided to attend a local Ham cub function while waiting for the test date to arrive. The next day I stopped by and found that all the studing guides were in the trash along with the tapes? They had decided not to pursue the hobby. When asked why, they just shook their heads and laughed, saying that they had a certian social status in there their click that they rather not trash. hehe, It seems that those ham operators all consisted of overweight ex- navy radio operator GEEKS, and dateless nerds. I couldn't Stop laughing! They were good enough to get that general ticket ,No Problem, But was willing to kiss it all goodbye due to the shock of seeing these people at the dweebfest. This is a true story I kid you not!!!!!!!!!!

2229. Odd RFI effect on car...

I drive a 2000 Hyundai Elantra (woo-hoo, what a babe mobile, eh? ;)) and I have a Magnum 257 radio in the car. Tonight I was sitting in a parking lot and I keyed the radio on CB channel 28, AM. I heard a clicking sound come from my car when I did it. It turned out, the radio was causing the gear shifter, located between the driver's and passenger side seats, to think that I was stepping on the brake. Once I realized what the clicking noise was, I keyed the radio again, heard the click, and was able to move the level from park to reverse. This is not supposed to happen unless I step on the brake! This could potentially be a very bad thing! The RFI doesn't actually engage the brake. It just makes the gear shifter THINK that it's engaged.

This doesn't happen every time, nor does it happen on every frequency, and I rarely talk on CB channel 28, but it's still very scary. Any thoughts?

(Sigh) Keep believing that. There is a difference in "freebanding" on those supposedly "abandoned" frequencies and operating on an active band--especially one where voice isn't even allowed. If I were to call CQ on upper SSB on 28.085, and were monitored, I would get a warning letter.

You "think" you know. Your thinking is based on those years when FCC DID abandon CB and ham enforcement. And the part you hate is that lots of hams ARE listening for those truckers to show up on 10 meters, and they WILL drop a dime. That is a fact! And the next fact is that, with the requested info (recording, truck name, tag number) Riley WILL warn the company to stop their drivers from operating where they have no damn business. And CBers who want to just take frequencies that aren't theirs to take are going to get surprised. The thing is, the license is SO easy to get these days, and yet some people still cling to some kind of romantic notion of the rebel, the outlaw, the cowboy. It doesn't make sense. All I can do is say wait and see, wait and see. Taking frequencies is not going to stand.

I have an oscilloscope, so I could inspect the waveform. But, I

Of course those superfund sites can never be cleaned up 100%, but the bulk of the pollutants can be removed before nature dissipates them into the surrounding environment. And of course the environment will suffer some damage, but nature has a way of healing itself; so if the damage can be minimized by removing the majority of the garbage then the healing process will begin that much sooner.

This is pretty simple stuff, Timmy: a little residue is certainly better than a big pile of garbage.

And if you don't think that "a guy throwing out a paper cup to be pollution", what about 30 million guys throwing out 30 million paper cups? Like I said before (but you were too stoned to understand -- and that's why it's a bad thing), it all piles up into one giant heap. Where do you think all those little pieces of insignificant waste go after you toss them into the environment? Do you think there is a "pollution fairy" that cleans it all up in the middle of the night? That's the attitude that created those superfund sites in the first place.

Now of course the radio spectrum doesn't have residue. That is, it doesn't have "tangible" residue. What happens, and you have seen this for yourself, is that when a few people demonstrate that you don't go to legal hell for violating these "insignificant" laws then more people will violate them. Then there will be a few more making that same demonstration to even more people. It keeps growing, just like a garbage pile. The 'pollution' escalates until either the band is no longer usable (as is the case with the CB in some areas, but then they just find other bands to 'pollute'), or there is an enforcement crackdown (which I think we both agree isn't going to happen anytime soon). Either way, the residue is the trashing of the radio spectrum. And just like "tangible" residue, it will never get cleaned up 100%, nor in a single day.

But we are back to the fact that the spectrum is a limited resource, because there is a point where you can no longer pack your bags and go somewhere with less 'pollution'. This is especially true with HF where the properties of the band are unique to the entire radio spectrum. If you really do listen to the radio as much as you claim then you have heard pirates and bootleggers all over the HF band at some time or another. And you have heard them more and more often in recent years, too. Assuming that each illegal transmission is caused by only one IO, then each IO may indeed be insignificant when considered individually; but collectively, each IO is making a contribution to a significant pollution problem on HF. The result is that the HF band may become the FCC equivalent of a superfund site.

Also, just to reiterate, RF pollution can and does cause "tangible" damages. I have proven this fact to Twisty many times. But just like every other fact shown to his face he chose to deny the reality of the situation. You can either follow him like a dog on a leash (like you did when he suggested that I was N7VCF) or you can accept the facts. I'm betting you will choose the leash...

You described this happening only with your radio, but are you sure that it can't happen if your car is next to another car with a radio transmitter?

Also, several years ago there were safety problem with commercial radios installed on cars with anti-lock brakes.

I think you should park it until you find out from the manufacturer that your car is safe. Get it in writing just in case they are lying (as some car companies do) and you end up with tangible damages.

A LOT of them are doing very little to collect $$$. SOME are doing a good job getting them up. But they aren't as bad as the Federal Reserve corporation that just prints $$$ out of thin air! MOST CB's can be "peaked up" so they are 40% louder on the modulation, and depending on the unit, put out about 1/2 watt to 2 watts more, and some do more. ALL readings are DEAD KEY watts on a BIRD meter with NO "swing kits" installed. No "modulation kits." Just raw power and natural STOCK modulation WITHOUT "mod kits" which are SCAMS put in by the WORST places in da land! You want to have fun--call around or show that Cobra 75 to CB shops and ask them IF they have a "Mod kit" for it. Most can't even tune it up, or are AFRAID to, let alone rack their brain with the mod. kit question!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

NO it won't make it N8 SPLATTER! Splatter is when I take a rotten egg & throw it @ yo 66 hood, sunny!
Getting the CB to 100% modulation and getting the AM POWER up does NOT make it splatter. Other things do da splatter thing!

I found out something yesterday. I heard a false rumor and went to the source and found out the truth.
ASTATIC is discontinuing base microphones (D104's).

Next year, they are going to come out with NEW BASE Mics "that we hope will hit the market next year," She said.
THIS is REAL newsgroup NEWS that you can USE !
SO if yo want a D104, get one SOON ! I still have old ones left.
I wonder what the new ones will look like! Maybe they will let me see one and I'll report back!

badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

I agree. It's an amazingly ridiculous and nonsensical outburst. As far as I'm concerned, both these guys Steve and Woody are illegal pirate ops/criminals. BTW, you should take a look at their "free radio" wwww.frn.com site. They sponsor ads for something called http://www.terroristsupply.com. I guess they feel some sort of kinship with the guys who took down the World Trade center.

The funny thing Randy is that Keith and I have had numerous e-mails, 99.9% of them had nothing to do with the newsgroup. So George will just arbitrarily send out disinformation just to make himself look good, while I
"asked" Keith if he wanted to see the e-mail.
Well Keith I'm sorry to have involved you in the troll activities of the group, I know you try to avoid this crap.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Oh, it's OK for you (Doug Adair N8WWM) to accuse Tim of being a drug dealer or Randy of being a drug addict, but when I show just a small example of what "you"
were doing for months on this newsgroup, that's not ok.

why don't you accept his challenge?

BTW, that's www.frn.net. And I like their FAQ:

I didn't know that the legality of an act by an individual could be defined merely upon their "views" on the issue. Wow, that changes a lot of things -- it pretty much draws an end to an ordered society!

Although I have been deleting your posts for the past few months I have recently noticed that you have been replying to a lot of mine.
Well, my curiosity got the better of me, and in a moment of generosity
I read one of your posts. But alas, it was only more drivel from the self-proclaimed "professional journalist" that still doesn't know how to end a sentence without a preposition. Bummer. The only redeeming substance was your recognition that I am neither Leland Scott nor Glenn Sparks. Maybe you need a few more months of begging for my attention before you realize that your posts aren't worth the effort to read anymore. Or maybe not. Regardless, I'll hold onto a sliver of hope that someday you will "achieve" your dream and return to your former glory in this newsgroup....

From: joxendi@bellsouth.net (Jerry Oxendine) Hams KNOW this because it is on their exams.
<<
*By this statement alone, it reaffirms why hammies should be held to a higher standard of accountability when they are found deliberately breaking the law, wouldn't you agree, Jerry? *

>Well, maybe....still debatable, tho. doesn't it say somewhere that CB ops should read the rules governing their service? How many actually do, tho? <<

Sure it is debatable. Let us go exactly there. Cb has nothing to do with a hammie violating law. If mere possession of a hammie license is worth its salt, then it just stands to reason a hammie should, and often does, face stiffer penalties than a cber. After all, we look to hammies in times of emergencies, eh? They should take this stuff way more serious than they do. That hammie in California that was jacking off the cops on their own freqs. over and over should have been: (select one)
A) Shot in the head.
B) Tried for treason.
C) Exonerated.
D) Imprisoned forever.
See what I'm getting at here? It is crazy to compare the two services, let alone the violations that occur and try to draw a parallel.

>you know who is a ham as well.
See if you can find any "roger beeps" on an Icom, Kenwood, or Yaesu Amateur radio.
<

*Is a "k" beep exempt? You have mentioned working the shuttle in the past. Have you scorned NASA for their beeps? *

>hmmmm, I thought that I was hearing _ ._
(Morse for 'k") so I didn't equated it with
a roger beep.
EEEEEEP!

Listening to the shuttle, an audible "beep" or "tone" or whatever you wish to call it is clearly heard, indicating the end of their transmission.

I have heard this many many times and at times the op isn't even aware it's taking place.

>The only radios I hear doing that on HF are Motorola Micom IIs. And it can be turned off. However, CAP actually USES it to account for corporate-owned radios.<<

Hmm....maybe it was intentional for whatever reason..

>By the "ding" sound, the assets managers know who is actually using the radios that have been issued out. Personally, I wouldn't use it, and most personally own radios don't use a tone.
ode are not
used on the ham bands.
<<

But is it WRONG or ILLEGAL or just a personal issue/opinion?

>So, if it looks like a CBer (trucker), squeaks like a CBer, and TALKS like a CBer, then it must be a CBer. <<

*Point taken. I have certainly heard a few of our lesser nocodes on triple 5. It sounds official (call and all), ID's every few minutes (required of hammies) and spews laws on the air like these nocodes, so it must be them. *

>Turn 'em in!!!! PLEASE? They have no business doing that, and if they think no more of their privileges than that, then they don't need it anyway. Some of 'em just can't be "weaned". LOL!

Heheehehe! No No NO! It wasn't intended as it was construed....my fault. The ringer is, what amateur would be foolish enough to do this on the freeband? I really didn't think it plausible, but I now have reservations. I am certain a nocode hammie was attempting to jam a freeband freq. a few months ago..he was triangulated.....by cbers......how else you figure it came to light in this group that the van he drives is "beat up", as someone posted.
There are many hammies that break the law, and cbers really don't care about it, except when they are redressed by such hypocrisy.

*If fishing ain't your bag, hog hunting is always fun. There are some good hunting areas 'bout an hour or so south of you.... *

>There's more lakes around here than you can shake a stick. My favorite? Mountain Island Lake.
I'm getting my tackle ready now to spend some lazy days this fall down at the tailrace.

Right on. Mountain Island Lake? Is it accessible only by boat? NC or SC?
Where is it, Jer?

Right off the bat, I don't find these "infractions" all equal, but then again, that is merely my humble opinion. A deliberate act to interfere I can't equate with forgetting to ID on time. As far as obscenity, I have mixed emotions. It often is used as a substitute for intellect and lack of knowledge, a sign of an underachiever when repeatedly used, and no merit, but I don't automatically believe it should be illegal.

>One of what may be one of my faults, of which I will freely confess would be only one among many, is that I got my exposure to radio thru USAF and CAP 100-1 Regulations. I get NO joy from foolishness, I will leave the air rather than put up with childish, assinine, or babyish behavior. I admit that I see no thrill in extraneous noises or sounds that contribute nothing to the furtherance of communications. I wouldn't care if you monitored ME because I operate by the book (again, that's the military in me), I ID as required, use only the amount of power necessary (which is usually 100 watts nominal on HF and 25 VHF) to maintain contact. Again, maybe I should not be so strict, but it is simply because of the way I was taught. I just can't get on the air and "play" because it just leaves me with no satisfaction. Now that doesn't mean that I can't get a kick over something that happened over the air like this spoonerism I witnessed one day.
Not long after the Vietnam war (76 or so), I was visiting with an old CAP LT/COL who had a very nice HF SSB station here in town. He had just had his transmitter aligned, and, boy, was it doing a bangup job! Col Joe (I'll call him) had a big 500 watt lightbulb dummyload, and he would periodically remove the antenna and put the dummy load on and, on peaks, the light would nearly blind you. MAN, was he proud. Now, in normal circumstances in both civilian and military comms, profanity was and is not allowed. As we sat listening to a net in Maryland, Col Joe would switch to the lightbulb and say, "HELLO, HEH-LOOOOOOOO!" Then he did the unthinkable; he forgot to switch to the dummy and, again, said " HEH-LOOOOO, HELLO, HE-----HELL!
I'M ON THE AIR!!!" I just about fell over backwards laughing so hard that my ribs felt like they would crack! Not only that, but everybody from Maine to Florida that happened to be listening heard it, too! And the net control officer in Maryland was snickering as well (it sounded like he caught the gist of what happened. Some of us (Col Joe passed on in '78) still talk about that incident.

Anyhoo, I have digressed. IF you hear anybody misbehaving on the Amateur Bands,

If? Hell, Jerry, you can't tell me that you don't hear hammie infractions on a daily basis if you are at all active. my question is,
Do you report them?

I don't think I will ever have a need for that email, as I certainly am

Not familiar with the case, but are you absolutely certain you are correct in the particulars of this certain case? Maybe he was instructed to take the tag by dispatch. how many times does dispatch f things up and let the drivers take the blame? Always. Dispatch will ALWAYS pass the buck to the driver. They should be required to have driven for X amount of years before working as a dispatcher.

*I don't agree with that.....not only is pirate radio alive and well, it thrives.
You wanna talk about getting popped quickly? If I was so inclined, I could probaby key down all over 10 from my truck for the next several years with impunity, but why? There is no one to talk to there, usually, and I have no desire to talk to most of the ones that go there anyway. 10 is buck-assed empty compared to 11.
Now try to actually BROADCAST a pirate station on the commercial band...hmmmm.....gets tricky here....if you are occupying a space that is "empty" or not assigned in your area...you are more than likely safe if your signal isn't covering a huge area. Now broadcast the same content OVER a commercial station in your area and try to cover more than a block or two. Your odds of getting popped just swelled astronomically., to the point of a probability.*

>And it increases quite a bit if you operate on frequencies licensed to others and those others happen to be very much concerned about keeping their territory free from illegal activity, AND those frequencies are NOT for voice to begin with on a worldwide basis--(That's the reason you don't hear anybody talking below 28.300--it is reserved for something else.). What used to be an unlikely occurance (getting caught) is now very likely because the legitimate occupants of those bootlegged frequencies are out watching for those truckers on 10 meters.

With a tape recording,
a tag number, company name, RH WILL warn the company about their drivers
operating illegally. <<

Really? Is that young whippersnapper Riley actually doing all this on the mere word of a hammie? Riley considers the above proof? It doesn't mean much, Jerry, even if he does practice like you described.....the guy could have been on ANY frequency.

Sorry, but that driver to whom you express such allegiance and defense

It was unfortunate that he lost his job. Knowing nothing other than "he intimate details of the case? People do need to learn the law, but I feel this guy probably has recourse as far as the firing.

He was doing something against the law and "has recourse as far as the firing". Again, he was dismissed to remove the employer from further actions because of the driver's actions. <<

ALL drivers that, in effect, he'd better

Well then, there you go.
It wasn't a blatant out of the dark firing for merely talking out of band, it was for violating a company policy. Youthink they would have given a damn if he didn't get caught?

>Hey, it could've been Riley himself that caught the driver--his home town is Rock Hill, SC right where he was seen/heard on 28.085. <<

That was my first thought, since no other real busts are going down and he doesn't have the manpower,what's that tell you when the man himself is out patrolling for truckers?

> The way I heard it, the ham was listening on 10 meters, and passed this truck. The

TW, the way I see it, there is a very simple solution for the drivers. CBers should spread the word that it is dangerous to one's financial health to be operating on the ham bands without license. <<

It is NOT. According to the ham who WAS there, the driver SAW his HF antenna (a Texas Bug-catcher), and called him on 28.085. Maybe he forgot he was on that frequency and meant to call on 19?? Hey, I don't know; all I have is the account from the guy that turned him in/ You have to remember that there are people who know ONLY about CB and have never heard of Amateur Radio; they think radio was "invented" by CB. So this driver picked up the mike and gave a call figuring that, hey, he's a CBer, too, and I'd like to know where he got that wicked antenna????
I don't know.

But the traps are out there and set. The hams don't care HOW or WHY the truckers are on 10
Meters; they just want them the hell OFF. If they wanna use the ham bands, then they should comply with US law. That is the bottom line. If they do that one little thing, they won't have any trouble. Otherwise, stay on channel 19. BTW, I hear drivers (skip) hailing each other all the time on 28.085. To them, it is their "private" truckers' channel.

Doc,

I can see RF doing strange things to cars. My 706 would turn itself off on 20 Meters. It would turn on the windshield washer, and flash the rear defogger light. Solution? I wound the control cable to the head into a 5 turn coil right behind the radio. Cured it right off. The other gentleman might want to do this with his power cord and the coax right at the rig and install a short ground from the chassis to a metal chassis ground.

My parents adventure into Ham radio....

About 5 years ago my parents retired and had alot of free time on there hands, As they seemed to have some interest listening to the ham freq's on my scanner, and enjoyed our CB years ago, I sugguested that they might enjoy getting a Ham ticket. They went to the Shack, and picked up the study guides and a CW tapes. With less than a months studing and Code transcibing, they were ready for grabbing general tickets right out of the gate. They decided to attend a local Ham cub function while waiting for the test date to arrive. The next day I stopped by and found that all the studing guides were in the trash along with the tapes? They had decided not to pursue the hobby. When asked why, they just shook their heads and laughed, saying that they had a certian social status in there their click that they rather not trash. hehe, It seems that those ham operators all consisted of overweight ex- navy radio operator GEEKS, and dateless nerds. I couldn't Stop laughing! They were good enough to get that general ticket ,No Problem, But was willing to kiss it all goodbye due to the shock of seeing these people at the dweebfest. This is a true story I kid you not!!!!!!!!!!

Nah, don't even bother. His buddy that slapped him silly, 1mangang (who he thinks was me) put such a hurting on Dogie, along with telephone man, that Dogie went berzerk...he changed his name so it don't show under N8WWM....google for 1mangang in this forum and follow the threads where Dogie is losing his mind......where it all began, follow along as he morphs into a self-disgraced disappointment to hammie radio, IF you really care. Don't forget the YNN posts..ah hell, why bother, everyone knows what he's like. The only noise comes from him crying and with that he has managed to alienate even those against any aspect of illegal radio.

Check the DNS in my header and tell me how I could possible be Steve. Of course we know you won't do that, because it would prove you are a class A idiot, wouldn't it Aanal Aaron?

Gotta hand it to you though, Aanal Aaron; you did all the legwork and proved I'm not Steve! Personally, I wouldn't have bothered to do it, but YOU did. And here I thought you were completely useless. ;)

One question concerning the Union dealing with South American radio signals. How?
If you have never been to South America, you may want to consult someone that has traveled extensively there. They can't control ANYTHING (drugs, guns, kidnaping, extortion, political corruptness, etc., etc.) down there, let alone their illegal radio ops. Trust me on this one, they ain't going anywhere.

You know, It seems that there might be another way it went down.....
Perhaps this driver did not know about all the hammie thing, and the laws.....
Perhaps he simply bought a big radio and followed the instruction booklet.....
Or, perhaps he bought it from another trucker?
We have no way of knowing what the driver knew or thought about hailing a car with a big antenna. We DO know that there are a helluva lot of 10 meter radios out there.
We do know that hammies know the law.
We can assume that many owners of those many 10 meter radios do NOT know the law. We live in a dumbed downed world.
Therefore, I think that the punishment is too harsh. It's not like he caused any harm. He did not disrupt any emergincy calls. He simply said howdy to another motorist.
Hell, he was happy that he could raise anyone on his fancy new radio, cause all the road chatter was on 19, but, alas, he sold his old CB to help finance buying the new 10 meter.
To be fired, and face possably other extreme costs. Seems very out of balance.
If one were to want justice, that is.

This is an arguable concept and too general an application to prove or disprove. Your opinion noted.

>so if the damage can be minimized by removing the majority of the garbage <<

Many times the bulk of the "garbage" can't be eliminated.

>then the healing process will begin that much sooner. <<

If you are talking organics, I would tend to agree in some instances, but again, this "healing process" is too broad a term applied across the term and there are a myriad of instances that invalidate this :"healing process".
Hell, go to some test sites some time to see your :"healing process". I guess if it takes an era or so to heal, one can theorize it takes place, but since we wont be around to tell, we don;t know if the flats in Nevada (for but a single example) shall "heal".

>This is pretty simple stuff, Timmy: a little residue is certainly better than a big pile of garbage. <<

Depends on the residue. In many many cases, you are wrong. I would rather have a mountain of biodegradables near me than toxic waste.

>And if you don't think that "a guy throwing out a paper cup to be pollution", what about 30 million guys throwing out 30 million paper cups? <<

Paper is temporary litter.
Completely biodegradable....

>Like I said before (but you were too stoned to understand -- and that's why it's a bad thing),

If it is a bad thing in his case, you are beginning to insult again. Why do you feel this compulsion to insult, Frank?

>it all piles up into one giant heap. Where do you think all those little pieces of insignificant waste go after you toss them into the environment? Do you think there is a "pollution fairy" that cleans it all up in the middle of the night? That's the attitude that created those superfund sites in the first place.
Now of course the radio spectrum doesn't have residue. That is, it doesn't have "tangible" residue. What happens, and you have seen this for yourself, is that when a few people demonstrate that you don't go to legal hell for violating these "insignificant" laws then more people will violate them.

Innuendo, but keep going...and don't bother giving examples because each example can and will be countered. Try to stay on topic, ob.

>Then there will be a few more making that same demonstration to even more people. It keeps growing, just like a garbage pile. The 'pollution' escalates until either the band is no longer usable (as is the case with the CB in some areas, but then they just find other bands

Absolute bullshit and you know it, Frank. Many freebanders have been at it longer than you were alive and have no intention of going to other bands. Besides, I have NEVER EVER found a frequency on eleven meter that was not "usable".....you need to get some better equipment or stop slinging so much happy horse shit.

>to 'pollute'), or there is an enforcement crackdown (which I think we both agree isn't going to happen anytime soon). Either way, the residue is the trashing of the radio spectrum. And just like "tangible" residue, it will never get cleaned up 100%, nor in a single day.
But we are back to the fact that the spectrum is a limited resource, because there is a point where you can no longer pack your bags and go somewhere with less 'pollution'.<<

Work on that last line and contemplate it a while. You may or may not realize you are making no sense. I'll go out on a limb and say this "point" you speak of, has never been reached by the majority of cbers, I feel comfortable saying that most cbers have never experienced "no usability" due to, whatever it is you are imagining.

> This is especially true with HF where the properties of the band are unique to the entire radio spectrum. If you really do listen to the radio as much as you claim then you have heard pirates and bootleggers all over the HF band at some time or another.<<

Ahhh....now we see where your predisposition that they must all be former cbers comes from.....

> And you have heard them more and more often in recent years, too. <<

Because of the current cycle.

>Assuming that each illegal transmission is caused by only one IO, then each IO may indeed be insignificant when considered individually; but collectively, each IO is making a contribution to a significant pollution problem on HF. <<

You call it pollution, we call it great fun.

>The result is that the HF band may become the FCC equivalent of a superfund site. <<

May? You mean it's not already there? And the problem will take care of itself when the cycle slooooowly fades away.

>Also, just to reiterate, RF pollution can and does cause "tangible" damages. I have proven this fact to Twisty many times. <<

You never proved anything to me Frank, except that you lie concurrently. You never had to prove this to me because I never disagreed that high power RF can damage other electronics, but your innuendo that I did is true to your character.

Do a google for that call, and see who brings it up...over and over and over and over. You also said I was some dude in WV, that I was a writer for Pop Comm, that I had mindspring or someother real ISP, that I was a hammie,,,,,gee Frank, you made a lot of blunders here.

What facts? You said RF pirates affect you in your work? I ask how? In fact, I am pretty sure many would be interested in your fact-backing expedition of just how you arrived at this gem of a conclusion.

My parents adventure into Ham radio....

About 5 years ago my parents retired and had alot of free time on there hands, As they seemed to have some interest listening to the ham freq's on my scanner, and enjoyed our CB years ago, I sugguested that they might enjoy getting a Ham ticket. They went to the Shack, and picked up the study guides and a CW tapes. With less than a months studing and Code transcibing, they were ready for grabbing general tickets right out of the gate. They decided to attend a local Ham cub function while waiting for the test date to arrive. The next day I stopped by and found that all the studing guides were in the trash along with the tapes? They had decided not to pursue the hobby. When asked why, they just shook their heads and laughed, saying that they had a certian social status in there their click that they rather not trash. hehe, It seems that those ham operators all consisted of overweight ex- navy radio operator GEEKS, and dateless nerds. I couldn't Stop laughing! They were good enough to get that general ticket ,No Problem, But was willing to kiss it all goodbye due to the shock of seeing these people at the dweebfest. This is a true story I kid you not!!!!!!!!!!

Some people judge others based on outward appearances, race, or the stereotypes they were exposed to by their parents. Others treat people as individuals and pass judgement only after they get to know someone on a personal level. It all depends on the values which your parents instilled in you while you were groing up. You're grandparents obviously did a hell of a job.

Nothing boring about the FRN. It's been a very useful site since you were forced to leave for causing trouble and slandering people. And just sos you know, theres only 1 administrator on the FRN. The owner.
He has a couple of people acting as moderators to keep things in line.
I've lurked in the UseNet groups for years, bobbie-girl.

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a search to prove that. Just search for Radio Bob and/or rbcn1.

Still jamming the ham repeaters in Cornelia, GA?

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired
for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so

I really doubt a transmitter next to my car will affect it. The radio is mounted sideways, next to the shifter, which could account for it having the effect that it does. The radio IS a 30 watt radio, after all.. Also, it didn't happen every time I keyed the microphone, and didn't seem to happen at frequencies far away from channel 38, nor did it happen on sideband.

Think about it. Who profits from the "type acceptance" ? The FCC? The big electronics manufactures?

What benefit do I get from having to buy a radio for every service I'm involved in? CB, FRS, MURS, Ham?

I personally don't see the problem with people using their dual-band HT's for FRS or MURS. Alot of people do it. As long as you keep it in the power and antenna limits, not even the FCC would care.

We have other things to be concerned about.

Except that he was NOT in a ham band, Frank, he was below the CB band.
What happened to your specious arguement about a "limited resource"?
With more and more communications moving into UHF, there's PLENTY of spectrum to go around. And why are you so concerned with someone using a frequency outside the "legal 40" where they won't be interfering with your alleged "legal" comms? Your logic is seriously lacking. You sound more and more like Aanal Aaron, in fact!

No intelligent and informed CBer or FreeBander will go into an amateur band, and the few that do simply don't know any better. Maybe there ought to be stickers on every radio saying, "Stay below 28.0". It wouldn't help those who buy "export CBs" without frequency readouts,

Actually, we all could. In Europe, televisions, xerox copiers, telephones - you name it - have to pass a 'radiated immunity' test. This means the equipment must not vary in any manner when irradiated by rf energy extending from 20 MHz to 1 GHz. What this means is that you could run your radio and not worry about your neighbors' telephone, electronic keyboard, or other equipment from picking up the rf and then claiming it is your radio's fault (much of the rfi problem is caused by rf pickup and audio rectification and amplification of the signal in the device allegedly being interfered with - and it is cause by poor design - actually, CHEAP design - of the equipment and not the transmitter). In actuality, better regulation would result in less problems for all of us. I saw some 14 inch B&W televisions on sale last year at Rite - Aid for $19.99. Made in China. Wanna bet you could fire up a stone cold legal, calibrated, and tested cb next door to that and not have a problem? Just food for thought.

Perhaps, perhaps not. Doc, I worked in an EMC lab. Believe it or not, I totally dusted a 17 inch monitor running only 3 V/M, unmodulated, on about 220 MHz The picture started to tear at 5 V/M and I stopped the test and re-ran at 3 V/m unmodulated (in that case, we had to use smaller tuning tests). The picture started to tear (but not nearly as badly) and I stopped it again. I called another guy over to observe as I was going to mark it a fail. I turned on the 3 V/M at the sensitive frequency and while we both watched, the monitor died. I went to reset its' breaker, but the monitor was DEAD. To put this in perspective, many of us use cell-phones. Low power, battery operated devices. When you use a cell-phone, you are sending about 60 V/M into your head. Twenty times the e-field that killed that monitor! As you know, lawsuits have been filed over brain cancer caused (allegedly) by cell-phones. Maybe the cell-phone industry has hired the lawyers that used to represent tobacco. Ummm ... Personal thought here is that anyone is crazy to use high power in a vehicle once the frequency approaches VHF and above. Whether a legal amateur running a hundred watts on 2 meters, 6 meters, or even 10 meters, quite a bit of power will get into the passenger area of the car (with the exception of a safer arrangement of an antenna in the middle of a metal roof). RF does have cumulative effects on the body (how much is still subject to debate). I won't even get into a keydown event where folks are standing in the middle of heavens knows how many V/M .... certainly, they shouldn't plan on having any more kids after a couple of those events. Guess which are the most sensitive parts of the body after the eyes (as far as rf is concerned)? Also, problems with vehicles and rf have been documented for quite some time now. Since all the computerization of vehicles, few, if any, manufacturers will guarentee anything and the few that will only state their vehicles are NOT designed for rf devices over 5 or 10 watts of rf (fine for cell phone use, but little else).

Point taken. However, with the proliferation of those 10 Meter radios, that kind of thing was bound to happen sooner or later. Over reaction? It isn't my call. All I truly know is what Mr.
Hollingsworth told me about the case. You know, truly in the case of someone who doesn't know
I would be inclined to blame those vendors, CB shops and truck plazas for promoting those radios.
I would be more inclined to go after THEM before the drivers (if it were up to me), and you may be somewhat gratified to know that Flying J and Pilot are scheduled to receive further actions.
Lots of websites active promote the "new" 10 Meter radios as if it was a part of the CB service.
A driver whose primary focus is his job, but has a mildly active interest in his radio, may be easy to convince that CB now has extra channels and more power via those radios,

AND it is a way to get away from all the racket, etc. Those vendors are really the ones who ought to get popped.

Mountain Island Lake is on the Catawba River. On a map, look for Mt.
Holly, NC. You can also find it on google. There are lots of hydro dams on the river. Lakes James, Hickory, Norman,
Mtn. Island, and Wylie are due to dams built by Duke Power. Plenty of fish, etc. Easy to get to by road. Where the Mtn. Island dam is now, there was once a cotton mill by the same name--one of the very first in our county. In 1916, there was a flood caused by a hurricane similar to Isidor in the Gulf (that is predicted to become one). It dropped tons of rain in the mountains around Asheville, and, naturally, the water had to go somewhere. Most of those lakes didn't exist at that time, so the water rose and rose until it was in the 5th floor of the mill (top floor)! The next day, the mill shuddered and succumbed to the massive current. Duke bought the property in 1923 and built the dam along with others in subsequent years that created the other lakes and enabled the floods to be somewhat controlled. Part of the earthen dam is where the mill once stood on the shore of the river. There is also a steam engine and a train of coal cars in the river at Mt. Holly where the Seaboard System tried to hold the trestle down while a crew of men worked below to remove a long jam that was pressing on the bridge supports. The bridge collapsed anyway, and the train is still there today! There is a boey to mark the location, and when the river is low, you can see what looks like scrap metal (it IS!) poking up from the water. I've seen the smoke stack on the engine.

Found my old CB in the basement, a JC Penny "Pinto" 23 channel mobile. I put a new fuse in, wired it up to my jeep wrangler, bought an antenna from Radio Shack and voila! I was back in.

First thing I noticed is nobody uses call signs - or even handles much. Went to the FCC page and saw that they'd given up on call signs. Do old-timers still use their old callsigns?

So I started out on a road trip of about 5 hours and listened along to 19. Couple o bear reports and some chatter about meeting at truck stops etc.

Another odd thing I noticed is that seemingly everywhere I went (in Wisconsin mostly), channels 5 and 6 seemed to be dominated by bozos who thought they were talk show hosts, spewing bad poetry, schizophrenic ramblings and lewd chatter. They weren't even talking to anyone, just locking the key down and blabbing away.

Finally, a strange thing I hadn't heard before was reverb coming from some transmitters. Sometimes short-offset other times almost obscuring the source signal. Is this some sort of add-on to a CB that puts the reverb in? Or is it an electromagnetic effect, like high power signals echoing off hills, clouds n stuff? Or my receiver?

Lastly, for most of my trip, tuned to 19 most of the way, I heard high background noise but little intelligable speech - only around truckstops or cities would I catch major pieces of conversation. Do you think that's normal for cross-country on channel 19? Or is my antenna/rig combo just too lame?

In general, like the Internet (and like this newsgroup) people are much more rude and obnoxious than they were 10 years ago (on the internet) and 30 years ago (on CB). On the other hand, I had a chat with a driver coming up from Chicago about a great place he'd found to eat, and talked for quite a while with a guy who had also just dusted off his old rig and was taking it cross country with him. So it was entertaining too, and served the purpose of making me feel like I wasn't all by myself out there on that long haul (well, long for me).

Thanks for any info you can pass along.

Heh heh - your funny.

Thing about illegal CB Radios like that and most cheap "10 meter" radios - I've got one (I technically I can use it on 10 since I have a license) seem to put out far more harmful RFI then almost any other radio I've ever played with. For instance on my bench the Ranger 2970 I have will put bars across my TV set. Icom 730 sitting right next to it - same antenna doesn't seem to have that problem. No manner of tuning seems to fix the RCI.

On the other hand I was sitting in a parking lot setting off car alarm system while tuning up the 730 on 10. But I've never interfered with "important" car systems.

Ok, but does that makes it legal? Of course not. Any bonehead can
the legal 40 then you are probably operating illegally. If you CAN buy it off the shelf then you might have a case against the proprietor that sold you the radio, especially if he didn't tell you that using it is illegal. So is that what happened, Clyde?

>What happened to your specious arguement about a "limited resource"?
>With more and more communications moving into UHF, there's PLENTY of >spectrum to go around.

Maybe you didn't read that very well, or maybe I didn't state it clearly. Whatever the case, the HF part of the spectrum has unique characteristics that are not consistent with any other part of the spectrum. One of those characteristics is the long range of the ground wave, and another is the excellent skip. (And before you start whining that VHF has skip, yes it does but it's not characteristic of the band.) Also, HF is only 1/10 the size of the VHF band, 1/100 of UHF, etc., making it a very small piece of spectrum in comparison to the whole.

As far as VHF and UHF are concerned, these are used for transmissions with very wide bandwidth, such as TV and FM broadcast, fast digital communications, and satellite links. It is also used much more extensively by many more services, and the spectrum gets eaten up a lot faster. In case you haven't noticed, the FCC auctions off chunks of the spectrum from time to time, and RF space goes for a premium price. That's because of the high demand and the very limited supply.

i.e, the RF spectrum IS a limited resource. Now quit using stupid arguments like that to defend illegal behavior.

You should be less concerned with my logic and concentrate on your's. For example: How do you know that someone using a freq outside the legal 40 won't be interfering with my legal comm? You don't. But we have talked about this type of fallacy before, haven't we, Clyde? Like your assumption that Aaron is a ham when you don't have the slightest clue as to who he is. If you are going to run more than legal power, at least mount the radio to some solid metal (proper grounding). If you don't then the radio itself will radiate (yet another reason why licenses are required for services that use more power than the CB).

Sounds too unpredictable to me. Especially with all the delicate and sensitive electronics they put in new cars these days. I can't begin to count all the cooked computers and dash modules I have seen just because of simple things like loose battery terminals, blown fuses or bad regulators. To use a cliche, "they sure don't make 'em like they used to". I'll stand by my original suggestion.

But you started the outburst with your own you sad-sad-sad-little coward. Also noticed that you didn't deny that it was TRUE that Anal Aaron Boobner is Woodbury Parr! How can you bad-mouth pirates when you have been one for the past 5 or 6 years. Hell you even bragged about it on your last broadcast. Clyde, you crack me up! Are you are so desperate to attack Voobner that you make the association that he is Parr? And then decide that a Usenet harassment campaign against an old enemy is the best way to strike back at Voobner? And to do it from behind another fake account so you won't be recognized as your other anonymous troll identity of "Richard Cranium", now that's a stroke of brilliance! The best part is that Parr is also a pirate and can't do a damn thing about it!

I can hardly wait to see how this will end!!!

If you saw the output of an RCI 2970 on a spectrum analyzer, you'd understand why. That has got to be one of the dirtiest radios, I've ever had on the bench. When running one on CB ch 29, there is a spur that is only about 10 or 15 db down from the main carrier, that falls right on 28.410. Some local hams that happened to run on that frequency thought they were being invaded by bootleggers until we figured out what was going on.

My 220 radio would set certain car alarms off at 25 watts, while a 50 watt 2 meter rig, using the same antenna (a dual bander), did nothing. It's not just power, but the frequency, that makes the difference.

I knew some "high power" CBers who used to drive around town setting off building alarms for fun. They could also affect certain traffic lights. Mess with the traffic light long enough and it would reset to "flash" mode.

Wow, you're lucky. A radio that old, especially exposed to the moisture typically found in basements, tends to degrade the internal capacitors. The crystals inside the radio age as well, and it is likely that you are a bit off frequency on some channels. If you want to stay "into it", I'd strongly suggest buying a new radio. They're really cheap now compared to the good old days. You can get a basic 40 channel for $50 or $60 or so.

Even when they were still required, most "hobby users" abandoned their callsigns for handles. Now, since there hasn't been a license requirement for over 20 years, I doubt if you can find many people who know what callsigns are let alone use one.

That's typical of channel 6. That's generally known as the hangout for people who's power output generally exceed their I.Q., by a factor of 50, and the only thing larger than their amplifiers, are their egos. A typical exchange of "hello, how are you" that would take the normal person about 30 seconds to complete, usually goes on, due to the excessive bantering and grandstanding, for several minutes or more. Bandwidth efficiency would certainly not be a good term to describe the antics on channel 6.

Another IMHO negative trend over the last 20 years is the propensity for many Cbers to gravitate toward certain "toys" that either make noise (beeps, bloops and the like) or distort your voice (Echo, robot etc.). For some reason, the people who run these things, are under the misbegotten impression that they actually sound good. It's true that a small amount of reverb effect, can give a voice more "presence" or "depth". But the vast majority of CBers, who run echo, do not set it properly, and instead succumb to the "Balls to the wall" mentality, and turn the knob to the far right, which guarantees a hard to copy signal.

You could be suffering the effects of a 30 year old radio, that's not a spring chicken anymore. Or you could be witnesing the effect of an event that's commonly refered to as "skip". Skip is when the atmosphere becomes electrically charged and reflects signals back to earth, many hundreds of miles away. When the sheer amount of Cbers, all skipping back and forth across the country, combine together, the results sound very much like noise.

They weren't even talking to anyone, just locking the key down and blabbing away.<<

*That's typical of channel 6. *

I assure you they were talking to someone. Channel 6 has long been a hangout for the RF big boys, the heavy hitters. It has long been a competition freq., with only the biggest getting through. No one really gets upset about channel 6 except hammies. They maybe sometimes feel threatened because of the "power" issue..some don't want ANYONE to be louder or have more power...a perfect example of this would be hammies coming in here denigrating cb and posting their call signs...they feel it somehow elevates them and gives them an imagined "power".

That's generally known as the hangout for people who's power output generally exceed their I.Q., by a factor of 50, and the only thing larger than their amplifiers, are their egos.

Dave and I dont agree on many issues and this happens to be one of them. You will NEVER hear a cuss word on 6. Even rarer will you hear hate and discontent. You, nor Dave, can say that about hammie radio other cb channels.....most will agree it is the uneducated and unhoned disciplines that repeatedly use colorful slang and vulgar terminology as a substitute for intellect,,,,,channel 6 is just about free from this type junk.

> A typical exchange of "hello, how are you" that would take the normal person about 30 seconds to complete, usually goes on, due to the excessive bantering and grandstanding, for several minutes or more.

Excessive? By whose standards? Yours? I am beginning to think your post a troll, as you claim to be a hammie but apparently are not active, else you would be quite familiar with the geritol geezers who talk about their last prostate exam with as much excitement in their droned monologue as they use to describe their grandson's bris all in one key, which takes several long minutes....no way dude, many old-time hammies have channel 6 beat hands down for keydown time in one breath!!!!!

>Bandwidth efficiency would certainly not be a good term to describe the antics on channel 6.

Nope, it certainly wouldn't and it stands to reason also......as bandwidth wasn't given much thought when cb was readily conceived.

C'mon and be honest with yourself.....if it was a "humble opinion" as you keep trying to reiterate but have yet failed to demonstrate, you would have no reason for insult and put downs. You would simply ask your question and restrain yourself from such tripe.

>But the vast majority of CBers, who run echo, do not set it properly, and instead succumb to the "Balls to the wall" mentality, and turn the knob to the far right, which guarantees a hard to copy signal. <<

Not always. I have heard some echo that is total repeat over and over that is clear as a bell. As far as the annoyance factor., that is another subject and not a humble opnion by any stretch of the imagination. The fact remains that many, many clear echos exist.

Lastly, for most of my trip, tuned to 19 most of >the way, I heard high background noise but little intelligable speech - only around truckstops or cities would I catch major pieces of conversation. Do you think that's normal for cross-country on channel 19?<<

We can tell you for certain. Just tell us where your trip was, the routes you took, and where you began and where you ended. See it's easier than you think? Parts of Nebraska, Iowa, etc., are definitely going to be more quiet than say......I-95.

Most people consider their alarm an integral part of their investment, therefore, what you consider important vs. what another considers important is varied mileage.

today while sitting at the office and watching CNN, they had an advertisement featuring battlebots. I got to thinking, what if we had each faction design and build their own battle bots, with a set of rules as to size, ect that is agreed upon by all sides. Then we can meet at a neutral site, and have a battle bot war, with coffee and soft drinks for those of us who do not drink, and for those that do they can BYOB.

Well if you defined married as dateless, I gues you're right. Nerd? I make a nice living as a project manager for one of the largest computer companies outsourcing data services for fortune 500 companies, so you got me on that one too. Geek? I compete in the Southern Kingfish Association offshore fishing tounaments, triathalons, 10Ks etc, so I'm not sure. But since I also do CB, then yeah, I guess I am a Geek too. Was a Ham a long time ago back in the 70's with a novice ticket, but let it expire after I discovered girls like sex just as much as guys do.

I was sure there had to be a few of these still around.

What a great radio, technology and performance wise, it was back then.

This radio, the Stoners and the CPI radios were as close as you could get to a Ham or Commercial grade rig without buying one. These radios were sufficiently different in their design and quality that very few cb shops had the test equipment and knowledge to correctly service them. There's probably only a handful of cb shops around the country that can work on them even today.

To this day each of these brands is still superior, in many regards, to what exists in cb today.

These brands were able to be modified for extra ch's but were nowhere near as easy to convert as today's radios.
I would say that most of the units mentioned were usually converted for extra ch's shortly after purchase so there's a good chance that any unit you find may have it done already. It'll just be a matter of figuring out how and what triggers the conversion.

You're out of line, mistah! Reread the posts again and see who is trying to "force" an agenda. It;s clearly anticb, so take it and if it doesn't apply, do with it what you will. If it didn't apply, you wouldn't have called so much attention to it.

Please remind me of the "pre-conceived biases" that were mentioned by the original poster.
Nobody put a gun to his head, made him listen to channel 6, then come here and comment about it. From what he heard on that channel compared to other channels, he seems to think it was a bit obnoxious.
As far as anti-CB, you are reaching a bit here as well. One channel that rubs him the wrong way doesnt make him anti-anything.
You also were the first to mention anything in this thread about ham operators versus CB'ers. (an issue im sure that had absolutely nothing to do with this thread as well)
I dont know you, therefore i have no hatred or any pre-conceived notions concerning you. Your post could have been far more productive than what it wound up being. As far as rereading posts, i always think twice before acting once. In my profession, i have to do this before hiring, firing, filing reports, and other corporate decisions.

<<< "I assure you they were talking to someone. Channel 6 has long been a hangout for the RF big boys, the heavy hitters. It has long been a competition freq., with only the biggest getting through." >>>

Your comments concerning channel 6 were on the spot. 6 is the Super Bowl of CB. Deviating from the facts to include your opinions of other operators is where you should have left off. Instead of dragging another group of operators into the fray, you should have stuck with informing Brian on the history of Channel 6 (if you know it), seeing how you were so sure someone who had been away from CB for that many years had some sort of "pre-conceived" notion into the workings of a particular group of individuals.
This is some of the reasons why you folks are in a stagnant newsgroup. Like i stated earlier, i dont know you, and refuse to get into a pissing match or dragged down into a childish "he said, she said" dialogue. I welcome replies, but this is my final comment on this subject in this thread. Its Friday, its past noon, im on vaca, time to get outta the house and go for a grip. Peace....

Calling the cbers "bozos" comes to mind immediately. Saying it was a "sea of" whatever line he used is another.
It's a bias. And it was preconceived.

> Nobody put a gun to his head, made him listen to channel 6, then come here and comment about it. <<

May take this small opportunity to gently quote what you wrote to me? Something to the effect of I could have emailed Dave Hall instead. Certainly I could have, as could you have emailed me. Or couldn't you?

>From what he heard on that channel compared to other channels, he seems to think it was a bit obnoxious. <<

No problem there. Everyone is entitled to their opinion, I juts took issue with it.

> As far as anti-CB, you are reaching a bit here as well. One channel that rubs him the wrong way doesnt make him anti-anything. <<

It makes him anti-channel 6. Aren't you both in MN? Why didn;'t you assist him with the area on what frequencies are active instead of worrying about my opinion?

> You also were the first to mention anything in this thread about ham operators versus CB'ers. (an issue im sure that had absolutely nothing to do with this thread as well) <<

Hammies posting anticb sentiments and pretending to be another is anticb. I make no apology if that remark offended the guilty party.

> I dont know you, therefore i have no hatred or any pre-conceived notions concerning you. <<

Again, what the hell does this personal stuff have to do with anything? Why is it always a nocode so hellbent on making it personal with cbers? Like or disliking anyone because of their views is childish, to say the least, and has nothing to do with the topic. A perfect example is the many hammies I disagree with concerning freebanding and the such, but we don't allow such views to dictate how we feel toward another, we can still remain amicable. Why is this simple act of communication so difficult for so many nocodes to attain?
The irony is incredible.

>Your post could have been far more productive than what it wound up being. <<

Thanks for the input.
Since you are now attacking me instead of the issue......there went your credibility in this thread. Whatsamatter, the truth about no cussing and hate and discontent on channel 6 strike a nerve? Many nocodes thaqt frequent this group have a problem handling the truth. I suppose my post could have been more conducive and tailored to your tastes, but your confronting me instead of the issue, coupled with failing to take your own advice concerning emailing another with what you obviously construed as not pertinent to the thread, speaks volumes concerning what is "productive" or not.

>As far as rereading posts, i always think twice before acting once. In my profession, i have to do this before hiring, firing, filing reports, and other corporate decisions. <<

Congrats. Did you think twice before posting advice that you failed to yield yourself?

> Your comments concerning channel 6 were on the spot. 6 is the Super Bowl of CB. Deviating from the facts to include your opinions of other operators is where you should have left off.<<

What do you mean "deviating"? If anyone "deviated" it was the original poster, submitting his personal views by hurling insults, and then you following on his heels to take issue with MY views. A bit hypocritical.

> Instead of dragging another group of operators into the fray, you should have stuck with informing Brian on the history of Channel 6 (if you know it), <<

Because "Brian" is a biased hammie, You appear to know this. Besides, why didn;t you? Why have you still not done it? You'd rather make a personal attack and go against all the advice you just gave for another to follow......

>seeing how you were so sure someone who had been away from CB for that many years had some sort of "pre-conceived" notion into the workings of a particular group of individuals.<<

I wasn't "sure" until now.

> This is some of the reasons why you folks are in a stagnant newsgroup. <<

Well, there ya' have it. It's only stagnant to folks like yourself. There is more wheeling and dealing going on in email than you apparently have a clue.
I mentioned MAYBE putting a new directional up and was inundated with good intentons and places pointed to. You really see this group in a different light than the majority of us.....I am refraining trying to comment on maybe your nocode status is irritating you at this point in time. Since it was you that made the "vs." comment, I merely ask why you feel it so important to place your call in a cb group. I usually avoid asking this of most hammies, but then again, most of them could care less about what we do on 6 and aren't out here defending the slamming of such a peaceful freq. and attacking one on a personal level. That appears to be, for the most part, confined to the nocodes present.

>Like i stated earlier, i dont know you, and refuse to get into a pissing match or dragged down into a childish "he said, she said" dialogue. <<

Save it. If you didnt want a "pissing match" you would never have attacked and become personal when my "opinion" was stated in reaction to another's opinion. In reality, you would have followed your own advice, from emailing (unless you're blocked) me right down to making your post personal.

>I welcome replies, but this is my final comment on this subject in this thread. Its Friday, its past noon, im on vaca, time to get outta the house and go for a grip. Peace....<<

I'm not up to speed on CB, but I do recognize a troll when I see it.

Sadly, you have some sort of axe to grind, and that's obvious. I hope I get a couple more useful responses rather than a flame war progressing down this string of thread.

Channel 6 was obnoxious. I bet I could take any unconcerned listener from any walk of life and flip through the channels, and they would agree with my reaction to hearing it. How could I have a preconception on a phenomenon I've just experienced for the first time? ha.

Oh, just reread this latest spew of yours. You assume I'm a hammie because you have some sort of issues with them. Sorry about your emotional problems, but I've never even seen a Ham radio, let alone used one. Though if "Hammies" are your adversaries, perhaps I should look into becoming one...

I don't know what history you have defending channel 6 or its inhabitants, and I don't care. Citizen's Band, in my opinion, is about point to point communication, not broadcasting, like these "bozos" seem to be doing. If they'd like to broadcast they can get info on setting up an FM transmitter and build one in about two hours. Of course, people actually police the FM spectrum, not Citizens Band. =P

So since you're a troll and contributing nothing except venom you get to have the honor of my first PLONK in this newsgroup. buh bye.

There really is no metal to mount it to. The side of the console is plastic and that's the best place for me to have it mounted.

Here at work, if I key my handheld radio within a couple feet of our

Any "war" was attempted by you calling names based on your single "limited" experience with a cb that you are "not up to speed on. This makes you (your choice)
A) Ignorant at best
B) A troll at worst

Not a whole lotta juice.

Fortunately, you don;t have "any walk of life" to use for any advantage.
Its meaningless.

First time?
Forget what you wrote in your original post? Give a nocode like you a sharp object and sure enough you will hurt yourself with it.

>Oh, just reread this latest spew of yours. You assume I'm a hammie because you have some sort of issues with them. <<

Never had an issue with a hammie,,,not even the nocodes...they all brought their concerns to my doorstep, insisting it become an "issue", much not unlike yourself.
The hammies I correspond with far outnumber the minority pissed off few in here that are only half-a-hammie.

Your fondness for Insults were apparent from your first post.

I have no "adversaries" except a few, like yourself, that I, along with many others, have managed to drive underground due to your uncouth actions and insults that have you too ashamed to post with only one real email addy.

>I don't know what history you have defending channel 6 or its inhabitants, and I don't care. <

Sure you do. You care so much that you jumped right in with the other nocodes with insultive behavior of calling names of something you readily know you know nothing of. Now, it may just be me, but I feel this makes you incredibly ignorant, and a liar as well.

The often heard but misleading "rule" that a sentence should not end with a preposition is transerred from Latin, where it is an accurate description of practice. But english rammar is different from Latin grammar, and the rule does not fit English. In speech, the final preposition is normal and idiomatic, especially in questions: What are we waiting for? Where did she come from? You didn't say which floor you worked on.

In writing, the problem of placing the preposition arises most when a sentence ends with a relative clause in which the relative pronoun (IE: that, whom, which, whomever, whichever, whomsoever) is the object of a preposition. In edited writing, especially more formal writing, when a pronoun other than THAT introduces a final relative clause, the preposition usually, but not always, precedes its object: IE: "Sparky abandoned the project to which he had devoted his whole life", or "I finally telephoned the representative with whom I had been corresponding." If the pronoun is THAT, which cannot be preceded by a preposition, or if the pronoun is omitted, then the preposition MUST occur at the end: "The real radio technician corrected the mistakes in the books that Sparky scribbled in", or "There is the troll we spoke of." Have a good weekend.

They rack and stack a few tv's and neon bulbs. Using the tv's as monitors, they try to blotto as many vhf channels as possible while maintaining a unbelievably high wattmeter reading.

The really good guys can use the subtle color changes in neon bulbs to determine harmonic content of a signal.

I know how the anti-boys can win hands down. Let the keyclowns use their own rf cesspool frequencies, and we use something at 1.2 gigs for our remotes. With all the stupid asses and their illegal amps on 27 mhz, the keyclown bots will be doing handsprings as soon as they are turned on. HEHEHEH! Might even make the morons see it our way.
Doubtful though, as one needs a thought process that has room for a functioning sense of morality if that is to happen.

Yeah, thats right. Never fight on the enemy's terms. If you do you are stupid.

The bottom line is PeePeeHolic is a mouthy sissy ass who wont DARE start anything in the 1st place. The only thing he can do is rent out the rooms under the gay bar when any of you guys visit. So says twithed in his vacation journal.

If BlowParHolic was anyone baaaaad he would not be so effeminate.

Now, twithed...get busy on week 2 of that journal.

Wow! :)
A flamer! WHOO-HOOO!

The dictionary defines "Bitch" as - a female dog! mm'kay? right.

YOU need to understand -
I am 100% AMERICAN MALE!!!
I belong to THE HUMAN RACE!!
so- I am neither race on this earth!
We are all of the Human race!!

So, Words like "Bitch" do not damage my self-esteem, now do they?
Is that your $1,000,000 question?
What Goes around - Comes around!!
The "Term" used by me as being offensive and racial is ONLY Offensive to YOU!!
You choose to BE Offended! Why do you want to get someone else to Offend you.
No one makes YOU offended - You Offend YOU!!!
YOU need to control your OWN self! You do not control others, not even ME!!

A "nigger" will never hurt you.
Why do you want to think about a nigger to even Think of hurting you?
The Dictionary defines "nigger" as an ignorant person.
Hate groups and these right wing bigots and the slave owners adapted that slur towards African-Americans!

And you need to read your Bible from now on!
Read Every Ten Commandment!!
One of them refers to "bearing false witness against thy neighbor" -which you have proven on this newsgroup -while somone was just posting an off the wall topic that used a word out of the dictionary and used as racial and offensive that was ONLY offensive to YOU because YOU Chose to BE Offended!!

Others in this world have used that word X number of times--HOW in the hell are you going to be EVERYWHERE at one time to make sure that word is NOT even spoken? You answer that!!!
Like I told Your ass!!
YOU DO NOT CONTROL OTHERS!!!!!!
YOU ONLY HAVE CONTROL OF YOU!!!
Right now --You don't EVEN have control of YOU!!
Think about it!!!!!!
You have this Fantasy-world where the whole god-damned world is at your command!!
You need to Start thinking of others instead of your own lazy-ass for once in your life!!!

This finger-pointing at someone else for using the word "nigger" is futile!!!! Pointless!!!!
So, Why did you even bother responding - The First God-damned Time to begin with!!!!!!!!!!

you know what -
this conversation is over!

My only bit of advice: Don't base any opinions of CB radio by what you read here. The name for this newsgroup should be rec.radio.bitch.about.illegal.operators.instead.of.talking.about.cb.

Do a little tuning around. Find your "locals". Most reasonably built up areas have at least a small number of "locals" that chit-chat every day/night, although they might be somewhere between channel 23 and 40. Otherwise, channel 19 is find for talking when on a trip. You won't be talking the whole time, but you'll get some good conversations going.

My parents adventure into Ham radio....

About 5 years ago my parents retired and had alot of free time on there hands, As they seemed to have some interest listening to the ham freq's on my scanner, and enjoyed our CB years ago, I sugguested that they might enjoy getting a Ham ticket. They went to the Shack, and picked up the study guides and a CW tapes. With less than a months studing and Code transcibing, they were ready for grabbing general tickets right out of the gate. They decided to attend a local Ham cub function while waiting for the test date to arrive. The next day I stopped by and found that all the studing guides were in the trash along with the tapes? They had decided not to pursue the hobby. When asked why, they just shook their heads and laughed, saying that they had a certian social status in there their click that they rather not trash. hehe, It seems that those ham operators all consisted of overweight ex- navy radio operator GEEKS, and dateless nerds. I couldn't Stop laughing! They were good enough to get that general ticket ,No Problem, But was willing to kiss it all goodbye due to the shock of seeing these people at the dweebfest. This is a true story I kid you not!!!!!!!!!!

No, it's "typical Aanal Aaron logic". As in "all 10-meter radios are illegal" because of a letter from the FCC to the Customs Bureau. Duh!
Not only that, he was proven WRONG. But you keep speaking up in his Good letter. I have found a good group where I live in Central Florida on channel 8. I also find the CB a great tool when traveling the highways. I have gotten some great insight about CBs from some good people in this forum. It is a shame so many as you say complain about the skip shooters. The FCC should have known better when they took this band spectrum away from the hams in the late 50s I believe.

Take it easy,

I'm in Dallas, Texas. Everybody I know stopped worrying about type acceptance a long time ago. It's just another scam to create justification for bureaucratic jobs. People I know in business use the same radio for their business comms, FRS, ham comms, etc.
Screw type acceptance. I wouldn't even give it a second thought.

You are so pathetic Woodbury. You start these stupid fights and then when you get your nose bloody, you threaten with a lawsuit. You do this every time. Let me give you and education in the law silly little man. Once an attorney starts the discovery process, they will drop you like the turd you are. You have slandered, defamed and lied about so many people, no attorney would take your case. You have made this empty threat so many times, its as funny as the little boy who cried "wolf"! Now if you don't want to get your nose bloodied, don't pick the fight. I have so much more to share about you and will if you keep it up. Go back in the closet where you belong. Every time you come out, you get stomped! The EX from Decatur has a very interesting story to tell. Do you want me to post it? Keep it up!

You read the UB Woodbury. Have you learned nothing about those who use lies to hurt other people? You will always lose because you are a liar and fraud and everyone in CB and Pirate radio knows it now. You are just a bitter little man who can only gossip and tell lies about people he doesn't even know, has never spoken to, or even met. How sad is that?

Stay on the Gaston side, and you can still find solitude. And Mtn. Island isn't as developed as Wylie and Norman. Lake Norman, the towns of Mooresville, Cornelius, and Davidson are where you will find the homes of the Nascar drivers. Lots of condos and huge homes out there. Mtn Island had remained relatively undeveloped--at least on the Gaston side. Cross over into Mecklenburg County, like you said, the residential developments are beginning to press up against the lake. Duke Power has a number of boat and fishing access areas on the lake, and they, of course,
don't allow development. My favorite, as I said, is the tailrace just below the Mtn. Island dam.
It is quiet, seems to be a good fishin' hole, and a nice place to spend a nice afternoon castin' a line, and sorting out all the world's problems. LOL! I like to go down there and watch the water when they open the gates. The water rises about 6" and there are furious eddy and whirlpool currents that race away from the dam at high speed, and it is fun to watch. I wouldn't want to fall in, tho;
it would pull you under in a flash.

Provided one uses the allocated power, operates in a dignified manner and does not abuse the frequencies or fellow users, i.e. does not call attention to onesself, who is to know anyway?
I can point to several Volunteer Firemen in the area that use modified ham rigs for their fire freqs. because of the huge difference of cost between a Motorola and a 2-meter rig. These firemen, by and large, purchase their own rigs and operate on a limited budget. Is it legal? No. But again, who is going to be snooping into their personal vehicles to check?
Lets all be honest about this and admit that we Hams do the same thing. If we didn't, why are there so many web sites, including QRZ, that publish "mods"? I bet that there are a whole lot of Hams who have rigs that transmit out of band...such as the itinerant frequencies or the newly available MURS freqs. How many Hams have not at one time or another been tempted to tune to 154.570 and use the PL tone to "mess" with a MacDonald's kiosk or tune to 151.625 and mess with the local Target store?
Our area Baptist church uses 151.625 with no PL. God spare me the temptation.....

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

Ain't that cool? I've still got a working Royce 23 channel mobile. I get alot of compliments on that thing. I love old radios. Still,I like gizmos too, so I run a more modern radio...sorta.

Once in a blue moon, I'll hear an old timer using (sorry to you seasoned citizens out there!) using his call sign. Kinda cool, I think. More and more, I just hear guys using their regular names, not even a handle. Another thing to note is that CB slang is near dead. I've actually gor a book written by Lannie Dills called the "CB Slanguage Language Dictionary". I have the second edition published in like '75 or '76. Now THAT is some entertaining reading. It gives me something to read while on the john. In a way, I kinda wish heavy slang was more the norm. It would make for very colorful conversation.

You're right about 6. I don't care what anybody else in here claims they hear, channel 6 is exactly as you describe. It's too bad really. I just don't listen to it. It makes me angry most of the time. 17 is no better around here. There are more unemployed idiots sitting at home monopolizing the frequency than there are truckers. (Side note: perhaps somebody can explain why they use 17 in this part of California instead of 19). For quite a while now, some numb-nutt has been playing what sounds like music from an ice cream truck 24/7. When he's not doing that, he's doing the CB equivalent of trolling.

Echo is prevalent nowadays. I maintain that a touch of reverb sounds really nice, and wish moderation was more the norm.

Probably skip. It's funny. Nobody uses 19 in this part of California, they use 17. I switched over to 19 today just for kicks and saw 9 s-units worth of static. Wow.

And that's one of the things that makes CB cool. Like this newsgroup (which I think mirrors what I hear on CB - good and bad), there are really cool people out there amongst the idiots. Actually, I think there are more good people than bad on CB. The bad ones are just more talkative. It's the fun and interesting people I meet on CB that keep me using it day in and day out. Driving without one would be dull!

I searched Google and I couldn't find any post by Voobner where he said that "all 10-meter radios are illegal". Why don't you reference the specific post where he said that? Oops, that's right, I asked that once before but you ignored it.

Just a thought, but maybe your lysdexia has something to do with this.

>Not only that, he was proven WRONG.

If you are saying that he was wrong because not "all 10-meter radios are illegal", then the error is not his but yours for misquoting him in the first place.

> But you keep speaking up in his >defense. Hmmmmm. I wonder why.

I don't. You accused me of being Jon Avery; Voobner of being Woodbury Parr; and now you are insinuating that I'm Voober (as if you were the first person to do so). Your wonderment is a product of your ignorance.

Amazing! Even NOW you are denying that your name is Steve, even though I call you Clyde!

But even more amazing is that this whole identity thing is still beyond your mental grasp: If you don't use your real name, then you don't have any reason to complain when people call you by a name that isn't yours. But you DO complain, and with great fervor, when someone suggests that you are Steve Rogovich. Now what -I- find interesting is that you never complained AT ALL when Parr said that you were Steve.
Maybe you can put all this into some sort of logical perspective for us...or maybe not.

Well then if nobody cares what I do then you won't have a problem if I stay. But that can't be right, because you told me to "butt out" and to "take your ball and go home". So you DO care what I do. Now go back and read your post again, and pay special attention to the part where you ask for proof that you don't think. Dwell upon it for a while, and maybe something in your brain will ignite the thinking process.

The REAL question is who you are referring to when you say "we". Have you ever heard of Multiple Personality Disorder?

Ya know what, Clyde? I'm going to do you a favor. Now the headers on a newsgroup post mean absolutely nothing because just about everything can be forged, bounced, redirected, and obfuscated in one way or another. But email is a different story. So send me an email. I don't care what you write, but I'll check the path. If it comes from anywhere other than Rogovich's QTH I'll make an announcement that I

Clyde, your delusions are getting the better of you. I'm not picking a fight, I'm encouraging you to pick one with someone else! And all I'm doing to encourage you is to publically laugh at your stupidity! Jeez, how dumb can you be?

Now let ME give YOU a little lesson in law: For starters, you are a self-proclaimed radio pirate. Now that means you willfully violate federal laws. Doesn't do much for your credibility, especially in Federal Court which is where a case like this will probably be. Next, not only have you publically harassed another pirate, but his family as well. Third, you took it to a new level when you used your illegal pirate radio station to broadcast death threats against Parr. I'm betting that you won't stop there, but you will continue until you lose it completely. That is, unless Parr finds out about all this and slaps a restraining order on your ass before you do something REALLY stupid. Regardless, all your threats and harassment combined with your actions regarding your pirate radio station (with consideration to your ties to whacko militia groups), I really don't think any attorney prosecuting the case would even -remotely- consider throwing it out! So you keep right on posting incriminating evidence and I'll just keep right on laughing at you! ROTFL!!!

I have never seen a ghost although, at one of the houses we lived at when my Son was about 3, there were some strange things happened.

My Son, who had always slept well at the previous house, suddenly had problems. He said that some strange shadow appeared in the room, near the door and was scaring him. His curtains were dark and thick, so there was no light came through them at night.
At that time, I would be up late, working. Often, at about 1am, there was suddenly a strange smell, like someone cooking. Sometimes I would also hear footsteps at the top of the stairs and go up to see if my Son had woke up... but he was always fast asleep.

We found out from the elderly neighbour that a previous occupier, an old lady, used to be up late nights... cooking. We also found out that she had died in the night, and was found... yes, you guessed it... at the top of the stairs, just where I heard footsteps at night.

That house has had a few people in it since we moved out, the latest have moved in this week... I wonder how long they will stay :~)

Regards,

Peter.

It was about March last year that I came on the Internet and shortly after that when I came on this group. I remember the abusive posts that were being sent at that time.

They are not setting a good example or giving a good impression of Amateur radio. They give Amateur radio a bad name.

On the UK groups, there have been people posting technical questions to the CB group because they say that they get no help from the Amateur groups... just abuse and insults. They find the CBers more friendly and helpful.

I get the impression that some Amateurs come on to the CB group just to disrupt it... their hate for CBers has taken over their life. They probably have no time left for Amateur radio, with the time they spend just trying to wreck CBers enjoyment.

Only one or two of the Amateurs on here are just here to disrupt. It's just that the one or two have a big mouth, so make much noise.
For those few, it is not really about "legal vs illegal"... it is probably just the old "Ham vs CB" crap. They still don't get it, the two are not in competition.

Regards,

Peter.

Now as promised. Our boy Aaron/Woody left his wife in Decatur Georgia a few years back, and the Ex has some revealing facts to share about Woody. Seems our boy Woody is prone to having nervous breakdowns and suffers from all sorts of mental maladies and disorders. (big surprise huh?) (I'll detail these disorders in future posts if Aaron/Woody insists on continuing his posts here) One of the complaints of the Ex was his constant masturbation when "he could have had me a real woman. Me!" his ex wife said, "but he'd sit in that radio room and jerk off to muscle man magazines". The ex also had problems with Woody/Aaron telling the truth. Just like he does here, he told many lies to the ex wife. Theres a lot more to this story, but it does provide insight for the reader about the numerous mental problems that Aaron/Woody is suffering from, which by the way HE IS BEING MEDICATED FOR, and his problem with telling lies. I'll bet if you big tough Keyclown Busters send him a picture of your muscles, he'll decorate it in his own personal style. I'll tell more from the Ex after he makes his next post and eggs it on. Everyone in Decatur, Georgia is talking about it. Just ask Annie Reed who bought Aaron/Woodys house and found all kinds of "boy & muscle" magazines in Aaron/Woodys old house in Decatur at 3032 Santa Monica Drive. Guess we know where he got the nickname "woody". From watching WCW and WWE

Hey asshole, you can't sue someone for telling people the truth about

Have it your way. So when you hide behind the name Richard Cranium I'll refer to you as Clyde #1, and when you make threats as your other anonymous identity of wmparr30563@yahoo.com (RadioBob/Radio8) I'll refer to as Clyde #2. When the CB wars were raging back in '85, there were a lot of "CJs" and "Ducks" in SoCal, especially on Channels 7, 11, and 25, but then they all seemed to have faded away by '87... surely a lot of them became hams, but not all. I can still remember hearing the voices of 179, Speedy, KEL, and when he was in town, the Mad Russian... I wonder what happened to most of these characters. Their big issue (which carried over to 2m jam sessions on '435) seemed to be the creation of a kind of nationwide Jim-crow segregation for straights and gays... pretty bizarre. Apparently these guys were all hardcore homophobes.

Channel 6 was a case unto itself... there were dozens of these incomprehensible old black guys who would yackety-yack for days on end, often to no one in particular. Maybe most of these guys croaked?

Why would anyone WANT to "mess" with anybody? That has eluded me since I

First time poster. Dumb question. (It figures, right?)

Finally had to replace my poor old Uniden Grant, it took a severe beating for a number of years.

Just bought a Galaxy 99V. Can't figure out how to get to 27 Mhz, (everything on the frequency counter is 28 Mhz.) Is it possible to get it down to 27 Mhz, or should I box it up and take it back?

Thanks in advance.

If it's worth anything to you (and it should be), that radio is illegal to use on CB frequencies. Box it up and take it back.

If you dig Galaxy's, pick up a DX959. You should be able to score on for 180 bucks, and it is a legal radio (type accepted) for use on CB. It works every bit as good as a 99V.

I'm not going to preach to you about legal/vs illegal stuff. Just know that you can score a nice radio, and be legal at the same time. Have Fun!

Then there was a ham that pulled into a parking lot to talk to another buddy. Unfortunately, he was in close proximity to an ATM machine. He set off the silent alarm. No problem in the end, but there were a few tense moments when the police pulled up ... ;)

The old Grant had some "work" done to it and I really liked it. I bought the 99V looking for a "big radio" sound..you know...slight reverb and deep bass sound. Don't really care for "roger-beeps" and all that stuff, just wanted a "big radio."

> I'm not going to preach to you about legal/vs illegal stuff.

Thanks. I tend to run "slightly" more wattage than I should, but almost always practice proper etiquette. Don't want to be too illegal in my operation, though.

Thanks for the quick response.

Given that a CB transmitter output impedance is 50 ohms, that we use
50 ohm coax, and that mobile antennas are rarely anywhere near 50 ohms (and the impedance varies depending on the way it is installed), typically how much improvement would one see by using an impedance matching network at the base of a mobile antenna?

I don't care what you think, Frank. Do YOU really think I was born yesterday? You may have been, but I wasn't. Every post I make has a Posting Host in the header, and they're all the same. Look at it and tell me I'm Steve. Even Georgie-girl doesn't believe I'm Steve. Only Aanal Aaron does. So, you're Aaron? You know what? You're starting to make fatal slips, Frank.

A "favor"? I don't think so. Just use the tools you already have and you'll plainly see that I cannot be Steve. And my name is not Clyde, either. From here on you can address me by name (Mr. Cranium, to you) or I will ignore your pathetic attempts at trolling, Frank.

They certainly do. You'd think they'd be "elmering" CBers into amateur radio, but all they are accomplishing is driving them away.

You are quite perceptive. Doug, George, Frank and the others are doing exactly that, and think "they are winning" when all they are being is complete dolts.

Again, you got it right on the barrelhead. They still cannot get over the fact that 11 meters was taken away from the hams, because it wasn't being used for anything, and turned into the Citizen's Radio Service. There is no competition; the two services are meant for completely different purposes. Worse yet, Doug and Aaron are allegedly "no-code" techs and cannot use HF for anything (legally). George claims to be an "extra" but spends most of his time lurking in this CB newsgroup, so he can't be very active on any hamband. Frank isn't even a licensed amateur (he "claims" to be a "legal" CBer), yet he goes out of his way to put down CBers at every opportunity. You have to wonder why.

Even the name "anti-key clowns" sez they're nothing but no-code hams. If it were otherwise, they'd have to be "key clowns", yes? They're just losers; nobody wants to talk to them on the ham bands, so they hang out here. I really feel sorry for them.

alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired
for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the Well keep in mind that maximum power transfer can only be obtained when the resistance of the load is equal to the resistance of the source, so i would be inclined to say that you have a lot to gain by using Impedance matching techniques.

Technically speaking the standing wave ratio is directly related to the impedance of the network by saying that when the swr is lowest the impedance will also match most closely and vice-versa.
It makes sense that you could not have a low swr if you had a severe impedance mismatch.
I think i understand what i'm trying to tell you but i'm probably just as confused as you are by now because i'm attempting to make sense of what you're trying to read.

Check this out:

www.cet.com/~yeti/cb11.htm

BTW, a few CB antennas are right on 50 ohms because they were built with resistors to open up the antenna's bandwidth. I have even torn apart one helical and found it was made with NiChrome wire. Of course that doesn't do much for efficiency, but the manufacturers know that most CBers only check SWR, not field strength.

Does anyone here really understand the need and reason behind type acceptance?

Many people stand to profit from type acceptance. Mostly the general public.

Here's a brief synopsis of why type acceptance is valuable.

When a transceiver is designed, there is a specific use and band(s) in mind. To operate in this/these bands the unit must pass certain engineering rules. Not the least of which is minimizing the amount of harmonics and other spurious eminating from the unit. To accomplish this, a careful selection of mixing circuits, frequencies and filtering are employed in the design.

Most often the design that works in one band or group of bands does not prevent harmful garbage from leaving the unit when the unit is operated on frequencies for which it was not designed. It may have a good rcvr and power on the out-of-band freq but now the filtering and other design imperfections are allowing harmonics and spurious to leave the radio.

Should the spurious and/or harmonics end up on or near public safety or aircraft frequencies there could be a problem. If the garbage shows up on say a paging or mobile data channel it causes a certain amount of inconvenieince.

It's very difficult to predict which freqs can or should be used for mixing processes to minimize problems both inside the radio and externally.

So, by sticking to type accepted radios and the designed operating parameters we all stand to gain.

AND, for the "ham" who likes to "mess" with people like McDonalds, Police, etc, he does NOT speak for - nor represent the majority of us. I take exception to being classified in the same category. I value my Amateur as well as Commercial Licenses for the effort put forth to achieve them as well as to uphold them. It is a pity some others DON'T. It's people like that - who screw things up for the rest of us. THAT is what brings regulations in.

People still use call sighns but mostly to call out to someone who might be nearby. Ch 6 and 11 are where the guys with large liniers hang out and many times they are in another state.
People are more rude but also have more fun. The reverb is either in the mike or the radio. Allot of people use too much.
The high backround noise I believe is a combination of 2 things. The Sun has been VERY active lately amd there are a LOT of cb's. At night time the noise dies down.

Ham equipment is NOT subject to type acceptance (other than a specific case for 10 meter HF amps).

They don't meet the rules, that's why.

It is NOT only power. FRS does not allow external antenna connection (i.e. FRS requires the antenna be integrated into the type accepted unit). Every HT I've seen allows external antennas to be substituted for the "rubber duck" HT antenna.

So do I, that's why I leave such things to the FCC.

Give the cbers a chance, they will screw up FRS and MURS just like they did the cb band.

IC,
It would depend on how 'bad' the match was without the matching device. Or more accurately, how much "j" (reactance) the match has without the matching device. The difference can be quite suprising, but I can't put a number value on it. As a 'S.W.A.G.', I'd guess any thing between 1 or 2% to as much as 50% increase in power to the antenna (I think the 50% might be a bit high, but still possible).
'Doc

PS - Impedance matching isn't that difficult for most antennas, don't know why someone doesn't make a matching device like you talk about.

Mad Dog,
I have to disagree with you. You can have a low indicated SWR and still have a terrible match between feed line and the antenna. It just depends on where you measure the SWR. If measured at the transmitter end of the feed line, the meter's reading may not be accurate ('magic' lengths of coax such as 18 feet??). If the load is indeed the same as the feed line and transmitter output, then the length of the feed line will make no difference. But, the load's impedance/reactances can combine with the reactances present in the feed line to show a good SWR at the transmitter end of the feed line when the match and transfer between antenna and feed line isn't good at all. That's what happens when people adjust the length of feed line to make the meter read a good SWR. The transmitter 'sees' this 'good' SWR and puts out full power with out 'cutting back'. That power isn't transfered to the antenna though, because of the mismatch that's present between feed line and antenna.

This is pretty old news, but it was kinda interesting to re-read. Of particulat note was

""Some are doing it because they don't like what they hear on 11 meters," he said. Hollingsworth says a few amateurs believe they can maliciously interfere with CB and freebanders and not get caught.

In one recent case, Hollingsworth cited "monitoring information before the Commission" alleging that one West Coast ham may have deliberately interfered with other operators by transmitting sound effects as well as using non-FCC-certificated gear or illegal amplifiers.

But whether or not the other stations are operating outside the law is immaterial, Hollingsworth says. "It doesn't matter why they're on there," he says. Hollingsworth points out that the 11-meter Citizens Band is allocated into 40 specific channels, each requiring the use of relatively low-power FCC-certificated equipment. Ham gear may not be used on CB under normal circumstances."

I can't say that I understand, because my ISP outsources their news to supernews. I have no daily limits that I am aware of (and I'm a downloading fool, let me tell you). I do have my news transfers limited to 2 simultanious connections to the news server, at a pithy 15kbyte/sec. Still, I feel your pain.

I looked around for ya. Check this out:
http://www.1usenet.com/service.htm

The most you could possibly pay is $17.95 a month for 1.5GB per day. That oughta hold 'ya. The cheapest plan is $3.95 a month for 100MB per day. No simultanious connection restrictions, no bandwidth throttle. Hell, I might even sign up myself.

Galaxy 99V
Channel Expansion
1) Open up your radio.
2) Find the small circuit board on the left of the radio.
3) Cut the green wire and tape it off.
4) There is an unplugged connector by this board....plug it in.
5) That's it.!You now have 8 bands of 40 channels.25.165-28.755.

Yeti,

Thanks for the link. The link to cb14.htm (the one referenced as a combination RF signal generator and impedance bridge) does not seem to work (at least not for me). However, the page with the L-pad tuning instructions (cb13.htm) seems like a simple enough procedure to try.

I am using an L-pad similar to the one on your site to match a 1/2 wave straight wire antenna to my household AM radio (the wire is over 300 feet long, run down the side of a hill, using wood stakes to hold it off the ground). I haven't finished the hookup yet, but it should be the best AM radio antenna I've tried.

As far as the procedure on cb13.htm goes, am I correct that you basically tune for the perceived loudest noise floor? This seems pretty subjective. Do you think using a stationary field strength meter a few meters from the antenna while transmitting just a carrier might be a better way to check for the sweet spot on the L-pad?

By the way, I'm pretty sure my mobile CB antenna is not near 50 ohms. It is a 5/8 wave whip, 5 foot long continuous loading configuration, with a fiberglass core and the wire wrapped around he outside. There are no other components, except a screw tip for resonance tuning.

Thanks again.

There was a "fake" one that used a cybernet board.
The "PB010" was not the "original", it was the Mark 2. The Mark 1 had a "PC879" board in it, with a loop crystal for each band.

> Lastly, does anyone have one of these radios that is still working?

There were quite a few of the "010", "042" and "PC879" radios came over to the UK. Some of them got seriously butchered by "rig doctors", but they still keep on kicking.
They are all liked over here and have been sold for some very high prices... considering how cheap a new (unbutchered) radio can be obtained. There will certainly still be some in use.

Peter.

Hi Kieth.

Have you ever seen the UK BBC program, Robot Wars?
There are some awesome robots on that program. They have had a few international competitions, with teams from all over the world... even Australia. The Brits just keep giving the world a spanking.

A while back, there was a report on the radio about some autonomous battling robots that could "suck the energy out of each other". No remote controls needed, just put them in an arena together and let them get on with it.

One of them managed to escape, and was found in the car park... looking to pick a fight.
Professor Sharky (seriously, not taking the p*ss, Mark... honestly) said that it could have made it to the motorway. We can only imagine what could have happened.

Regards,

Peter.

That is a blatant assumption and you cannot support it with any reasonable arguement. CBers are quite happy on (and near) 11 meters;
there's no skip to shoot on FRS or MURS, the range is simply too limited, and so are the radios.

Hey, Twistedhed... where have I heard that saying before?

Oh yes, I remember, someone else likes to use that line as "proof" that their BS is true... when they know that they have nothing else, just their overactive imagination.
Good thing that the legal system does not work that way... the moment you say "not guilty", that proves you are... lmao.

They try that favourite line in the hope that it can convince people that the impossible really did happen. They have watched too many James Bond movies, where the criminal makes all kinds of unbelievable, elaborate plots to kill "007". Why don't they just shoot him and be done with it... too simple?

Want to buy a car... one that can do a 400+ mile round journey (including travelling through at least two major cities) in a couple of hours?
Quite a fast car I must have here. But I must have managed it, because AA said so and I have said that I didn't... which is "protesting too much".
Maybe he thinks that I have one of those cars like James Bond... changes into a boat, submarine, 'plane... whatever it takes to get there fast.

Peter.

Actually, no.
We wanted to move to a different part of town and also needed a bigger place, with the birth of our daughter.

There were other strange things that happened and we found out that the previous residents had problems... but the day that I am "run out of town" by a little old lady will be a sad day indeed.

Hi.

Yes, for a real idea of harmonic content, a spectrum analyser is needed.
The problem is cost, they are not cheap. To spend that much money on a piece of test gear, you would want to be using it often... not just personal use.

It would take a large amount of harmonic content before you could see it on the 'scope. Your neighbours would be able to detect lower levels than your eyes on a standard 'scope.

> How do the CB shops do it?

I am not sure about in your country, although I suspect it will be as it is here...
Most will not bother, they look at power meter readings only. Looking at the cost of a repair, the profit will not pay for too much test equipment.

There are other ways, or ways to build your own analyser... but it has to be more than a "one-off" to make it worth the effort. Somewhere, in all the bumf laying about this place, I have a design for a spectrum analyser.
I have also seen spectrum analyser "add-ons" for oscilloscopes... giving the capabilities to your standard oscilloscope. Don't know if they are still available, but they were even cheaper than a 'scope.

I see that someone has pointed you to the "CBTricks" site... why not join the group, there are some good techs on there... and you can always get help and advice.

Peter.

Doc is right on this one. Coax length can be used as an impedance transformer (such as phasing two verticals - say on the mirror mounts of an 18-wheeler). SWR does NOT affect what goes out the antenna (unless, as Doc pointed out, the transmitter cuts back to protect itself). The reflected power from the antenna simply gets re-reflected at the rig back to the antenna. The many reflections result in the 'standing waves'. There are antennas which are not tuned (you don't find many of these on CB) and have very high SWRs (perhaps over 10 to 1 SWR), yet can be very effective. Of course, at this point, you need to have some kind of a matching system at the transmitter. Years ago (in the vacuum tube days), amateur transmitters had a built in matching system (which you HAD to use even into a 50 ohm dummy load). Those pi-networks would tune just about anything; however, on todays rigs (amateur or cb), you need 50 ohms (at least be fairly close to 50 ohms) or a seperate antenna tuner. Otherwise, as Doc mentions, the rig simply cuts back to protect itself. At that point, ya ain't gettin' out.

For Sale

Have a few drawers full of crystals for CBs. Most are plug in, some are solder in. Some may be new, some may be used. Can test for proper function and frequency of the crystal prior to shipping to make sure a dud isn't being shipped, but I can NOT match any crystal to your particular brand or model as some crystals need to be. Thus, I can NOT guarantee your placing it in the circuit, it will work. Thus, ALL are sold AS IS - not returnable.

IF you have a need for any, let me know directly, I'll see what I can find. Chances are at the posting of this ad, most frequencies available. Payment by money orders only and shipping is extra. Feel free to check in Radio newsgroups or my E-Bay profiles for my dealings.

You need to get ones with an antenna socket and a power socket, and maybe an external speaker socket on them (IF possible). Forget even mentioniong crystal units. I sold some crystals recently, but only Rip Van Winkle uses them today! A great older unit to get is a Maxon 27LP, IF you can find one. I talked to a guy that got some good ones for under $50 recently. Ratio Shack wanted $90. You have questions? They GOT yo money!

The old BROS didn't "croak." Kinda makes me remember me listening to them in '72. There WERE the funniest thing on the CB to listen too!

As far as them Californy Anti-Sodomite files as you call them--dey was in da land of da fruits & nuts and was just trying to get da faggots away from dem, so when da brimstone falls, dey won't get hit too!

Also jogs my mind for the best times we had on CB, other than in '72. In '83 a bunch of high school kids were on, as well as us old people. These kids did e bonics being honkeys before we news dare was any ebonics in da first place! I wish I would of taped 1 night then! I would sell it for thousands now!

Just wait, the cbers will be using modded radios with "leaners" and other splatter boxes on the FRS and MURS frequencies. To them it will be just other bands they can get on and make a sewer pit

It's 100% legal for hams to mod type-accepted radios so that they can operate outside the ham bands. It's not only legal but is encouraged and supported by none other than the U.S. military. To wit MARS and the CAP. Also, I believe, to get on the inter-service 5mHz Alaska Emergency freq.

Dave,

I have to second you on the Maxon 27LP walkies. I bought a pair new years ago, and have been buying them up on ebay over the past year or so. They run on 8 AA alkalines or 10 AA NiCad's / MiMh's. They have a bnc connector, a charging jack, and a power jack. They have a 1w/4w power selector, and the channel display dims out when the squelch is closed. These are very durable and the batteries last a long time.

Its all in the binary groups that determine the download limit,we all know that you could never use a lot just doin msg work,but once you get into binaries and mp3 groups etc,they wanna make money off of your wants.you may have end of month whatever on google...but if you check the binary groups and see if all mp3 etc files are all complete,then you will see what I mean.giganews does not suck cause I have been workin it for 5 years now on slow old dial up and now dsl.I use the 11.95 a month plan that gets me 6 gb,thats 10 cds of mp3 files a month.I often run out of that limit and start over again in 20 days or so..there you have it...

Well, Mr. Dave,

How about those people that the rules PROTECT from interference and provide punishment for those who ignore the law? You are forgetting that it's a 2-way street. If I came down onto the CB band and wiped out every CBer within a mile with a million watts (shudder-the thought even scares me), then as a ham, wouldn't I deserve to be punished for making it so that the CB ops couldn't talk? That HAS happened, you know. Leonard Martin, a former ham, got busted for operating on 11 meters with his ham rig, lost his license for messing with the CBers (??) or freebanding, etc. and got a fine. So, again, tell me how that fits your obsession with communism?

The oscillator/IB page is going to be edited later in favor of a better oscillator. If you want a really easy-to-build impedance bridge, go to http://bama.sbc.edu and get the manuals for the Heathkit AM-1 Antenna Meter and the Knight Z-Bridge. You can't get much simpler than that.

Why hold it off the ground? For MF and below you might be suprised that it won't make much difference at all whether it's laying on the ground or not. It might even work better! I think the resistance of the wire is probably the biggest factor to consider for your application. In fact, a resonant half-wave can work worse than a shorter non-resonant antenna because of the resistance.

>As far as the procedure on cb13.htm goes, am I correct that you

You can do it that way, too. But considering that your "sweet spot" is where the antenna is most efficient, tuning for the loudest noise is just like using your radio as an audible field strenth meter. It's the same difference.

>By the way, I'm pretty sure my mobile CB antenna is not near 50 ohms.

Then you are going to have fun picking component values for your matching unit. And don't expect much bandwidth -- you might not even be able to cover the full 40. But that's the price of resonance.

If you put any kinda power over 10 watts into that Valor Dial A Match it will melt, been there. I would suggest sticking with the whips and step up to a triple magnetic mount base and don't use a spring. If you need to add length for match use a solid shaft. It wont let go. A warning. If it snows where you live be sure to remove the snow and ice before you drive. I lost one on the interstate with 3-4 inches of ice...just lifted off like the space shuttle....bye bye!

2588. Engine noise and wiring question

I recently installed a Uniden 520XL CB in my 98 Jeep Wrangler. I use a Wilson 5' whip attached to my bumper. SWR is 1.8. The radio is static free when the ignition is off, but when I start the truck I get a loud constant whine and static. My power lead is connected to the cigarette lighter for now.

I've read on usenet that the best way to get rid of this problem is to wire the radio directly to the battery (with a fuse in both the ground and power wires), with 10 gauge wire.

My question is: When I look at the power wire coming out of the back of the Uniden, it's braided wire, but thinner than 10 gauge. Should I cut off the cigarette lighter plug I soldered on to the end, and mate this thinner wire with two 10 gauge wires that I ran from the battery? Should I solder the two wires together?

I have also heard that adding a capacitor across the + and - will help eliminate this noise (which I assume is from the alternator). Will the above method of attaching it directly to the battery (maybe adding a switch too), work just as well or better?

Get it off that cigarette lighter power lead, that's a notoriously noisy source of power. Do wire your CB's + lead directly to the battery and the CB's - lead to the nearest clean (paint-free) chassis ground connection. Once that is done, then we'll see how it turns out and go from there.

Kwthom,
If you're satisfied with the antenna's performance,
why not change it's 'shape' just a little bit and see if it changes the 'howl' to something you can live with?
Use tape, rubber-bands, whatever to attach a straw to the back of the antenna (or a couple of them). That should change the 'tone' of the 'howl'. A flag on the bottom part of the antenna should change things too...

Engine noise isno exact science. First you must make sure you have a good antenna ground to make sure noise is not entering through the antenna. Second you might try running directly to battery. I have not heard about adding a fuse to the negative side of the power cable. Using thicker cable is good ... less resistance. You might try an alternator filter from Gold Line or even a noise filter from Radio Shack. I know that sometimes the shack sells item of lower quality but I recently read an article by Gordon West in Pop Com and he says that he uses a shack filter with good results.

Good luck,

Ben

Well how can that be if Clyde #1 is in Rochester, NY and Clyde #2 is "almost 700 miles away" in Norfolk, VA? Last time I checked the two towns were only 400 miles apart! It doesn't really matter though, because the bottom line is that someone is trying desperately to hide their real identity.

What I find interesting is how he... er, THEY think that someone should take THEIR word as the truth and NOT take the word of a disgruntled associate (Parr). Historically, defectors and traitors are two of the most reliable sources of information about an enemy. So, without a simple email from Cranium to help clear up this paradox, I will have to lean towards the theory that Cranium/Clyde #1 is actually Steve Rogovich.

Dave or Debby,

Have you forgotten all about Jesus Christ? Have you forgotten why he died on the cross? Has it slipped your mind that we no longer practice ritual sacrifice or executions to stay a wrathful God? That was the whole point of Jesus's sacrifice. He sacrificed his life for the sins of the rest of us. In case you haven't figured it out by now, After Jesus sacrificed his life the rules changed. There is a drastic difference between God's law prior to Jesus walking the earth and God's law after Jesus's sacrifice.

Why would anyone WANT to "mess" with anybody? That has eluded me since I was in high school; it doesn't make sense. Mature, sensible people don't GET any jollies out of that. The behaviour, language, and lewd references I have heard both on the newsgroups AND on-air (and, yes, I'm talking about HAMS!) leaves me totally baffled and wondering how supposedly "grown" people can be that infantile, childish, AND stupid. It really is a shame, you know, a real shame.....
Jerry<<

I dunno either. Hammies can't take all the blame here. Sheriff Bob in has attracted, like a moth to a flame, both cbers and hammies to triple 5. Some still DX, some simply tune into the fray to join in, some simply sandbag. Some can talk to Bob on a regular basis with no animosity whatsoever. I've talked to Bob many times with no problem and he has been as polite as can be.....he has expressed his extreme displeasure with southerners and often invokes the stereotype of the southern cracker redneck (which in my case, happens to be true), but I haven't had a problem with Bob since he came onto the scene.....its all in the approach. Hell, Bob has even given me a radio check....he just doesn't seem to cater to people coming out and telling him what he should or shouldn't be doing and even though I don;t agree with all he says, he is dead on when he takes on the hypocrites that key up and tell him they are reporting him to the FCC. I gave up on the band a few months after I realized Bob wasn't going anywhere...since then I have returned and come to realize that Bob isn't a factor unless one lets him become one. A directional is a must these days for the serious DXer.

lake, and they, of course, don't allow development. My favorite, as I said, is the tailrace just

It is quiet, seems to be a good fishin' hole, and a nice place to spend a nice afternoon castin' a line,

No, Frank, it doesn't. People like you need to learn to separate acts from speech. This is one of your dilemmas, you base you personal feelings and emotions on what someone says and let that dictate your behavior and control how you act.

Now that's a hilariously ironic statement, Frank attempting to "clue" someone in to something he never had.

Twist:

Um.. I'm not really sure where this came from, but I'm neither a nocode nor trying to cause trouble. The facts are the facts with regard to HAM radio. If you do the callsign lookup, you'll see I'm an Extra, not a nocode.

As for CB, I still feel the same way I did two years ago about it. It's a great hobby, do what you want to do with it; just please stay out of the 10M and 12M bands if you're not licensed to operate there.

Run power, at your own risk, doesn't bother me a bit. I could really care less, as long as the bands I'm licensed for (and me while I'm on them) are left alone.

I haven't misquoted anything, BTW... The quoted portion and the original posting are identical.. anyone with half a brain can tell that.

So are you trying to cause trouble with me? I don't really want to go there. I've respected your opinions and advice in the past, and I really don't want to taint that respect. How about a little reciprocity?

You want to put that to a wager? Arizona, much to the chagrin of the feds, along with Santa Cruz, Cal. have voted to decriminalize the demon-seed weed. If you have ever been to Santa Cruz, you would understand. It's hard to find a business there that isn;'t pro-pot, and this includes the professionals.
The republican-manufactured war on drugs was a way to increase the feds cashflow...the mandatory minimums and prison terms were after-thoughts with *little" or almost NO thought put into them. This is shown by the fact that over 80 percent of incarcerations in the US are due to non-violent drug offenders..the baddies are on the street.
Clinton was bashed for his "morality:,,well, we now have an admitted boozing coke-snorter as president, with a niece who is a crack/coke fiend, a son of the first family who is probably a full blown alcoholic by now. Watch how they suddenly begin to recognoze addiction as a disease and no longer use the terms "scourge" and "morals" when referring to drug use.
Always takes one of their own before they can see the light.
Hey Geo, if you can pull away from that thing long enough, read the book
"Smoke and Mirrors" by Dan Baum, (Former reporter for the Wall Street Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, DanBaum@aol.com) who interviewed more than 175 influential people for the book, including John Ehrlichman. When the Clinton administration took over, they were horrified at some of the things they found from Ronnie's days...IE:
choreographed battles in the street where drug policy dictated each move..how the feds introduced crack to the inner ghettos of LA, and how they set up and kept in business for years the fall guy now known as "Freeway Rick".....Ollie North's acts that would have put away the common man forever.....deliberate lies to the public right out of Reagan's mouth concerning drugs and policy.....covert operations did not exist, at least from the president.....they were ALL authorized.

I realize all this, but I also know that the old @HOME customers NEVER, EVER had to pay a EXTRA CENT for thier usenet newsgroups. and they didn't have ANY LIMITS placed on downloading of Binary Newsgroups! So, Why does COMCRAP have to do this, it's just another attempt by MR. COMCRAP to nickle and dime the customer to death, people are gonna eventually realize this, and COMCRAP will go down like the rest of the old ISP's what have attempted this... It will take a while, but it'll happen...

and FWIW... The anti-keyclowns (AKA Doug and friends) had nothing to do with this... I simply exceeded my alloted bandwidth usage for the First, I didn't "disappear". I drive a truck. I'm home rarely, but when I get home, I like to see how things are going. Is that so wrong?

Second, if you didn't write that, I guess I made a big oops. Perhaps if your newsreader properly quoted quotes, making it easier to see who wrote what, mistakes like that wouldn't happen.

Also, isn't it general practice to quote below, and put the newest info (yours) at the top of the post on usenet, or has that convention changed.

Twist, I really don't know where this is coming from.. I'm the same SSB I was 2 years ago, but now I have a ticket. I still enjoy my CB just as much as I did then.. So what's the big deal?

Methinks you're looking for enemies where your friends are, and that's not a good thing.

2629. PTT - What is the Electrical Theory behind PTT?

I have a CB interface on my intercom system and it has an 8pin DIN plug. I don't quite understand the thing.

I am told the pinout is:
1 - main gnd
2 - squelch level (to the CB)
3 - audio in (from the CB audio output)
4 - PTT
5 - audio out (to a CB MIC input)
6 - accessory (don't know - no AC or DC on this line)
7 - unused
8 - gnd (don't know - because it is isolated from gnd when I tested it on my multimeter)

I tried pin putting audio from my CB into pin 1 & 3 and sure enough I heard it over the intercom. Yes!

However, I can't seem to get any audio out of the intercom. Maybe it's because the PTT line needs energized somehow before audio comes out? That makes the most sense, but does PTT mean apply a ground, a high, or is it the negative side to the audio out?

What electrical theory is behind PTT?

Many years ago, I went to a practice search and rescue exercise with CAP. I drove up alone because I had to work that Friday, therefore I arrived in the

I needed to find the airport, so, without thinking too much about it, I pulled off into the lot of the flourescent lights (all 2 of them) under the shelter (over the pumps) to Chassis ground, power supply ground, RF ground and coax shield ground are not necessarily the same. Chances are that, in this case, one is chassis and one is power supply ground.

"accessory" could either be a power supply pin or a signal line. Test for DC to both grounds. Or, you might be able to tell by looking at the wire: if it's shielded then it's probably a signal line, like for a tape recorder or something. And if it's a power line then it might be fused.

Most PTTs are either floating or positive, and need to be grounded to transmit. I think the problem is probably with the ground, and you need to determine which one is power supply ground. That's assuming, of course, there is nothing wrong with the electronics ;-)

You could try going to the Free Radio Network site (www.frn.net) where Steve hangs out and write to the head guy (john@frn.net) and mention that you'd appreciate it if he could help curtail Steve's usenet trolling activities a bit. Include an example of the threats to Parr he's posted recently.

I didn't understand the 700 mile figure either. When Steve is posting under Parr's name (I guess) he's inferring that he's in Georgia. The distance from Georgia to VA is even less than that of Rochester to VA. No matter, Steve is probably busy broadcasting more threats against Woody via his pirate station.

Meanwhile, what's with Twistedhed? He's lashing out at anything that moves. He's acting more like a sourball than his usual happy-go-lucky, Opie-with-a-fishin-pole, anarchy-talkin' self. Your curiosity is amusing.
Disinfomation is your specialty. I didn't "pick a fight with Chris". He misattributed one of YOUR sad ramblings (or maybe it was Geo's) to me. I corrected him, much as I do to you on a regular basis.
Don't worry, I remember no one ever soliciting your opinion, and FWIW, you have no clue if I bootleg, NOR if I thumb my nose at the FCC. You wouldn't know respect if it was handed to you, because you were never taught how to give it, so your serious afflictions are not all your fault, your parent must shoulder some of the blame.

I think the fuel pump issue may be the problem.
I removed the whip from my antenna and the noise went away. I also ran the power directly from the CB to the battery, as opposed to using the cigarette lighter, and this didn't help.

Has anyone ever added a capacitor to the wire that powers the fuel pump? What color is this wire in a 98 TJ, and where exactly is the fuel pump located?

Thanks everyone for the help.

Hey Geo, if you can pull away from that thing long enough, read the book "Smoke and Mirrors" by Dan Baum, (Former reporter for the Wall Street Journal and the Atlanta Constitution, DanBaum@aol.com) who interviewed more than 175 influential people for the book, including John Ehrlichman. Ah, no it does not for the most part. (IF) it does then you have other problems. The main one being antenna currents flowing on the outside of the coax. When you find that the SWR changes, when you move the cable around, or clamp a ferrite ring core over the cable at the antenna end, that's a hint of a problem.

The impedance changes along the length of a coax cable and repeats every 1/2 wavelength. Thus any cable system can be analyzed by figuring out how many integer sections of cable you have at a 1/2 wavelength plus the odd fraction left over if any. The odd fraction of cable will be responsible for the impedance transformation. For example:

Let:

Z_antenna = 35 - j * 25 ohms
Z_line = 50 + j * 0 ohms (Line is lossless)
Pi = 3.1415926...

Lambda = cable length in wavelengths
Z_feed = impedance seen by radio at feed end of coax line
Refl = reflection coefficient
VSWR = Voltage Standing Wave Ratio on coax line

Equations used :

$$Z_{feed} = Z_{line} * \frac{Z_{antenna} + j * Z_{line} * \tan(2 * Pi * Lambda)}{Z_{line} + j * Z_{antenna} * \tan(2 * Pi * Lambda)}$$

$$Refl = \frac{Z_{antenna} - Z_{line}}{Z_{antenna} + Z_{line}}$$

$$VSWR = \frac{1 + |Refl|}{1 - |Refl|}$$

The above formulas you can find in almost any antenna and transmission line text book if you wish to double check them.

Now we can do some sample calculations:

Lambda Z_feed Refl
VSWR

0.05 27.579-j*12.927 -0.254-j*0.209 1.981
0.10 25.258-j*1.114 -0.328-j*0.02 1.981
0.15 26.813+j*10.654 -0.277+j*0.177 1.981
0.20 33.059+j*22.712 -0.12+j*0.306 1.981
0.25 47.297+j*33.784 0.083+j*0.318 1.981
0.30 74.32+j*34.835 0.254+j*0.209 1.981
0.35 98.786+j*4.357 0.328+j*0.02 1.981
0.40 80.526-j*31.997 0.277-j*0.177 1.981
0.45 51.384-j*35.295 0.12-j*0.306 1.981
0.50 35-j*25 -0.083-j*0.318

Further calculations will show that Z_feed is that same for Lambda = 0.05 is the same as that for Lambda = 0.55, 1.05, 1.55, 2.05, etc.

The point to look at is the VSWR calculated figure does NOT change with feed line length!!!! Like I said before if it does then you have other problems that need fixing first. I have run into the changing SWR reading crap myself, but it was always due to unbalanced currents flowing on the line, i.e. antenna currents from an in completely decoupled antenna.

> If measured at the transmitter end of the feed line, the meter's > reading may not be accurate ('magic' lengths of coax such as > 18 feet??).

True if you're looking for the antenna's feed point impedance.

> If the load is indeed the same as the feed line > and transmitter output, then the length of the feed line will > make no difference. But, the load's impedance/reactances can > combine with the reactances present in the feed line to show > a good SWR at the transmitter end of the feed line when the > all.

What really happens is the power reflected by the antenna gets dissipated on its way back to the transmitter end of the line. Thus the reflected power compared to the forward power looks good, i.e. a reasonable SWR. However do the same thing at the antenna end results in a lower foward power reading due to line losses, and you get the FULL value of the reflected power as well. Now you see lower forward power, and higher reflected power, i.e. a crapy SWR.

For this to make much difference on 11m you either have to have a VERY bad, i.e. lossy, coax cable, or a "very long run" of cable. For VHF, and even more so for UHF, that "very long run" of cable may only need be 50 to 100 feet of 9913 or LMR-400.

For example the losses for several cable types at different frequencies are:

LMR-400 Belden 9913 RG-58

30MHz 0.7 0.8 2.5

The above figures are in db loss per 100 feet.

I have Comcast as well. I don't know if you remember or not, or if Comcast even explained it to everyone, but they don't operate the news server we use. Comcast had to contract out for their news server while the old @home service had their own news server to the best of my knowledge. I have to assume the limits on the dowloads are a result of contract limits imposed by the company running the server, and may have been needed to keep Comcast's costs down so that they could offer a "complete" Internet package. Keep in mind that when @home went down the tubes the folks at Comcast had to scramble like mad to come up with an alternate service that they could do in-house without leaving their customers hanging with no service like some of the other companies did.

Tell you what, Jack: Prove me wrong. You DO put down CBers every chance you get. After all, "all" CBers are criminals (as Dave Hall said). So they're all illegal, and you cannot prove it. In fact, you "claim" to be legal. Can you even prove that, Jack?

Yes. He IS Voobner, in case you hadn't figured it out. That's why he's still trying to create trouble when things had quieted down some.
Notice how Georgie Busch (and even Doggie Adairierre) isn't posting much? Frank is still trying to keep it going.

Why? There's no reason for linears on 462 MHz; there's no skip. Just another of your unsubstantiated assumptions. You have proven yourself

If the fuel pump is noisy, I would be checking the body and frame ground straps out for corrosion.

I also would be checking the antenna mount. Most antenna cables don't want to be electrically grounded to the body, the are a signal ground and should go to the radio. Is the coax isolated or is it touching ground?

Probably. I haven't heard it on the radio, so that must be one pathetic transmitter.

to recall that Twist promotes pirate radio stations, you think that those two are butt-buddies?

Take it from a ham who licked the alternator-whine problem in a '70
Plymouth... what you need is a filtering electrolytic cap, the bigger the better, 2200mfd at the very least. 4700mfd is good. Just wire it between the + and - going into the radio, like you're shorting the leads with it... just remember to watch that polarity when you install it, and choose a cap rated for at least 25V to prevent any unpleasant surge-current surprises.

If THIS doesn't work, you need to build a pi-section noise filter, which is more heavy duty... for this, install 2 'lytic caps in parallel across your leads, and a 1000-1500 microhenry choke in series between the + leads of each cap. The caps will flatten out much of the ripple & noise in the DC, and the choke helps to keep the current more steady for about 5 current-peaks at a time. Short of a semiconductor-based regulator, this will probably be as good as you can get. I hope this solves your noise problem.

You know what my call is right? And I know your not the amazing kreskin so evidently it get's posted. Now so what is your call? Un Intentionaly speaking with someone and not knowing there location is one thing to reply to or put out a call for skipland is knowingly breaking trying to break the laws no matter how you want to twist it. Planting your dial on 27.555 and making contacts is Illegal as per the FCC, I would call that willful intent, knowingly calling cq dx which illegal op's are doing is soliciting people who are in the distance. Sorry, ground wave doesn't travel 155 miles

I don't remember the exact details, but I know that Ford has an inline filter for their fuel pump in their vehicles. This is a common problem in Fords...

Try searching online for "ford fuel pump noise filter" or something similar. Also, others may be able to give you more specific information...

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Hay this is going to sound a little strange if take a ceramic cap figure out the frequency that you can get rid of and not effect the normally operation of the radio and put it in the back from the center of the coax plug to board ground I have done this in the past but I can't remember what size of cap to use goodluck ,if you do figure it out let me know what you came up with .

George I don't think anyone is saying that. Breaking a set of laws over and over again on a regular basism, calling it a "hobby", and defending its existence to others doesn't compare at all to going 56 in a 55 mph zone.

I hold it off the ground because I was worried that changing weather (rain, snow) would change the capacitance, if it laid on the ground.
I figured that once I tuned it (for my wife's favorite, but hard to pull in station), I wouldn't want to fiddle with it every time the weather changed.

I'll keep that in mind. If it doesn't perform, I'll consider cutting the wire short, just to see if that improves it.

I spend nearly all my airtime on channel 19. Only very occasionally do I go to another channel for a one-on-one with less background chatter. I'd be happy to get the very best performance possible around channel 19.

Capacitance is going to change quite a bit regardless. An antenna's capacitance works against ground regardless of how high you put it (unless it's a hertzian dipole), so your antenna needs to be retuned whenever the ground changes. Unless you are in the desert or on the ocean, you will need to change it often. But it's only two knobs, so it shouldn't be that hard to teach the wife how to tune the AMU.

You can always reconnect it if the longer one works better.

But I'm having a problem with why you are running a horizontal antenna. AM BC signals are vertically polarized, and a 100' vertical will probably work better than 300' slithering down a hillside. I would even have to say that it will work MUCH better. A large loop would probably work fine, too, and you don't have to run any radials.

Then that should be the ideal setup for you.

Fuel pump is the problem...

Solution-place 470uf caps from each of the positive leads (power and sender wires) to the vehicle chassis AT THE FUEL PUMP. This does pose a challenge as the fuel pump is usually at the top of the tank and the wires are hard to get to. Make sure to seal off the wiring and caps to prevent moisture damage. Has worked well on Ford Rangers, Broncos, and Tauruses with the same issues.

In-line filters prevent noise from coming in through the power leads. Your problem is extranneous rf coming in through the antenna caused by your pump. Killing the noise at the source is the best solution. Do not modify your radio. If you add capacitance to the inside of the radio (on the coax connector) you will change the impedance your finals will see yielding degraded output, higher transistor operating temperatures, and poof!!

Good luck to you!

I think it's much simpler then that. Twist just craves attention. He

I had the same model truck as yours and had the same fuel pump problem.
What I did to correct it, was to gain access to the pump (Takes a bit of neck twisting under the truck, carefully nicking the insulation to the wires feeding the fuel pump and soldering a .25 uF capacitor across them as close to the pump motor as possible. That took the noise level from S5 down to under S1.

Later on, I heard that Ford offers a retrofit kit to fix the problem. I don't know the part number off hand, but a local dealer might.

>Twist they voted so what was the result?<

For real! They decriminalized it in Santa Cruz..mere possession is a ticket, like a.small fine, sort of like an open container law......they voted to make medical pot legal in AZ 'cause I remember McCain went nuts over it....feds stepped in and said "go ahead, we'll pull all kinds of grant money going to your state. A college friend was really involved with Keith Stroup's people and NORML back in the day......we don't talk much anymore but we still get a Christmas card every year from him and his family is still fighting for the cause.

Hadn't heard about that one. They need to, as last I remember they were one of the toughest in the country at one time for mere possession, but they ply you with you free drinks and its totally cool to stagger down the strip with an open container in Vegas....go figure!!
  Now that the real Las Vegas is returning to its roots as the original sin city since trying to be family-oriented like Disney and catering to kids went over like lumpy oatmeal, they can stand some sanity.
  I dunno know if we'll see it in our lifetime, but if we do, my prediction is KY will be the first state to totally legalize it....hell, it grows wild all over the place there and is probably the largest cash crop in the state. It may even be the largest income generator in the state PERIOD....all industry included. ASk anyof them boys in the blue

Hello
I've just bought a set of PMR446 mobile radios and was wondering what the 'monitor button' is used for. I know this is probably a very stupid question but any help would be greatly appreciated, The manual does not mention it whatsoever.

There isn't one. He reminds me of that knight in the Monty Python movie:

Knight #1: "Come back here and fight!"

Knight #2: "I cut off your arm, you fool."

Knight #1: "No you didn't."

Knight #2: "Yes I did. There it is laying on the ground."

Knight #1: "Tis but a scratch. Come back here and fight!"

Eventually he gets both legs and both arms hacked off, yet still begs for a fight. Just like Twisty, he doesn't realize when he has been defeated, and there comes a point when you have to just walk away and give him the opportunity to make his own assessments; i.e, stare at his bloody limbs rotting in the dirt. LOL!!!

If it is a bussiness band portable,
most of them I have used, the monitor button was just a way to adjust the volume level.
Push and hold the button for a few seconds, this should open the open the squelch to where you can adjust the volume to your listening level.
Then press the button again to turn this feature off.
Hope this helps...

I tried taking the easy way out and returning the 99V to the dealer (a Williams truckstop) and exchange it for a regular ole CB. They will not take it back, they do exchanges only and wanted me to get a CB and an additional $200.00 in store merchandise. Gonna try getting Visa to stop payment, but if I can't I guess I'll try to do the mod.

Thanks again for all the info, folks.

No it was an actual valid question, Steve. If you chastise Parr for being an outband CB'er, then that must mean you look down on outband CB'ers. It's no secret that I do, and anyone can tell you that I'm anti-CB amplifier, so reality doesn't jive with your laughable fabrications because everyone knows I don't encourage people to use amps.

As for being a troll: if you notice, Frank, George and I are
'trolling' YOU and YOU ALONE. And enjoying it. I mean, heck, everyone uses the word 'troll' very loosely around rrcb, and it's kinda fun to actually see a real, live, career Usenet TROLL like you cornered and exposed. Recall that shortly after you first appeared in rrcb, I theorized that anyone with such an obnoxious personality must have started flamewars on usenet before, and there would be records of this activity. A little research proved that I was right.

Anyone with a browser and Google archives can follow your trail through the alt.radio.pirate, alt.radio.digital, and alt.radio.broadcasting groups. Then I came upon the Parr stuff and references to FRN, so I followed it into the pirate forums and back out again. To newsgroups from alt.atheism to alt.religion. You are a helluva prolific troll, Steve. Wow. Scary.

No matter, the cool thing about this episode is that it leaves another record in your trail. In the future when you start your troll antics in another newsgroup and its inhabitants get to the point of wanting you gone and start researching your past, they'll come upon the archives of what happened here in rrcb, complete with all your various aliases and sock puppets, and the whole record of you, Parr, and FRN.

Maybe they'll bag you a little faster next time.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

Where did I say I hate CBers? Never. Keyclowns are not even cbers,

You have to suppress the spurious RF at the source
This is done by placing RF choke and capacitor on the pump wire by the tank, be careful.

Back in the mid-late 60s, we still were using AM on 4 MHZ. We had never heard of "swing", tho.
LOL! We began to get upper sideband in '68, I believe, with a switchover date of 1971 (I think).
Much of the equipment in those days was either military surplus or home built. I had a transmitter in the mobile called a Lettine--plated modulated 807 in the final. If I was lucky, I could do 60 watts on a good day! High voltage was provided by a dynamotor providing 625 volts at 175 mils.
All this was packed into the trunk on the shelf that cars used to have back there with the dyno under the hood. A huge cable ran from there back to the set for the filaments and HV. If you left the filaments on by accident, the battery would be dead from full charge in 30 minutes! I had a large green light on the control head so that I would not forget and leave the thing on. When you keyed up and the dynamotor started up with a CLACK from the big relay, it would DIM the headlights at night until the dyno got up to speed.

Looking back, this was my first mobile of any kind, and I could've done much more to improve my setup. An extra battery in the trunk with an isolator, a bigger alternator, better analysis equipment.
However, a lot of the stuff we take for granted didn't exist back then. All we had were grid dip meters and milliamp meters (to measure antenna current), and I know I didn't know what I know now. But it WAS fun, and I gradually learned from my mistakes.

KEYCLOWNS LISTEN UP! don't give your light loafered he/she fellow keyclown something boring like a tube of anal ease or thong underwear AGAIN this Christmas! KEYCLOWN MADNESS will be the hit of any keyclown holiday gathering!

Proposed titles of skits:

1>Trainedpuppet discusses winning a gold dildo from Twithed.

2>Brian Griffey and Ozark333 talk about their childhood experiences with dogs.

3>JP tells all about his midnight lot lizard experiences

4>Secret recordings of twithed's childhood. Actual recordings of him beating puppies, using kittens for fish bait, and playing hide the salami with male relatives.

5>Landshark's childhood: The lunch money muggings, the beatings by his older sister, his fascination with telling on other kids, the truth behind that peephole he bored in the boys' locker room.

6>Dweebo's incarceration: The mass sodomizing he came to love, his drug useage, his inability to become aroused by anything but Playgirl magazines.

7> Dave or Debby: His continual switching between Dave and Debby, his obsession with gay porn web sites, his secret membership in the Gay Communist League.

8>Randy Chapwoman tells all about his crack using pansy self.

9>PeePeeHolic confesses: Limpwristed Stevie tells about his days in the men's rooms of the old Cleveland Stadium. Hear about how he cried when they wouldn't take him to Baltimore because they had already lined up GayScottiekins as the team pump boy.

It is all in the planning stage now, but your owners the Anti-boys do have great audio recording facilities, and do seriously intend to release a record about you all this year. Well.

Let me give you a little "hint". Two WEEKS before the Cheetah Transportation thing was published, I posted it here! If you've been here awhile, you will recall that one poster said this warning was a "fake". But, shore 'nuff, two weeks AFTER I posted it, it showed up on the Rain Report and on ARRL web page. At the very LEAST, most who say they are close friends and "confidants" of RH have one thing in common with him; they hold Amateur licenses and have a similar vested interest in removing illegal ops from the 10 and 12 meter bands. I never said I was "close" friends with Riley; however, I AM acquainted with him in that he knows me on sight and I know him on sight enough to call each other by name. He is a "homeboy" whose hometown is nearby. Rock Hill, SC is the name of it, just across the line on I-77 from Charlotte, NC. Rock Hill, driver caught operating on 28.085 there, RH from Rock Hill. Hmmmm, see any connections there? I claim no special friendship with RH, never have; it just so happens that we know OF each other, and did prior to his appointment to his present job. I also talk to him on-air, and he frequents the local repeaters when he is in the area--which is fairly often considering where "home" is. But, again, while I have shook hands with him many times at hamfests, we are acquaintances, not close confidants.

I was sitting here sifting thru the remnants of what used to be a fairly decent and useful group and see that Doug is still a one man crusade against all those he deems to be doing things he doesn't approve of. It's a shame that any one man? has that much time to devote to something so useless. In the two plus years of trying, the self-proclaimed 'owner' of the NG has acomplished ABSOLUTELY NOTHING! Granted, he gets under the skin of those who allow it, and feeds from their banter with him. If you sit back and look thru the archives, it's the same old story, different day, nothing accomplished, other than causing problems on auction sites for those trying to sell their wares(no biggy) and making a perfect ass out of himself in the view of Cb'ers and his fellow amateur operators (yes, he's the topic of discussion on 75m and others) and even the butt of jokes in Gettysburg from his (he thinks) buddy Hollingsworth, who thinks he is a childish pompus ass also. It would be no won! der the man's wife left him with such childish behavior. Hopefully she found herself a real man this time. Let me conclude with a little food for thought for those (you know who I mean) with a little time on their hands and the knowledge to put it to good use. Why not check into starting a MODERATED CB group and take the proper measures to have this group removed as a non-viable group. It can be done and is easier than you think. Then Mr. Adair would have to settle for spamming his amateur buddies in their groups, and CB related issues legal or otherwise could once again be discussed in peace. Amen.

Yep, looks like EEI has re surfaced as Pacetronics. Looks like this is a complete scam from the word go. I guess they did not burn enough people and had to develop a new name to come back and make further kills. The old http://www.exportradios.com site is back in full swing, with Mike Faulkner at the design table, the hosting table and controls seeing how he is Aesir Technologies. What a friggin joke.

And I say your wrong, again here is a few excerpts and there links Now you provide a link to something proving me wrong.
Medical marijuana is the only exception and it is still against Federal Law.
So do you have a prescription?

California legalized medical marijuana in 1996 with Proposition 215.
However, marijuana remains illegal for all uses under federal law.
http://www.bayarea.com/mld/bayarea/4141981.htm

"A 1996 state ballot initiative legalized some marijuana use by ill patients in California, as long as they used the drug under the supervision of a doctor who could vouch it was for medically legitimate purposes. Since then, eight other states, including Nevada and Arizona, have passed similar initiatives through legislation or ballot actions.

But the Bush administration remains opposed to the measures, saying that federal laws criminalizing marijuana use and distribution supersede individual states' efforts to legalize it in certain circumstances. The US Supreme Court upheld that view in a ruling last year. "

And another,

September 24. 2002 2:54PM

POINT REYES, Calif. (AP) - A Brentwood man was booked on drug charges after federal officers found a huge pot garden in the Point Reyes National Seashore.

Some 2,700 marijuana plants valued at $1.5 million were uprooted, officials said.

Pedro Cano, 22, of Brentwood was charged Monday in federal court in San Francisco with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, said Richard Meyer, a spokesman for the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

I sure would like to put a wager to it please provide something backing your claim that pot was decriminalized, you have 1/2 the story they support prescription marijuana only by a doctors orders.

Twisty You really think so please provide a reference to support your claim that it is a small fine, unless you have a prescription from a doctor it is illegal and according to the Federal Govt it is still illegal.

Really, what about this BUST

Pot raid angers state, patients
Tue Sep 17, 7:17 AM ET
John Ritter USA TODAY

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. -- Suzanne Pfeil understands why federal agents burst in just after dawn with guns drawn and handcuffed her. That's routine in drug busts. What she can't understand is why agents kept ordering her to stand up after they saw her crutches and leg braces next to the bed.

Then when her blood pressure spiked and she felt chest pains, the agents refused to call an ambulance, says Pfeil, 42, disabled by polio That she can't forgive. ''Totally unprofessional,'' she says. ''They were brutalizing us.''

Outrage over a Sept. 5 raid at a medical marijuana cooperative in the coastal hills north of here festers beyond the terminally ill patients who use marijuana to ease pain, which California law allows.

The raid is the latest, perhaps most controversial collision of federal law and the nation's growing medical marijuana movement.

California Attorney General Bill Lockyer condemned the bust as a waste of law enforcement resources, a cruel step against a group that presents slight danger to the public and a slap at the state's voters. The Santa Cruz County sheriff, whose deputies have worked closely with co-op managers to ensure that the operation is law-abiding, said he was ''disappointed'' by the raid.

''It's just absolutely loathsome to me that federal money, energy and staff time would be used to harass people like this,'' says Emily Reilly, Santa Cruz's vice mayor.

A Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman in San Francisco accused the council of ''flouting federal law'' prohibiting marijuana possession.

In Washington, DEA administrator Asa Hutchinson defends the raid.

''What the DEA concentrates on is the investigation and prosecution of major trafficking cases,'' Hutchinson says. ''But the DEA's responsibility is to enforce our controlled substances laws, and one of them is marijuana. Someone could stand up and say one of these marijuana plants is designed for someone who is sick, but under federal law, there's no distinction.''

The monitor button opens the squelch (both carrier and PL tone)and allows you to hear other stations on your frequency that may be using a different tone.

It is always good practice to listen on the channel without the PL on before you transmit to keep from interfearing with another station that you could not hear otherwise. In fact, in the US it's the law.

i think they'd be rather impressed at the way these guys are getting 50kw and more from MOBILE transmitters with most having no formal rf training other from cb friends and ham elmers that have tought them over the years. if anything i know for sure theyd respect the signal levels of guys like 22 steel and prime minister who both run more than 20kw into huge directional antennas from there bases.

EMERGENCY COMMS: NEW DATABASE BEING CREATED

A new ham radio volunteer database is about to become a reality. Amateur Radio Newsline's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, has the story of how an act of terror lead to its creation:

A year ago, when al-Quida terrorists hit in New York City, Pennsylvania and Washington D-C, it was Joe Tomasone, AB2M, who put together an Internet based volunteer registration system. This strategy permitted ham radio volunteers to be quickly credentialed and dispatched to the various disaster sites where they were needed. Last May at the Amateur Radio Newsline sponsored Ham Radio Town Meeting in Dayton Joe explained that the database came about because he wanted to do somthing to help in the wake of the attacks:

Tomasone: "Not knowing what else to do I sent an e-mail to Tom Caruba, KA2D, who is the Section Emergency Coordinator for the New Yourk City and Long Island. I said that I know there is nothing that is nothing I can do to help, but let me know if there is somthing I can do to help.

And I expected that maybe he would request for me to make some phone calls or do some health and welfare traffic outside the area because the phones were in scetchy status in the New Yoork City ares. A short time later a request came back that I wasn't sure how to answer. They asked: '...can yoiu make a databse that will track the hudreds of requests we are getting [from hams] to come down and volunteer and can we put that up on the Internet so that it can be accessed.'

I thought about it for a few minutes and I said yes, I think we can do that."

Joe Tomasone did do it. The result was a steady flow of volunteers being dispatched when and where they were needed.

--
Tomasone: “On the registration page as many of you were able to see, it asked for basic information such as your name, your call sign, your address, contact information, what ARRL Section you were from and what your availability was. Now once that was put into the database, it was able to be queeried by a number of people who were given access to that portion of the siute. That enabled them to do searches based on a number of criteria.”
--

During his Dayton presentation, Joe mentioned his desire to grow what became known as the World Trade Center Volunteer Database into a general event activation management program for ARES, RACES and SKYWARN activities. Now Joe is about to get that project off the ground. But to do it he needs your help.

Joe tells Amateur Radio Newsline that making it happen will take people and new ideas. To that end, he has created an e-mail mailing list to solicit concepts and volunteers for this project. Anyone who is interested can either sign up directly by sending an e- mail to volreg-request@lists.ab2m.net or by visiting wtc.ab2m.net on the World Wide Web. Please note that their is no w-w-w in that U-R-L. Its simply wtc.ab2m.net.

RADIO LAW: CC&R BILL HR 4720 ATTRACTS ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

Good news on the legislative front. Five more cosponsors now have signed aboard HR 4720. This is a bill in Congress aimed at providing relief to amateurs faced with private deed covenants, conditions and restrictions when they want to put up antennas.

According to a story in the ARRL Letter, the list of cosponsors is now up to 23 members of the U-S House of Representatives who have agreed to sign on to the measure. This includes two radio amateurs: They are Oregon Republican Greg Walden, WB7OCE and Arkansas Democrat Mike Ross, WD5DVR. Walden was one of the two original cosponsors of HR 4720 with Texas Republican Pete Sessions. Walden and Ross are believed to be the only Amateur Radio licensees in the U-S House of Representatives.

It was New York Democrat Steve Israel introduced HR 4720 back on May 14th. The measure would require private land-use regulators such as homeowners' associations to "reasonably accommodate" Amateur Radio communication consistent with the PRB-1 limited federal preemption. PRB-1 now applies only to states and municipalities. (ARRL)

RADIO RECORDS: 24 GHZ RECORD BROKEN

The ham radio distance record for a contact on the 24 Gigahertz band has been broken again. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is here to tell us who did it and how:

--
On the 7th of September Dave Robinson, G4FRE, operating as WW2R/5, and Al Ward, W5LUA, made a record-breaking contact on 24,192MHz. Dave was operating portable in EM41HC near Natchez, Mississippi, and W5LUA was operating from his home in EM13QC, at Allen in Texas.

CW signals of 549 were exchanged. The distance, based on six-digit to six-digit grid squares, is 337.3 miles or 542.8 kilometres.

The sked was set up earlier in the week via e-mail with no liaison on any band, including cellular. Attempts to repeat the contact over the same path 12 hours after the initial QSO resulted in no signals being identifiable either way on 10GHz, suggesting the morning QSO was under enhanced tropo conditions.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH

No signals were heard on 2 meters or 70 centimeters at the time of the 24 Gigahertz contact was completed. Previous experiments on 10 gigahertz last July also resulted in no signals being identified. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: 20 METER NET INTERFERENCE

Interference to nets on 20 meters in the South Pacific. Q-News Graham Kemp, VK4BB, reports from Brisbane Australia:

20 Meter interference. The Maritime nets on 14.315 MHz are having problems with interference. Chris VK2UW says the ACA have been notified and are monitoring, but a bit of help from Hams re locating the source of the Interference would be appreciated.

It is Man made and is regular both by making noises and CW type transmissions. The nets involved are the Pacific InterIsland Net on 14.315 MHz 0800 Z each night and Tony's Net on 14.315 MHz 7.00am EST each day.

From Q-News Australia, I’m Graham Kemp. VK4BB, reporting for the amateur Radio Newsline.

If you hear the interference and can get a bearing on it, please report your findings to your nations Intruder Watch coordinator. In the United States that's the American Radio Relay League. (Q-News)

ENFORCEMENT: REPEATER ORDERED OF THE AIR

Back stateside, the FCC has ordered a repeater operator to take his system off the air. It happened in California. The agency's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains the action taken:

Duckworth: "A repeater shutdown order was issued to Steven Decho, KE6FX, of Draper Utah regarding operation of his repeater or remote base on Mt. Disappointment in the Los Angeles area. Decho was told in a letter to shut down operation until he either obtained current coordination or submitted a detailed, specific and acceptable plan to the enforcement bureau demonstrating how he would prevent interference to the WA6UZS repeater operation."
--

Late word from the FCC is that Decho has replied to the agency. He has shut down the Mt. Disappointment system. (FCC, RAIN)

RADIO SURVEY RESULTS: 1 IN 10 NEVER HEARD OF IRLP

A recent survey conducted by the website Radio-Scanner.co.uk shows that 1 in 10 radio enthusiasts worldwide have never heard of the Internet Radio Linking Project better known as I-R-L-P. The survey did however show that only 20% of radio enthusiasts were against the idea, with a massive 71% backing it. 9% were apparently undecided.

The Radio-Scanner release did not say if the survey was limited to licensed radio amateurs or included others such as S-W-L's and monitoring radio enthusiasts. Also, no data was published regarding knowledge or acceptance of other ham radio Internet linking protocols such as I-Link, Echolink, Hamlink or E-Q-S-O. (Radio-Scanner)

RADIO LAW: GROUP WARNS ON NEW BROADBAND REGS

A consumer action group says that some proposed U.S. government policies could harm competition in the broadband Internet market. This says the Consumer Federation of America will result in reducing choices and driving up monthly fees for users who want high-speed access.

The C-F-A contends that by easing regulations on incumbent cable television and local phone companies, the Federal Communications Commission will hasten the demise of independent Internet providers who reach users over existing phone and cable lines. They say that , consumers will suffer as cable and local phone giants that currently dominate the broadband market will no longer be driven to lower prices and create innovative products.

The FCC ruled in March that cable providers do not have to share their systems or provide open access for competing Internet services, and the agency is currently reassessing its line-sharing rules for local-phone giants like Verizon Communications and SBC Communications Inc. (CFA)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: NEW CATV CHIPS REVOLUTIONIZE SETY TOP BOXES

A new chipset developed in Canada may revolutionize set top T-V converter boxes. The spinoff of this technology could also impact future ham radio gear. Norm Seeley, KI7UP has more:

Zarlink Semiconductor of Ottawa Canada has announced availability of a new high performance chipset for tuning analog and digital RF cable TV signals. Zarlink's two-device chipset claims to deliver reception of all analog and digital cable channels, while allowing designers of multi-service cable set-top boxes to shrink tuner designs by 50% and reduce tuner costs by up to 20%.

The Zarlink chipset is comprised of a broadband tuner I-C and a new chip that handles frequency down-conversions and intermediate frequency amplification. Zarlink says that the new I-C’s implement active RF and IF amplification circuitry directly in the silicon wafer structure. In fact, the circuitry inside the count-down integrated circuit eliminates up to 40 external components from high performance, double-conversion tuner designs.

Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

The same Zarlink based technology could conceivably be used to shrink the size of other electronic gear that will require advanced R-F signal processing. This could include the next generation of digital communications ham radio gear. Ham gear that could be no bigger than a set-top CATV converter box. (Based on Zarlink release)

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: INTEL TO INTRODUCE 3 GHZ PROCESSOR

Computer industry sources say that Intel may be moving up the introduction of its new 3 gigahertz Pentium 4 processor. Intel had originally planned to introduce the 3.0 gigahertz Pentium 4 processor by the end of the year. The earlier date will give manufacturers an edge in getting machines ready for the Christmas buying season. Intel also is reportedly accelerating the introduction of its 2.80 gigahertz Pentium 4 as well. (Via Internet)

RADIO IN SPACE: IO - A JOVIAN TRANSMITTER

From the science page comes word of a kind of natural transmitter in orbit around the planet Jupiter that has no magnetic field. Roy Neal, K6DUE, has more:

--
There are many mysteries in deep space. Men and their machines are hard at work trying to resolve them. At the heart of unmanned space flight, the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, in Southern California is home to the huge antennnas that control the space ships that go out in the attempt to unlock the secrets. It also is home to amateur radio station W6VIO and many of the hams who run the station take part in the deep space endeavours.

The latest report says they have found that IO, a volcanic moon circling the planet Jupiter, transmits charged particles…easily detectable as power and noise. But the moon apparently has no magnetic field. These data were gathered by NASA’s Galileo spacecraft as it orbited Jupiter for the last 6 years.

The discovery took on importance last Fall. The researchers were trying to determine whether the moon created its own magnetic field inside the massive one generated by Jupiter, the largest of all our solar planets. When Galileo crossed the path of a magnetic field connection between IO and Jupiter, suddenly the density of the charged particles through which it was passing increased…but no magnetic field was detected. Leaving the researchers, in their earthly control room, yet anther puzzle of the universe to solve.

For the amateur radio newsline, Roy Neal, K6DUE

THAT FINAL ITEM: FLYING THE FLAG

And finally this week a look back to the way ham radio commemorated 9-11. This week its the story of two Florida hams who took to the air to fly the flag. In their case it was not by radio but rather in a Cessna 172 aircraft carrying several U-S flags as a part of an event called Flight Across America. The pilot at the controls was veteran aviator Steven Crow, K4CPX:

K4CPX: “What they did was to assign somebody from every state to carry their state flag into New York City to be there originally on 911. But they locked down New York City again for 911 so they had to do it a few days early.

Those airplanes that could not come to New York or wouldn’t because there were only fifty airplanes carrying state flags -- they wanted to have an airplane at each airport fly aloft for this commemoration which we did.

Then I came up with the idea of carrying flags for individuals. For people who wanted their flag commemorated with a flight on Flight Across America. So we did and we carried five flags aloft and we put a seal on them and signed them and gave them back to the people after we got back on the ground."

Accompanying K4CPX was Wendall Peterson K0REQ as co-pilot and Julius Ehland as the bearer of the flags. And on the morning of 9/11 the three made their way to Punta Gorda's Charlotte County Airport only to find it not to be a great day to venture into the sky:

--
K4CPX: "We went out to the airport anyway and stood around watching the rain sweep through. It is a pretty large airport with 6000' runways and I think we were the only pilots and the only flight that was even there that day."
--

Finally a slight break in the weather:

--
K4CPX: "We hung around and hung around another couple of hours -- all the time watching -- and looking at the RADAR -- and check it and see this stuff coming through. And we found a bit of a hole and decided -- lets jump in and take a quick look from the end of the runway and maybe aloft and maybe we can get the flight in."
--

And that's exactly what they did:

--
K4CPX: "We took off; climbed up to 1000 feet, turned sharply ahead of some heavy weather coming in and came right around the airport and landed on another runway and we were on the ground. We were probably in the air a total of maybe 12 or 13 minutes."
--

The important thing is that the flags were flown and returned to their owners. And while Steve and Wendall did have some 2 meter ham gear on board the Cessna they never bothered to turn it on. This was 9/11 and commemorating the day was what the flight by these two radio amateurs and their friend had really been all about. (ARNewsline™)

No one said laws were holy. But even the FCC won't accept "lack of

First of all Chimbuba, no one, least of all me, said "break one law, you break all laws". I don't see the logic that since some rules are trivial, then all rules are trivial. Think of it this way. There is no $10,000 fine for going 1 mile over the speed limit if apprehended. But there -is- a $10,000 fine for transmitting outside the citizens band if apprehended. So which offense could be considered trivial?

I'm looking for the microphone pinout for an Audiovox MCB-16. It uses a 5-pin DIN plug.

I was also wondering if anyone knows how to keep the CB from affecting my cd-player. Currently the CB and the cd-player share the same power leads, would installing a power filter between them fix this?

Thanks in advance,

You need to move one wire over to open the full bandwidth of this one.

Forgive me if this is posted twice, I needed to clarify and I think I canceled it but I'm not sure.

I'm looking for the microphone pinout for an Audiovox MCB-16.

I've had a trouble with both of the radios I've used in my car, when I key up I can hear the transmission, somewhat distorted, through my stereo speakers. Is this because they share power leads? If so would a power filter between them fix this problem?

Thanks in advance,

Hi Lou,

Yes, I know it is but the radio just isn't worth the $20 for the photocopy of the Sams. I might have considered their new Email service info, but they don't offer it yet for most CB's. That's why I turned here to try to obtain either just a schematic or even a block diagram. I could probably repair the unit without any such info, but why "take a road trip without a map" (seems like I'm quoting you from somewhere here). In any case, thanks for the tip!

QBFreak,
While the interference to your stereo speakers might be coming through the power lead, I think it's caused by the stereo's susceptibility to RF. It doesn't really have to do with the stereo it's self, but rather the leads going to the speakers are picking up the RF signals.
There are a couple of things you can do to 'cure' that.
The first is to 'by-pass' the speaker leads with 0.001 or 0.01 uF capacitors. One between the speaker wire and ground, or if it's an ungrounded speaker system, between the two speaker wires, and another from one wire to ground.
Do that for each speaker lead leaving the radio. Another
'cure' is to use shielded cabling for the speaker leads,
grounding the shield at the radio and at each speaker.
Something else you might want to check is the grounding for your radio. It should be grounded too.
Can't help with the microphone pin-out...

Some locations a pot possession charge used to be a felony and/or a hefty fine, and maybe even probation for first time offenders. That has changed in several areas. Many locations such as California, BC, Amsterdam, AZ, and other places have lessened the penalties to include such violations to be classified as misdemeanors or even less...surely you are aware of this..the country is no longer accepting the force fed drug propaganda BS down our throats....when a penalty is reduced collectively across the board for an entire jurisdiction, that is decriminalization to a certain extent. Surely you would agree, and surely in your lifetime, you have seen Marijuana reclassified in it's pecking order on the numerical schedule of drugs the feds have assigned illicit narcotics, IE: schedule 1, schedule 2, etc.

That's sort of what my original post said, with the feds threatening the states to comply with federal law no matter what the voters in the state have said..

*For real! They decriminalized it in Santa Cruz..mere possession is a

I promise you that is the case for simple possession in Santa Cruz.

went down there against the medicinal pot club distributors.

Oh, I am quite aware the feds say it's illegal. They have threatened to withold state funds if the states disregard federal policy. Too much money in the stuff. What some may be stunned to realize, is the stuff was legal until a synthetic for hemp (nylon) was invented (Hearst Newspapers had alot to do with it as well) So if anything, it needs to be RElegalized and treated like alcohol and cigarettes. A great book on the entire story of why it was made illegal was writen by a fellow named Jack Herer (sp?)..the name of the book is "The emperor wears no clothes" or something to that effect.....all the facts are there.

yeh twist.....no code techs.....the scourge of the ham bands.....these pinheads will rue the day they ever allowed these punks into their precious hallowed halls of government ruled laws and orders.....of a sort i suppose.....and they get on here and jump up and down which is the only place anyone can or will see what they think.....because we all know what they are.....a bunch of qrp mudducks.....no doubt about it..... -

And I hear ya'! Some of these guys seem to be stuck in some sort of limbo...the cbers don't want 'em and the hammies are ashamed of 'em so they try and cause problems for both. S'cool, though.....you know what time it's getting to be and while the 6 meter freakazoids realize the novelty of psk 31 is wearing off, they will be back back on 11....it's the only place they can find someone to talk to, as we're usually a friendly, chatty bunch.
Hey, the last time we had a hurricane between us, the weird conditions were real good between the eastern part of the star and the pile...maybe it will be duplicated soon..I need to check the weather this AM.....

Blonde Pilot

A blonde pilot decided she wanted to learn how to fly a helicopter. She went to the airport, but the only one available was a solo-helicopter. The Instructor figured he could let her go up alone since she was already a pilot for small planes and he could instruct her via radio.

So up the blonde went. She reached 1,000 feet and everything was going smoothly. She reached 2,000 feet. The blonde and the Instructor kept talking via radio. Everything was running smoothly. At 3,000 feet the helicopter suddenly came down quickly! It skimmed the top of some trees and crash landed in the woods. The Instructor jumped into his jeep and rushed out to see if the blonde was okay.

As he reached the edge of the woods, the blonde was walking out.

"What happened?" the Instructor asked. "All was going so well until you reached 3,000 feet. What happened then?"

"Well," began the blonde, "I got cold. So I turned off the big fan."

First off, if anyone is doing 50kW from a mobile, I would have to see it to believe it. We're talking some serious RF burns just sitting inside the vehicle while transmitting, even if you aren't touching anything metal. And knowing that you would have to deliver more than 150 HP to the alternators/generators IN ADDITION TO the power it takes to operate the vehicle, and the fact that such huge RF would cook the electrical systems in the vehicle, I would have to say that you are even more gullible than I imagined.

As for running 20 kW from a base, that's entirely possible, but absolutely useless on CB for any other purpose but to step on everyone's signal for a 20 mile radius. I'm sure that there are a few maladjusted misfits that do just that. Whether or not the signal is comperable with a broadcast station remains to be proven.

But you seemed to miss the most important part of the post, Timmy. The station WLW did it LEGALLY!!!

Wrong Chim, the chances of getting caught speeding are better than going out of band. Also, you could go 56 miles an hour a couple of hundred times before you might even get pulled over and warned about speeding. So they are going to search for people using the freeband, using 5 watts?

be faulty logic. A ham license is only

I actually have two boxes... And move the tube from box to box.

One is connected as a triode (grid and screen together). I run it straight class B. Zero bias.

The other one is connected with both screen and grid bias.

I run the filament, screen and grid bias transformers off an intverter, therefore I can pull the amp out, bring it in the house, and only have to plug it into 110, and connect the HV power supply. Also maintains extreme linearity when I want to run the Class AB box... Since the fil voltage, bias and screen are all somewhat stabilized and psuedo-regulated.

The alternators (3) are all run with contactors, so they can either feed my transformers (3) or I can cut the transformers off, and run into a external diode bridge. This allows me to run either AC or DC, with the flip of a switch.

I typically see about 15 KW PEP out of the amp being driven by just the TS Modulator (run it at about 17 volts), with screen voltage.

When I put the tube in the Class B box, I can get about 20 thousand carrier, but it still backs up to about 15. PEP values are a bit higher, though, and I have to hit the TS Sweet Sixteen with 18 volts, which gives me a couple grand drive.

Your ignorance is showing, Timmy. Just because a tube has a plate dissipation rating of 15 kW doesn't mean the tube is putting out that much power. Many amps use large tubes but are run Class AB1 in order to prevent grid-current distortion. Without drawing grid current they are running considerably less power than if they were running Class AB2 or C. They are certainly not running Class C or they would be lighting up every TV set for a mile, cable or not. Not only that, but a Class C tank for 20 kW would take up most of the space inside the vehicle, and would be terribly inefficient because of the ferrous chassis and body parts. So even if they were able to get 20 kW to the tank, they won't be getting nearly that much to the antenna. And a tank isn't going to help much if there isn't a very good ground, which you are not going to find on any vehicle. It requires ground rods and radials, and at 20 kW the ground really needs to be tuned. And the antenna is another story, because at such high power in such a small space, resistance is critical. Even silver plated copper is going to heat up if it's not large enough, which amounts to more losses. Also, antenna and transmission line matching is ABSOLUTELY critical or you will be getting corona off every sharp corner of the vehicle (you will probably get that anyway). Then you have the power required by the filament, which is going to add another 50+ horsepower to the engine load. Can you say "blower"? Because that's what you are gonna need to overcome the losses of packing that kind of power into such a small space. And all that lost power has to go somewhere, usually in the form of heat. Such a rig would require a fan the size of the rear hatch. Finally, the biological effects of such high power RF is well documented, and if these people can still see well enough to drive then you know for a fact that they aren't putting out the power they claim.

Timmy, these "techs" aren't putting out 50 kW mobile, or even 15 kW. They might be getting one or two kilowatts at the most, but that it.

Toll Free is not 'knowledgeable', and neither is Eitner. They quit posting not because of Doug, George or Aaron, but because their bullshit was finally confronted by people that could actually see through their voodoo. Probably the most knowledgeable person here in the past few years was the late, great Dick McCollum, and even HE made a few comments debunking the RF mythology from those two idiots. Now don't you have to get to school? or are you skipping class today?

the 302 is a good engine, I have an 84 Mercury Grand Marquis, the body is in going to pull the engine and rebuild it. It is the first ford product I have ever liked. Prior to that I owned all mopar or chevy.

Legal issues aside, you should contact the SBE (Society Of Broadcast Engineers) or the NAB (National Association Of Broadcasters), explain to them what the superbowl folks are doing, have them visit a "keydown", and ask for an honest evaluation of the technology. My guess is that "respect" is not going to be among their reactions, but here's your chance to prove me wrong.

8 x 250 amps = 2000 amps
2000 amps x 13.6 volts = 27200 watts

Now that 27200 watts needs to supply not only the plate current (and not forgetting an ideal maximum of 50% efficiency) but the filament current as well. Then you have significant DC losses because of running 2000 amps. Then you also have the tank and transmission line losses which I stated before. It's a horribly inefficient system.
Solid state is worse, because the impedance of all those low-impedance "pills" in parallel is going to dictate huge currents, and therefore huge resistive losses. The result is that these things are better space heaters than transmitters. The numbers have been posted many times before. Did you fail grade-school math?

Into the air? Probably. The problem with you, Timmy, is that you will believe whatever you want to believe, regardless of the reality of the situation.

Never heard him. Guess it's not as much power as you think. It also reiterates the fundamental fact that 27 MHz doesn't have a good ground wave. That's why the AM broadcast band is not on 27 MHz (duh!). It only takes a couple hundred watts to saturate the ground wave radius, and beyond that more power is useless. Skip is either there or it isn't, and power has nothing to do with skip propogation. But if he want's to waste his money impressing dopes like yourself then that's up to him.

> how >could he do all this with only one or two kw's from a mobile antenna?

Well, if I can't see or hear him accomplishing this stupendous feat of RF wizardry, then I guess I really can't say that he's even getting out. But it doesn't take that much to overload a front end, and if he is putting out as much power as you say, then you shouldn't be able to hear anything but hash. If you can hear him, he's not putting out as much as you think.

> i myself

Timmy, I work with high-power transmitters nearly every day. I can not only imagine more than you will ever see in a keyclown rig, but I have probably worked on it. I have great confidence that you saw what you saw, but what you didn't see is what you don't understand. You didn't see the FSM measurements. You didn't see ERP charts (you couldn't understand them even if you saw them anyway). And you certainly haven't ever seen a broadcast transmitter.

I remember going to a keydown in Memphis, Tn. about 3 or 4 years ago.

It was a long holiday weekend and I shared the ride down from Chicago with some friends in a long nose suburban.

We drove straight thru to Memphis by taking turns driving the suburban.

The AC sky class was finishing up just as the sun was going down.

I saw one guy (Bobby T I believe) totally vaporize an antenna just because it had some edges on it that were not smoothed down enough.

When he keyed down his antenna looked like a prop from some mad scientist movie, with huge sparks flying out from it.

Toll Free was there and attempted to take some video of a vehicle that would actually have a visible corona all around it, like St. Elmo's Fire, whenever it keyed up.

When he got to where he was only about 20 feet away, his video camera died! (Actually it fried!)

The car with the Corona around it was running a specially built motor like the ones used by the drag racers, and was running Nitrous besides, so he could kick in the nitrous when his 900+ HP motor would start to bog down under the alternator load.

It really looked neat at night with 20 foot bursts of flame suddenly exploding out of his exhaust pipes when he kicked on the Nitrous!

That keydown was the last time I saw Goldfinger, the best competition alternator installer I ever met, before he passed away.

That was the last major keydown I attended and I really miss all the fun I used to have talking to all the interesting and talented people I used to meet at them.

Regards,

Dennis O.

But you really expect an answer to a question you post, when you will not answer any questions from anyone else?

And you did encourage someone to get his amp modified for CB - it's in the archive, Aaron. Along with all your other lies.

As I've told Frank (whose name is not "yeti" although he claims he

No, what it does is waste a lot of valuable archive space and prove you are a liar, and a lazy one at that.

BS. You proved yourself wrong with your list of DNSs and related ISPs, dimbulb. But if you ever acknowledge it, you won't have anything to troll about, will you?

Deconstructing the sentences of my posts to "prove" that I am pro-CB amplifier is pretty weak Steve, even for you.

So why not send Frank an email. That would instantly prove that you're

Nothing boring about the FRN. It's been a very useful site since you were forced to leave for causing trouble and slandering people. And just sos you know, theres only 1 administrator on the FRN. The owner.
He has a couple of people acting as moderators to keep things in line.
I've lurked in the UseNet groups for years, bobbie-girl.

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired
for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

Forgive my bluntness Dennis, but it sounds more like a bunch of kids playing with electricity (e.g. let's see who can make the biggest sparks) than anything to do with radio or RF design. I don't think the IEEE would be impressed.

But all kidding aside, I have an idea how you guys could do this thing LEGALLY. Simply run these setups into precision RF power measurement devices and large, efficient dummy loads.

It would signifcantly minimize RF spectrum pollution and also be more considerate to other CB users in the area. You could still compete for who has the highest output, and the bonus is you'd get more accurate test measurements to determine the winner.

You could also make "big sparks" to your heart's content. Best of all it's completely LEGAL.

Think about it. It'd be like a bunch of outlaw street racers who decide to take their competition to a closed track --- instead of using the streets of a run-down neighborhood that's not policed well. It's not only responsible, it's admirable. And the "neighborhood" would love you for it.

Exercise of the brain is as important as exercise of the muscles.

As we age, it's important that we keep mentally alert. The saying: "If you don't use it, you will lose it" also applies to the brain, so.....

Below is a very private way to gauge your loss or non-loss of intelligence.

OK, relax, clear your mind and... begin.

1. What do you put in a toaster?

The answer is bread. If you said "toast", then give up now and go do something else. Try not to hurt yourself. If you said, "bread", go to question 2.

2. Say "silk" five times. Now spell "silk". What do cows drink?

Answer: Cows drink water. If you said "milk", please do not attempt the next question. Your brain is obviously overstressed and may even overheat.
It may be that you need to content yourself with reading something more appropriate such as "Children's World". If you said "water", proceed to question three.

3. If a red house is made from red bricks and a blue house is made from blue bricks and a pink house is made from pink bricks and a black house is made from black bricks, what is a greenhouse made from?

Answer: Greenhouses are made from glass. If you said "green bricks", what the heck are you still doing here reading these questions?????
Dang.....
If you said "glass", then go on to question four.

4. Twenty years ago, a plane is flying at 20,000 feet over Germany. If you will recall, Germany at the time was politically divided into West Germany and East Germany. Anyway, during the flight, TWO of the engines fail. The pilot, realizing that the last remaining engine is also failing, decides on a crash landing procedure. Unfortunately the engine fails before he has time and the plane crashes smack in the middle of "no man's land" between East Germany and West Germany. Where would you bury the survivors - East Germany or West Germany or in "no man's land"?

Answer: You don't, of course, bury survivors. If you said ANYTHING else, you must NEVER try to rescue anyone from a plane crash. Your efforts would not be appreciated. If you said, "Don't bury the survivors" then proceed to the next question.

5. If the hour hand on a clock moves 1/60th of a degree every minute then how many degrees will the hour hand move in one hour?

Answer: One degree. If you said "360 degrees" or anything other than "one degree", you are to be congratulated on getting this far, but you are obviously out of your league. Turn your pencil in and exit the room. Everyone else proceed to the final question.

6. Without using a calculator - You are driving a bus from London to Milford Haven in Wales. In London, 17 people get on the bus. In Reading, six people get off the bus and nine people get on. In Swindon, two people get off and four get on. In Cardiff, 11 people get off and 16 people get on. In Swansea, three people get off and five people get on. In Carmathen, six people get off and three get on. You then arrive at Milford Haven. What was the name of the bus driver?

Answer: Oh, for heaven sake! It was YOU, cheesebreath! Read the first line!!!

How'd you do?

Yes, again are you hard of hearing or can't read Randy was using my call it is almost as comical as you saying someone used your computer when

I wouldn't have to admit to nothing, since I have never posted from MIBX, not even 1 time, nor do I post from aol. LOL I have broad shoulders If I did I would have no problem admitting to it, it isn't like you are or could do something about it. And after all your crying and whining to ISP's, why is it if I did all you say I still have the same one as I started with. When you can put my IP with any mibx post or a post coming from somewhere else

It's pretty obvious there's no such thing as a victimless crime in

I would have to say that there were those who were there for the sparks, (and I was one of them) , and there were those RF types that were there simply because they didn't think the numbers were possible, (and I was one of them also).

> I don't think the

Me either.

But then again I was never very impressed with the IEEE so were about even!

> But all kidding aside, I have an idea how you guys could do this thing

I suggested that, like putting my motorcycle on the dyno in Daytona where they give prizes for the bike tested with the most horsepower. I didn't even get close to the big prize but I got a T-shirt for having one of the ten most powerful stock bikes they tested.

I agree, but I could never make it happen because the folks doing it are having too much fun to change.

Maybe in the future, if Riley ever cracks down on such events, that could happen, but I don't think he will because he realizes that those folks are not the problem with the CB band.

What Riley understands and what others on this group don't seem to understand is that these guys, the really serious ones, have so much money tied up in their equipment that they don't use it for everyday talking. They are only a 'nuisance' for two or three 15 second transmissions every 3 months or so. That's only an average of 15 seconds a month, or a total of about 3 minutes a year!

They are much less than 1% of Riley's problem.

Their antenna tuning is done with HP network analyzers and other expensive equipment and their testing is usually into a dummy load until keydown day arrives.

The guys causing the most problems are the wannabees, many of them being licensed ham operators, and they seem to need to be the air getting their daily dose of ego reinforcement almost all the time.

> You could also make "big sparks" to your heart's content.

I would rather watch others do it. It's less expensive and a lot more fun that way.

> Best of all
> it's completely LEGAL.

Since when is watching a keydown an illegal act?

It's human nature for more folks to rent the movie 'Fast and Furious" than to rent the 2002 LeMans documentary. Similar displays of speed and talent, but one is a lot more exciting than the other. One is illegal, the other is not.

Keydowns would not be nearly as titillating if all everyone did was sat around and watched the oil boil in a dummy load.

Then you have good ground propagation characteristics in your area.
Consider yourself lucky in one respect, but also realize that it also increases the noise on the band because of a much larger area covered by ground-wave propogation.

So who decides which laws are obeyed and which are broken? You?
Seriously witchdoc, the "I make my own laws" type of thing may have worked for wilderness fur trappers in 1802, but it's not feasible in 2002. Especially if you want to be part of modern society here in the USA. So you have three choices: become politically active and change the laws you don't like, break the laws you don't like and then cry when you're punished, or buy your own island and live on nuts and berries by yourself. Let us know how it goes. -A

Strangely enough, I have to agree with you there, but only to a point:
These wannabes get their inspiration from somewhere, and "somewhere" is usually a keydown, or at least the radios used in keydowns.
Regardless of the source of their inspiration, the result is a mess, and keydowns don't help one bit. Not only that, but there is potential for real problems with such high levels of RF, not just from the biological effects, but even short-term RFI. Playing with that kind of power is reckless and irresponsible, and there is a reason why it's illegal. It's only a matter of time until one or more people get seriously hurt or killed -- directly or indirectly -- because of one of those keydowns, and it won't be too hard to figure out the cause.

And for those people that would say that I'm over-reacting, maybe they should study their history books a bit harder -- it's full of incidents where all but a few people thought that a disaster couldn't happen. Even recent events reflect this type of apathy. So have your laughs now, because I will be vindicated in due time. Human nature will make sure of that.

He's the only one you can hear? You mean you don't have any background noise on the band where you are? Wow! That's some REALLY good ground wave propogation -- delivers the signal and eliminates all the other signals, too!

Seriously, Timmy, until I see some field-strength figures I'm still going to stand by my original statement that he's probably only putting out a kilowatt or two MAX. The difference in what you are hearing is that most of the people on the band are probably running legal power, and it also means that the legals (and probably many illegals) are getting stepped on in vast numbers. I wouldn't put much money on the survival of that rig against the FCC in the near future, especially now that you have identified him.

Tim, forget it. As far as "errors" (and I know little about keydowns and would just as soon not go to one), the 50% maximum theoretical efficiency applies to class A amplifiers. You will obtain over 50% on AB1 and around 60% on AB2 operation. Maybe 65% on class B. 50 horsepower for filaments? Last I remember (and I'm getting kinda old), half of 1492 (or 746) watts was one horsepower. So even allowing for losses, 600 times 50 would be umm ... 30,000 watt FILAMENTS? As to ground propogation, it DOES NOT EXIST at 27 MHz. You are either depending upon space wave (line-of-sight) or (and this is what is doing it) SCATTER. Scatter can produce a pretty good signal over a large area when you've got a lot more than 6 aa alkaline batteries behind your signal. This applies to VHF and UHF as well as 27 MHz. Kinda like you can't see the searchlight at the car dealership, but you can see the searchlight beacon in the sky many miles away. You don't need line of site - especially when you're in the killowatt and up range. Your observations are very likely accurate - much more so than the posts you have been responding to.

DAS is a wholesale distributor. To the best of my knowledge they have two house brands that are made by someone else with their name stamped on it. Maybe Barjan is making the stuff for them, I am not sure. Also I believe that Barjan also sells under the Diesel name. I do not think this stuff is bad just an economy line. Barjan also has bought out Wilson Antenna and Francis. Jim Wilson is manufacturing Cell Phone and Two Way antennas under the name Wilson Electronics. His base antenna business was bought out by Majestic Communications many years ago as well. Hope this helps a bit.

I had to think about this one for a bit. I got the answer, but I felt that I HAD to place an editorial comment with it: If the hour hand on a clock only moves 1 lousy degree in an hours time (which is the case with this clock) then the damn clock is defective. I figure in an hours time,

Actually, if he's any distance away, it won't be ground wave. Ground wave doesn't exist much over 3 MHz or so - certainly not at 27 MHz. Tim has it right about the 'strong ass signal' - what he is experiencing is 'scatter'. Scatter will allow you to work stations over a hundred miles away if you have a good antenna and fairly good power. This will apply at 27 MHz, VHF, and UHF as well ... I'm sure you've heard FM stations from more than 30 miles away - 24/7 - this is scatter.

Given the dressings I have gotten from him about hanging out on CB in virtually identical language, I strongly suspect friend George WA3MOJ is also Aaron Voobner as well as middlefinger4. Several other wierd coincidences lead to this suspicion. No big deal, one more for Bozo*Flush. His reaction to Chris passing the Extra was to my mind incompatible with being a human being let alone an OT extra licensed nearly as long as I have.

yes franky thats exactly what i mean. during the night time when the dx noise falls down the band is silent except for those talking locally. i have no background noise and the big radio guys in houston run channel 12 which is totally empty in my area at almost all times so its easy to hear faint signals from afar and he is by and far the loudest one of them all base or mobile and your excuse for them probably running legal radios is a joke. i know for a fact that most everybody on that channel runs power and he is the only one that is reliably loud. >He's the only one you can hear? 2 kw's dead key and about 8kw pep would probably be about for his average talking when i hear him because he doesnt have it all the way pumped up.

the thing is frank i actually talk on the band and can ask people what there running and make comparisons. after ten or 11 years of operations you can more or less tell the difference everytime between a barefoot station and a station running a amp if you know where there located.

> I wouldn't put much >money on the survival of that rig against the FCC in the near future,

thats what y'all said about another certain high profile exham from houston who still remains on the air daily. they were worried about getting him running a 100 wat ham rig more than they were the many hundreds of high powered guys on 6 or even the other 20 or so people the guy busted was talking to at the time. the only reason he ever had a problem was from kerchunking the 2 meter machine they just nailed him for the 11 meter operations because he happened to be there at the wrong time, it isnt what they were after.

Class A theoretical limit is 50%, and that's assuming your signal swings B+ to Gnd 100% of the time -- that's not possible with AM.
Plate-circuit efficiency for Class AB1 is in the 25 to 50% region.

> 50 horsepower for filaments?

My mistake, I grabbed a datasheet for a tube that uses 50 amps and calculated about 5 hp, but I put down the 50 instead of the 5.

Of course you have some ground-wave at 27 MHz. You have ground-wave propogation at UHF, it just isn't very significant. Line-of-sight isn't always possible in my area (lots of hills & valleys), and trees don't scatter 27 MHz very well, but I still get quite a few good signals on 27 MHz. Now if what you said was true and the band didn't have any ground-wave propagation I would be in a radio dead-zone, which it is for VHF-hi and above, but not for CB.

Then perhaps you have the field-strength measurements for some of these alleged 20 and 50 kW mobiles? ...no? ...I didn't think so. BTW, I have been brushing up on propogation for the amateur exam, I suggest you do the same.

Why are you always stoned, Timmy? Is life too tough to face sober? You can't enjoy the world without weed? I'm not jealous at all, and I'm certainly not worried about your drug addictions. You should be, however. One day you will wake up and realize all the time you wasted getting wasted. hmmm i dont know what that means but sinc ei dont wear tuxe's or tailor made suits i'll remember that if i get married one day

no because your always super specific had you meant 8kw pep you would have said 8 kw pep and not 2kw. besides if thats all he's running its just coasting along anyways so insinuating it couldnt do more is just silly

>Ah, yes, now I understand you, Timmy: "I can hear them, so they must

yes franky, when i hear him above and beyond all other bases and mobiles he must be running power. he damn sure doesnt have his long nosed suburban parked on top of a 250 foot tower and there are no big hills here to park on either

Well I'll tell ya what, Timmy. I really don't care to talk to very many people anyway, for exactly the same reasons you just described. I would probably get sick of you really quick if this wasn't a

Back to the apples/oranges analogy, you are saying that a basket full of oranges holds more apples than a basket full of apples. Class C is not more efficient as an amplifier for AM and SSB because you can't use Class C in those modes -- it causes mondo distortion and spreads harmonics all the way up to daylight. Class C is used for FM or CW amplification, or AM/SSB when the amplifier is also the modulating stage. And just to resolve the keyclown voodoo spin on the word, the "modulating stage" is where the RF and audio signals are mixed; i.e, the CB radio itself, not any amplifer that you plug in afterwards,
even if some keyclown calls it a "modulator".

Twist:

Chalk it up to a misunderstanding then. The post I read was quoted exactly as it showed up in my reader, with no changes made by me, so either Netscape's news reader (which I'm using) is really fucking up quotes only for certain people, or your news reader isn't posting the >'s by each line quoted as most other news readers do.. Either way, it looked to me like you had typed what I'd quoted. If you didn't, as you say you didn't, then it's an error. (And I'm ready to admit my errors.) In any case, whoever typed "Hams with 10M privs.... yadda yadda ... don't post here and don't care" (paraphrasing) was dead wrong, and THAT was the point of my reply.

*You're right...but the older Ford trucks, such as his year, were much the 302 is a good engine, I have an 84 Mercury Grand Marquis, the body is in mint condition as is the interior, and now the head gasket blew, so I am going to pull the engine and rebuild it. It is the first ford product I have ever liked. Prior to that I owned all mopar or chevy. 73

I like the Grand Marquis. Have you ever seen the Grand Floridian edition? They are loaded with all options and have a little gold emblem on each side with the state of Florida outlined and inside the car is a gold plaque with the engraved number to that specific car, as they were limited. If I lived in the north, my preference may be different due to the rust factor on those damn Fords, but I haven't found a Chevy truck that quite rides like a Ford truck. I've owned the Jap vehicles and learned my lesson. But that noise in a Ford with a cb is pretty infamous........

what i meant by this is no matter how illegal marijuana or anything just as trivial is it will not make the entire world consider it to be "wrong" solely based on its legal status. how hard is that to understand? and it is up to each individual to decide what he or she considers trivial, that can not be legislated either. we can all agree on whats legal or not because its there on black and white but never will everybody agree on whats right or wrong.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

thats what y'all said about another certain high profile exham from houston who still remains on the air daily. they were worried about getting him running a 100 wat ham rig more than they were the many hundreds of high powered guys on 6 or even the other 20 or so people the guy busted was talking to at the time. the only reason he ever had a problem was from kerchunking the 2 meter machine they just nailed him for the 11 meter operations because he happened to be there at the wrong time, it isnt what they were after.

His concern is genuine, I assure you. As the artchives will attest, he and his anti-cb brethren have been saying this since we allowed them to play with us a few years ago....so who from the group was busted besides them (losing ISP's)? We're still busting grapes all over 11 meter...and enjoying the hell out of it......

Hmmmm...going by that, I'm at a halfway point on the 302. Burns no oil (change it every 3000 on the dot 'cause of the heat in the 'pile and towing) smooth as a babies behind to shift, quiet and smooth ride cab, AC is ice cold, and that's SAYING something in this state. It's quiet running and no misses, pings, or valve knocks. I haven't flushed the tranny yet, but I'm beginning to wonder if I should. I know it was bad timing, but the last time I had a tranny flushed (Chrysler) it went south a few months later. What do they say "If it ain't broke, don;t fix it?" It holds an old cb and it gets out. Oh yea, it can also power a decent sized linear (for us mudchickens) if yer' so inclined.

Page 295

The FCC or the Canadian Radio Telecommunications Commission regulates the use of mobile communications systems such as two-way radios, telephones, and theft alarms that are equipped with radio transmitters. Any such equipment installed in your vehicle should comply with FCC or CRTC regulations and should be installed only by a qualified technician.

Mobile communications systems may harm the operation of your vehicle, particlularly if they are not properly designed for automotive use or are not properly installed. For example, when operated, such systems may cause the engine to stumble r stall. In addition, such systems may themselves be damaged or their operation affected by operating your vehicle. (Citizens band (CB) transceivers, garage door openers, and other transmitters whose power output is 5 watts or less will not ordinarily affect your vehicle's operation.)
Because we have no control over the installation, design, or manufacture of such systems, Ford cannot assume responsibility for any adverse effects or damage that may result if you use this equipment.

Not necessary. All he (or you, for that matter) has to do is check any number of my posts and you'll see that the DNS is the same (except for the last two or three digits, which is the port), and it is NOT the same as any of those you posted in your list. How come I've pulled so many Japanese trucks and Chevys out of the swamps then? I've found Ford, Jeep and Dodge are good in the billabong, Chevys tend to stall or get stuck. The only thing funnier is those new wannabe SUVs coming into the woods (some aren't even on a truck frame).

What you, whomever you are, can't seem to grasp is the fact that insults only have meaning if you give them meaning. Twist didn't insult me, because I wasn't insulted by what he said. He was under an incorrect impression, as was I. I thought he wrote something he didn't, and he thought I was attacking him because of it. Two mistakes.

It's funny how two intelligent people can work past their misunderstandings and come to an understanding.. It's even funnier how some anonymous ass can take potshots without accomplishing anything worth mentioning.

Just trying to open your mind.. Your "insults" mean nothing, as do your anonymous posts.

Works the same the other way round.
They certainly "stick up" for each other.

I also noticed that when I psed Frank off, the UK group got a sudden burst of abusive trolling from America, aimed at me.
I don't think he liked the fact that he had been caught out by such an obvious trap, specially after months of looking at it... lmao.

But then, the same thing happened when I disagreed with Voob... sudden trolling on the UK newsgroup. Chances are that it will happen again now, as I have mentioned them.
No big deal, most of the UK group regulars have blocked Aaron and xganon... he got such a spanking on that group,
he probably couldn't sit down for a week.

As mentioned by someone else, the pin-out is different.
In the Lincoln, this can be got around by moving some of the components to different holes in the board.

Yes, this does give a lower output power. Although the 1969 is capable of putting out the standard power (it is used in some small amps), the internal capacitance, gain,
etc will be different... resulting in the lower output.

The MRF455 does take some fitting, with a change of mounting type. I have the information somewhere in my books.

Someone once suggested a "2SC1945" to me. According to my databooks, the pin-out matches and it is capable of the power output required.
I have never tried one myself, but I know that they are quite cheap over here.

If you try one, let me know how it goes.

Regards,

Peter.

No, not me.
I do sometimes use the USA frequencies, but with FM.

Don't sweat... the hero never dies, ask our resident James Bond expert... If I drive off the edge of a local tor, it turns into a helicopter, just like in the movies. If I drive into the local resovoir, it turns into a speedboat.

That's how I travelled so many miles so fast... down the canals.
The "vannie job" is just a cover for my real job, that's how I was

Must be right, Aagent Aaron couldn't have been wrong.

With the decline in interest in radio, we should all (CBers and Hams) be trying to encourage newcomers, lead them further into the hobby, and keep them there.

I know that some feel that the bands are safe, regardless of numbers using it... but I disagree. Just as some frequency allocations are internationally agreed, so they could internationally agree that the amount of use no longer justifies the amount of space. I am sure that all governments would welcome the finances that re-allocating a part of a band could bring.

In spite of being in Europe, we in the UK had our own CB allocations which matched no other... the European "standard" was illegal here for years.
There was meant to be a common standard across europe, but you will find that there have always been differences. So, one country can step out from a "standard".

A while after CB became legal here, they withdrew the 934MHz spec, promising that existing sets could be used for their lifetime. When they saw the money that they could make from the band, they changed their mind and made the use of the radios illegal.

> Doug, George, Frank and the others are doing > exactly that, and think "they are winning" when all they are being is

I fail to see why they continue. In the time I have been on the group, there seems to have been no major changes. It seems that many of those on this group have been on here a few years and have still not been chased away.
They seem to be getting nowhere... the same people are still here, people are still talking about and selling what they want.

> Again, you got it right on the barrelhead. They still cannot get over

So, your government will take Ham bands away, if there is another use for them.
Maybe these people should stop blaming CBers and start using what they do have... before a better use is found for that.

When we got our UHF CB taken away, it was not the fault of those who it was re-allocated to... if not them, then someone else would have been given it, as we were not using it.

Yep.
He claims that it is only "keyclowns" that he goes after, but all he has to do is call someone a "kyclown" and he thinks that makes them a legitimate target.
I notice that they are keen to label someone as "illegal" without proof.

You can use a Class A amp for AM just fine; in fact, most of the small-signal amplifiers in your radio are working Class A. But for a power amplifier it's not very efficient. You can get two to three times the power from a Class AB with almost no increase in distortion, however it requires a tuned output tank. Class AB push-pull is the functional equivalent of Class A but with much better efficiency, and it requires no output tank (although some sort of filtering is always a good idea).

You have not only been mentioning us, you have been in here trolling for my attention for several posts now, Peter, and doing it rather poorly. If you are here to stir up trouble you need to make a much better effort than this.

You say I was "blocked", hence no one is able to read posts from me. Then how could I get "spanked" if I was blocked? See? You can't even get your stories worked out properly. Back to the drawing board, Peter.

Odd, I have been scanning 10 for three mo. and I have not heard one trucker. If I did, I would not get my underwear in my crack about it anyway.
The truckers do not use yagis or beams or J poles. They use a simple CB antenna. They cannot hurt you, why have a cow?

Hey Doc,

What year is this Ford? That is a hell of a lot of miles. I'm assuming you've gone through just about every part on the old beast more than once. Wonder if I can keep my Jeep running that long....that's a hell of a lot of driving. I'm pushing only 152,000 now and she's starting to show a little age. Leaking rear main seal, small drip not even enough to leave a stain. Sounds like a little piston slap developing, don't know what I'm gonna do about that. Never had a vehicle long enough to encounter this before. Other than that she's runs great still looks very good cosmetically, just need to fix that saggy headliner.

3041. what's going on with Radio Shack??

I went to my local Radio Shack today to try to order a service manual for my failing TRC-465. The store owner told me that in all the years he has owned the store (26 years), no one has ever requested a "service" manual, owner's manuals only. He even said he doubted any service manuals were available, even by special order. I told him I had obtained a CB service manual at a different Radio Shack about 5 years earlier and he acted like he couldn't believe it. He then said he would try to obtain one and made a phone call while I waited. He returned with surprising news, at least to me: Service manuals are not available. Why?, I asked. His answer was that technology has changed a lot in the last 5 years and manuals for older, obsolete products are not kept on file.

What's going on here? Did I go to the wrong Radio Shack and find an uninterested salesman, or are manuals truly no longer available? If this is the case, there are a lot of Radio Shack products, CB or not, that could be affected by this. And for anyone who likes to save on costly repairs by doing-it-yourself, this new policy is a great deterrent.

Opinions (or facts)?

Dont expect to get answers at RS anymore. As far as the Service Manual...go to RS website and look for it there...I've had success ordering old parts for old stuff.

Gee, sounds like what the founders of our country said with the laws/taxation. They decided the laws were unacceptable and did something about it. Marijuana, as I remember (little joke), was legal until the cigarette cartel decided they needed a monopoly. Dont give me the "it's a controlled substance/drug" BS. Nicotene as well is a drug. Nicotene is addictive, physically. T.H.C. is not addictive physically however some argue it can be a mental addiction (i agree with this point of view). The only true fear is the users who start with pot and may step up to worse drugs or may commit crimes to afford their use/habit.....my 0.02

Heck, from what I've heard, Rat Shack pays very poorly. I don't know what one expects from people paid low wages, but if they actually become technically knowlegeable, they'll jump ship in a hurry for an opportunity to actually earn enough money to take them above poverty level. I ran into a guy at Sears about two years ago working in their computer department at pretty miserable wages - he had some certifications and was getting his associates' degree and was going on for his bacculaureat. He left there over a year ago. Likely is making twice what he made there. Same thing. Nothing wrong with learning anywhere, but if there is no future with a given corporation, why stay? If you don't learn anything but 'do a good job', you'll be able to keep your job - and drive any knowlegable customer bats!

You must have the same radio that dickie crainumless has, he can't hear truckers on 10 meters either. I have been listening to truckers on 10 meters the last two days. As for as them being there, they are not supposed to be there. The 10 meter band is for license amateur radio use, not for free use by truckers or anyone else who does not hold an amateur radio operator's license, and they are interfering with amateur radio.

I'll cut to the chase here......

People moved in next door 2 months ago. Didn't see much of them; career couple I suppose. I get off shift at 2:00am in the morning, come home and turn on the rig. Nothing. Dead Air. SWR is screwy. Antenna line is cut.

So I setup one of those low light IR wireless cameras and use Homewatcher after I replaced the coax. Talk on the rig for a few days. Sure enough I catch the guy next door cutting the cable. So I have this video but I am not sure if I want to confront him or just "guard" the coax with conduit or something. Since I am running some juice, etc....I don't want to draw attention from the local feds. On the other hand, The video plainly shows the guy trespassing and I can just go with that and have him busted, like "turning the tables". I'm stuck here with differing feelings about what to do. Sad thing is I have to live beside these people probably for many years to come.

What's a guy to do?

Correct me if I'm wrong, but a reduction of power by 1/2 is a 3 db decrease (I'm guestimating that the 1969 would output about half the power of the 477). The person on the receiving end wouldn't notice much difference. Actually, in practice though I have found that this is not always the case. A lot seems to depend on the conditions and set-ups.

I'm probably going to just stick with the C1969. I could go with a 455, but then I'd have to worry about the proper fitting.

That transistor sounds familiar. I may have run across it in the past. I believe it has about the same output as the '69, but I will have to check into this.

I'll leave a post. The need hasn't come up just yet, but with the half a dozen "477" models I have here, one of the finals is sure to go one of these days.

Sorry, I have seen some people on 11 M running pretty high numbers, but these I have more than a little trouble believing.

Could these power levels be done? Yes. Could they be done in a vehicle you could then drive around while transmitting these levels? I do not believe so. I really want to see the simple stuff first, like what kind of feed line are they running and what kind of mobile antenna would allow this power level without major issues.

And as for the "8 250 amp alternators and a separate 350 to run them in the back of the van", that is just a bit far fetched (and intellectually challenged). Why not just install a separate generator back there? Onan makes a nice little 30 kw unit that would be much easier to install and use, as it puts out 208 VAC 60 Hz 3 phase power.

Now, 20 kw ERP would be a LOT easier to believe. And not all that terribly uncommon in some areas (at least for bases).

aboslutley not. AC amp means sit and talk DC means ride and talk.

there running 1/2 inch hardline in most cases. antennas such as the davemade rod of god, 55's and alot of other custom antennas that arent sold by copper or the others can handle huge amounts of power

Ask him why he's cutting your coax. Call him on the phone or just walk up and talk to him in person. That's what an adult would do. Find out what his problem is. Then you can determine if there's something you're doing that is causing him to vandalize your coax, or if he's just plain crazy. Of course since you're running illegal power, you're probably interfering with his TV, computer, or stereo. In that case you don't have a legal leg to stand on. You'd be well advised to work with him to solve the problem rather than bring the police into it, who will tell him to file an official complaint with the FCC. Of course if you follow the advice of some in this NG who tell you to physically assault him or vandalize his property, then the police will be involved anyway before long.

First a fact; I have in my possession a "Service Manual" for a TRC 448, which was made in the late 70's, so at one time at least, there were service manuals available from the Shack.

Now an opinion:
I believe the salesman was not that interested in helping you. You were not interested in buying a cell phone or a computer, so he couldn't care less. You might try calling their corporate headquarters yourself, or leaving an e-mail on their web page, and you'll get a better answer. In all likelyhood, they no longer publish service manuals since consumer electronics have become much more disposable. But they might still have some older ones around, if you find the right person.

Is SAMS still in business? They might have a book that covers your rig.

If someone who does not have a license operates on the Ham bands, it is NOT a "victimless crime". The victims are all the Ham with whom that person interferes.

The same is true for those that run power on the CB band, throw carriers or play music, use noise toys/echo etc or operate between channels. In this case, the victims are legal CBers.

When it comes to RF transmission, there are not many illegal actions that are "victimless".

I could have fun with this.....

First off, if you can clearly identify the person on the tape, cutting your cable, I would march right over there and show it too him, with the warning that if it happens again, the next people to see the tape will be the cops.

If you do choose to take legal action, (Which you are entitled to do, as your neighbor was tresspassing and causing malicious damage), you would be well advised to put away all of your illegal radio gear, and run a stock setup, as the obvious ramifications of illegal radio gear would not be in your favor.

I'm betting that your cowardly neighbor, once confronted with the evidence, will either back down, or he might attempt to do more covert "harrassment". In any case, I'd look into re-routing your coax, to a less accessable spot.

Truckers deal with emergencys more often than hammies. Truckers are more

There are no hams on 27.555, just illegal radio operators. The playing field is level there. No one has any more or less right to be as illegal as anyone else.

Dave, hold your personal feelings and emotions in check for a second...there are many hammies on 555...I could make a lonnnng list of hammies that DX there and very near there.Youo are correct, the playing field is somewhat level there, as the cbers sometimes have as much power as the hammies. It isn't about legalities, it's about hammies on triple 5, and there are many.

I know I'm an ass.. That's beside the point. I've never hidden my identity.

You can't prove that dyslexia has anything to do with intelligence because the two aren't related in any way, shape, or form. Kindof like cerebral palsy and intelligence aren't related; those who have it look retarded to the great unwashed, uneducated, anonymous fops such as yourself, but the truth escapes is just the opposite.

I just went in to our local Radio Shack and asked to see their 2 meter handheld. The sales person said they don't have anything like that, but they have some real nice '2 mile' radios. The 2 meter was sitting right there on the shelf next to the '2 mile' radio.....

Perhaps I didn't state it clearly enough: In order to achieve the theoretical 50% efficiency possible with Class A it would be necessary to have a signal that runs from ground to B+ 100% of the time. The only types of modulation where that might be possible is FM and CW, because both have a constant signal level. AM and SSB demand that the level of the signal vary in amplitude (hence the designation
'Amplitude Modulation'), so in those cases it will never be possible to get 50% efficiency out of a Class A amp; even with 100% modulation 100% of the time, the best you can hope for is 25% efficiency.

I couldn't agree more. I'm already looking into getting the Uniden Pro 810e manual, the radio of which has the same chassis. I emailed Uniden so I should get a response soon. And I don't think the store owner was interested in helping me. He wasn't even going to call until I told him that I bought a manual a few years earlier.

If its a Class A amp, it conducts a 100% of the time. And 25% is about the expected efficiency of a Class A amp. Under what conditions would you see a class A amp have 50% efficiency? I just don't see a class A amp not be usable on AM, unless you overdrve it.

Avoid the brain dead middle person. Go to Radio Shaft's web page, get the 800 number and call them with your credit card in hand. Then get on with your life as the manual (if available) comes in the mail.

RS is not carrying manuals for a lot of older products as they once did. The more current stuff is probably in stock.

Many of their CB's were covered in Sams books, so a search in that direction might be handy.

Owners Manual can also be obtained by their automated fax back program which works pretty well.

Yes, but what is motivating him to do this? He's obviously had experience with this sort of thing and somebody's told him how to mess up somebody's radio. It may be that his TV or computer is suffering overload. That is, after all, why that cutting coax thing gets discussed--even in here. OTH, the one doing the cutting, I would think, has some obligation to discuss the problem with the gentleman that he "thinks" is causing the trouble. What if it is somebody else bothering his electronics? After all, you don't just march onto somebody's property and start damaging stuff.
Yet, if the operator is running illegal stuff, amps, etc., then it would be wise to get rid of it because,
sooner or later, it will come back to "bite" him.

True, if we got rid of the truckers, everything would ship by rail.
Lots cheaper, plus we would have the a large group of out of work truckers to work at McDonalds flipping burgers. At least they have the training for it.

Technically, there are NO hams on 555, since that is not a legal ham band. What you may have are a lot of illegal operators that also have ham licenses. But when they are operating on .555, they are most certainly NOT hams.

The international community of Amateurs. When something is illegal,
people don't,
thankfully, get rewarded for defying the law. They suffer the consequences of their actions.
Ole Clinton was "important" to the country, but it didn't stop him from getting into trouble for his antics. Multi-millionaire executives are on the news regularly these days; they thought they were "important" and above the law as well. But they got arrested, fired, punished for their misdeeds.

I've heard that line about truckers being so all-fired "important" everytime
the issue of stealing frequencies, operating out of band--whatever one wants to call it--comes up.
It will NOT fly.
There is NO justification for their lawlessness in stealing what rightfully belongs to others. They have 40 distinct channels that they can use to their hearts' content. I wonder if the Cheetah driver
that got caught "being more important" than hams is willing to make the same mistake? It is NOT the fault of the Amateurs that some CBers do not have the personal discipline it takes to use the ether in a responsible, courteous, lawful manner that would reduce interference and make it possible for all CB operators to use the radio as needed. Nobody needs a 500 watt amp to talk to the next truck; it IS stupid! NO ham needs a 500 watt amp to talk to his local 10 meter group, either. Some operators, CB and ham both, make hardships for others. None of which justifies
operating anywhere one wishes.

The simple fact is that, because of some people's lack of discipline and self-created interference, they will use such as a justification to move farther and farther afield. Those "export" radio companies will respond by building cheap, single-band radios to cover those "extra" channels. It will HAVE to be stopped someday. When those truckers ever interfere with military, aviation, or government HF stations, you'll see just how " important" truckers really are!

The best place to stop it (nip it, NIP IT, as Barney Fife would say) is in the 10 and 12 meter bands before that happens. The Feds know this, and they also know that, if the illegal stuff keeps on, it WILL bring adverse action against CB radio; you can count on it. And it won't make any difference HOW important anybody thinks they are. Bottom line: no matter what truckers think about their importance, CB radio occupies the lowest rung on the ladder of communications; if it didn't, it would be CB instead of Amateur Radio that has, and will have more, protections against
state, local, and association regulations against antennas. <<g>>

Well, you cbers keep saying that when a "cber" is operating in the ham bands or on the "freebands" then he is not a cber, just an illegal operator, so if a ham is operating in the "freeband" he is not a ham, just another illegal operator. Make up your stupid mind, if you have a mind to make up.

Yea? What part of Washington state were you in when you heard what you

TW,

Hams DO run beacons for testing propogation. And it is on CW--you know, there is ONLY supposed to be Morse, RTTY stuff? Yeah, that's it! I can go

Tools,

Regardless of whether I was doing something "illegal", I would take high offense to someone just walking onto my property and cutting my feedlines. Still, The guy does have kind of a paradox;
IF he complains to the law and is doing something illegal, he calls attention to himself which might come back to haunt him later. Those cops may be sympathetic to the coax cutter receiving inteference. And IF his town passes one of those local enforcement things, then they might come back after him instead of the neighbor! He needs to hide his stuff and lay low for awhile if he complains about the damage.

If he lives in Texas, he could just wait till the guy comes to cut the coax again, and shoot the bastard... unless they've changed that law down there.

Not unusual at all to hear truckers and other unlicensed activity in that freq. range. Cruise the 5, 6, 7, 8 10, 12, & 14 mhz bands. They're alive with unlicensed activity.
Truckers routinely use long range HF freqs. for which they are not licensed, as do fishing boats, various companies, recreational boaters, missionaries, etc. All dedicated enforcement monitoring of unlicensed activity ceased in 1996, in spite of the many people who want to spin it otherwise. Check pirate web pages, news groups, and popular freqs. Pirate broadcast activity in on the increase, including talk of a ship being outfitted. CB radio clubs operate openly and continually in the 25, 26, 27, & 28 mhz bands.
CB radio ops are even into digital modes, outside the legal 40 channels.

Thanx Scott, you understand that truckers are kinda sensitive about that sort of thing.
Ya know the AAA has been black-ballin us for years making us out to be maniacs of the hiway when in fact passenger vehicles were found responsible for roughly 80% of all car/truck accidents so we are still recovering from that frame-up.....
Truckers in general are very professional, courteous and still stop to help the occasional 4-wheeler despite the crap we take from them on the hiway. Harvey Firestone drafted
the plan for the Interstate hiway system and Dwight D. put it in motion, the interstate was designed to ship by truck and convey the military but if your a trucker you would swear the 4-wheelers own it, i really don't care for the bastard 4-wheeler but i give em a wide berth anyway.....

Hold the video footage as a wildcard in case he wants to play the

Technically, there are NO hams on 555, since that is not a legal ham band. What you may have are a lot of illegal operators that also have ham licenses. But when they are operating on .555, they are most certainly NOT hams.

When the sine swings from B+ to ground. And that's assuming no other losses, and the tube is linear from rail to rail.

For the third time, I didn't say that Class A was not usable for AM amplification. What I said was that it's impossible for an AM signal to swing from B+ to ground 100% of the time, which is the only condition under which a Class A amp will achieve 50% efficiency. How can I put this in a way that you can understand it? Do I need to start drawing pictures?

The point is that if the truckers ever have a nationwide shutdown, we all suffer. If the hams have a strike, most people won't even notice.

i disagree with this statement. show many any literature or a web page or anything where a 11 meter group promotes going into the ten meter ham band? most of the big groups liek the Alfa Tangos, Sugar Deltas and other do everything they can to keep there guys between 27.415-27.855 but i do agree with you on the rest. 6.900-7.000, 14.800-15.000, 4.000-4.100 and 6.670 are all full of unlicensed guys and have been for a long time. the people on this group are so narrow minded and uneducated on whats really going on all they keep repeating what they hear here about 28.085

Oh, and I suppose that the keyclowns on 27.415 to 27.855 are not
"narrow minded or uneducated on whats really going on"? Which group do you consider yourself to be a part of, Timmy? And do you think it's Timmy, "you [know] damn well" that the properties of the band on those 40 "cahnnels" are useless because they are over-used and over-abused.

And it's funny how your typing goes to shit when you get angry. Or did

    Bottom line..... There are a lot more truckers than hammies. Truckers deal with emergencys more often than hammies.
Truckers are more important for the operation of the country/economy than hammies. Who do you think will win?
>The international community of Amateurs. When something is illegal,
people don't,
thankfully, get rewarded for defying the law. <<

Heya Jer! This can be an interesting thread, hey? With all due respect to your time put in with the rails, the truckers can take the place of the trains, but the trains can't take the place of the truckers.
Truckers may speed a little more than the posted limit, and may have a tricked radio or three, but the majority of the land isn't intersted as long as their diet Lean Cuisines are in the frozen food isle when they go to spend what is left of their paycheck.

>They suffer the consequences of their actions. <

A ticker by an owner operator is a tax write off. And if they aren't doing it, they should be.

>Ole Clinton was "important" to the country, but it didn't stop him from getting into trouble for his antics. Multi-millionaire executives are on the news regularly these days; they thought they were "important" and above the law as well. <<

Yea, like the direct Bush ties with Enron. Or the all the Bush children that are on drugs and receiving preferential treatment.
Or the first lady of Florida declaring her purchased goods after she was caught not declaring them...

>But they got arrested, fired, punished for their misdeeds.
I've heard that line about truckers being so all-fired "important"
everytime the issue of stealing frequencies, operating out of band--whatever one wants to call it--comes up. It will NOT fly.
There is NO justification for their lawlessness in stealing what rightfully belongs to others. They have 40 distinct channels that they can use to their hearts' content. I wonder if the Cheetah driver that got caught "being more important" than hams is willing to make the same mistake? <<

He's probably making more than he was then. I can see it now..."Dat outfit I worked fer, it was so shoddy and the equipment was so dangerous...someone done dropped a dime to the FCC, OSHA, the SSA, the INS, and the DOT and I was in one of them thar trucks that was busted and you just know the company needs a scapegoat...yes suh,,..set up like a bowlin' in.....,haven't missed a day of work in thutty yeahs and I is a real God-fearin' individual fixin' ta' retire in anudder tin or so yeahs"!

>It is NOT the fault of the Amateurs that some CBers do not have the personal discipline it takes to use the ether in a responsible, courteous, lawful manner that would reduce interference and make it possible for all CB operators to use the radio as needed. Nobody needs a 500 watt amp to talk to the next truck; it IS stupid! NO ham needs a 500 watt amp to talk to his local 10 meter group, either. Some operators, CB and ham both, make hardships for others. None of which justifies operating anywhere one wishes.
The simple fact is that, because of some people's lack of discipline and self-created interference, they will use such as a justification to move farther and farther afield. Those "export" radio comp- anies will respond by building cheap, single-band radios to cover those "extra" channels. It will HAVE to be stopped someday.
<<

Or, with the rapid advancement of technology, higher powered cb-type signals on SSB, AM and FM may become even more irrelevant.

> When those truckers ever interfere with military, aviation, or government HF stations, you'll see just how " important" truckers really are!
<<

So far this type behavior has been limited to hammies, hasn't it? Not cbers and not truckers. As a matter of record, aren't hammies responsible for the prosecutions that have taken place concerning such communication interuptions?

?The best place to stop it (nip it, NIP IT, as Barney Fife would say) is in the 10 and 12 meter bands before that happens. The Feds know this, and they also know that, if the illegal stuff keeps on, it
WILL bring adverse action against CB radio;<<

How much more adverse you think it can get?
What the feds do know, is they barely have a grip on hammies, ,,,,,they know they can't handle cbers....its why they gave up in the first place.

> you can count on it. And it won't make any difference HOW important anybody thinks they are. Bottom line: no matter what truckers think about their importance, CB radio occupies the lowest rung on the ladder of communications; if it didn't, it would be CB instead of Amateur Radio that has, and will have more, protections against state, local, and association regulations against antennas. <<g>>
Jerry
<<

This can go both ways. If a neighborhood was to complain about a cbers antenna with no legal or just cause, and the cber was made to take it down...he can always sling a small yagi or dipole IN the attic with a KIXAZZ amplifier pushing way too many watts....which would YOU rather have?
IF that got him in trouble, he may choose to become a nocode to spread his anger.
Common sense works much better.

not at all, we all realize that working between those freqs is relatively harmless since they've been long been abonded by there legitimate users (even though there still allocated) btw the legal UK cb freqs fal within this range as well so if we cause "so much" harm here in this area why dont they cause the same harm? after all there signals are very strong here on this side of the pond.

Bottom line.....doctors deal with emergencies and save lives more often that truckers or airline pilots, so lets let the doctors use airline frequencies. What ignorant logic you use.
--
Well, let's use Hall's logic for a second. He was very particular and selective pointing out that "technically", a hammie on 555 isn't a hammie, but merely an illegal that holds a license. So be it.
THEN..............."technically" a pilot "saves" more lives than a doctor on a regular basis. He flies them at an altitude at which he can choose certain death for up to hundreds of passengers per flight, but he CHOOSES to save them all and land them safely....SO,,,using your semantics and Hall';s technicalities...you are dead wrong about a doctor saving more lives than the pilot...quite ludicrous, isn't it, "JJ"?.

just as there are no CB'ers on 28.085 or 28.225 -
Technically, there are NO hams on 555, since that is not a legal ham band. What you may have are a lot of illegal operators that also have ham licenses. But when they are operating on .555, they are most certainly NOT hams.

Draw yourself a picture, a class A amp won't achieve 50% efficiency.
So get off the 50% stuff. An amp that conducts 100% is class A, and no matter the efficiency it will work with AM. Now do I have to draw you a picture? Now tell me again how you get 50% efficiency out of a

I'd agree with Dave's statement if folks stopped calling the illegal ops. on 10-meters, "CBers." As Sparky once pointed out, once you leave the legal 40 and/or operate using illegal equipment, you cease to be a "CBer." You're just an illegal operator. Now how's THAT for a "level playing field?"

How do you know they are hams? Are they giving ham call signs? And if so, how do you know they are not just bootlegging ham calls?

> but regardless i dont even think your a > ham. just a pretender

Sorry to disappoint you timmy boy, but I was licensed in 1961 when the Novice license could only be taken via mail exam. It had to be administered by another ham who was a General Class or higher. The code test was administered first, and if you passed the forms were mailed to the FCC, the written test was then sent and administered. This was then mailed back to the FCC for grading and you waited several weeks for your call to arrive IF you passed.
The Novice was only good for one year and non renewable, so you either upgraded or went off the air. The novice call sign had an N for the second letter (kN3xyz). Novices were limited to 75 watts input to the final amp and were required to be crystal controlled, no vfo's. I upgraded to Conditional which was also administered via mail like the Novice and carried the same privileges as the General Class. When you upgraded to Conditional/General the N was dropped from your call. I later upgraded to Advanced Class which required that I take General test in addition to the Advance class test all in front of an FCC examiner. I still have my original call sign.
I was a ham when your momma was changing your poopie diapers.

P.S. Learn the proper use of their vs there and your vs you're.

The magnitude different but the effect is the same. Especially when you consider the collective effect of such an 'insignificant' violation comitted by a very significant number of people.

I don't buy cigarettes with the intention of throwing them out the

I never said you said that. You need to go back and reread some earlier postings. It was clearly argued by the cb crowd that the hams should not call those operating illegally in the 10 meter band cber's because they were not operating in the cb band. That one is only a cber when operating in the cb band.

Then they need to apply for a two-way license or use other frequencies that are legally available. Just because the cbers have made the 40 cb channels totally useless because of their refusal to follow any rules or use common courtesy does not give the truckers or anyone else the right to move up into frequencies they are not licensed to use. You still have this mentality that you can just take something just because you want it.

Lets see, if I operate an illegal transmitter on the FM or TV bands and interfere with my neighbor's television and FM reception, the problem is theirs? Their equipment must just accept this interference? Or if I am operating on the ham band and my transmitter is putting out harmonics that integer, their equipment must accept the interference? If I operate a cb station running illegal power and have spurious emissions that cause interference, their equipment must just accept that? Gee, sure did not know that.

I told you to quit listening to Twisty. Those freqs have not been abandoned. They are still allocated AND USED for private, commercial and government services. There is a section that is not "abandoned", but allocated for non-use by anyone. There is a reason for that, Timmy, and just because you can't understand the reason doesn't give you the right to ignore it.

Your ignorance is showing again, Timmy. The modes most often used locally for legitimate services is FM, which will only receive the strongest signal. In 30 years of working with radios of all types I have never heard of a case where an FM radio in the US was interfered with by a CB transmission from the UK. Part of that is because the UK CB for that part of the spectrum is FM only, and wouldn't intefere even if it was local. Also, most of the commercial radios use CTCSS, so even a locally strong FM signal isn't going to break squelch. But strong AM signals certainly can and do cause problems for FM radios.

Ok, so you are a part of the "narrow-minded, uneducated" group. Not suprising since you still can't tell the difference between 'there'
and 'their' even after it's been posted in the newsgroup.

And you are still avoiding the question: do you think it's right to break a law just because it doesn't mean anything to you?

Even if you put a danger high voltage sign on the booby trapped coax you will lose in court. Kindda like the gal who put a steaming burning hot cup of coffee in her lap, drove off, and burned herself. That was Mc Donalds fault wasn't it? I think your response was humorous, but you presented as if you seriously advocate this method!

G Morton, your suggestion doesn't hold water.
First, you are setting up a potentially lethal trap, very remote chance but still possible.
Second, have you ever simultaneously cut through two hot phases? Or cut through a hot and neutral line at the same time? The most likely out come is a pop, a flash of light, his cutters will have a nice burn through the blade and you'll have a tripped breaker.

Woopty Woo. What the hell did that get you? Don't play with electricity you're not qualified. I truly hope and pray you don't do your own electrical work.

Under realistic conditions that's a fair statement. Unless you are talking about the amplification of an amplitude-modulated signal, in which case the maximum theoretical efficiency is going to be 25%.

Gee, didn't I say before that the 50% figure was only a theoretical maximum? I think I did. Hmmm...

Apparently you do, since you seem to be completely out of touch with reality. I think you are looking so desperate for a reason to jump my shit that you can't understand clear and simple English.

I have answered that one as well, but maybe I should post it again just in case you didn't read it the first three times:

>>When the sine swings from B+ to ground. And that's assuming no other

Sounds like a theoretical condition to me, or maybe you have a tube on your shelf that is completely lossless and perfectly linear. Do you?

And the railroads are more than willing to take up the slack. Have you ever seen a RoadRailer? It is a trailer with road and railwheels that can be put into position with trainline airpressure. One engine pulling 20, 30, 40 even, of trailers the drivers don't wanna haul- 20 OTR drivers replaced right there. or more. The railroads have their own truck drivers, and even own their own trucking companies (Overnite=Union Pacific owned, for example).
What do they use those road railers for now? For just-in-time service to auto plants, assembly lines, and factories; fast and cheap. One engine, one engineer and one conductor/brakeman pulling all those trailers replacing striking drivers. Railroad company drivers in each town grab trailers and drop them off to be picked up next day and returned to yard, again 5-10 drivers doing what 20, 30,or 40 of those OTR drivers do. It CAN be done, and methinks the importance of drivers is over-rated in their own minds. NO one is irreplacable!

And again you fall back on the justification of 'insignificance'. It's clear that you really DO think it's right to violate a law as long as you think it's insignificant.

You can't justify your own criminal acts by trying to include me in your clubhouse, Timmy. No, I don't speed. In fact I piss off a lot of other drivers because I like to take my time. I don't even take the freeway if I don't have to. I don't even like driving anymore because I have been hit fifteen times since 1986. Luckily, none of them were serious. But just to make sure you don't misunderstand this:

I don't speed. Period. You can't lay that "one mph over the limit" garbage on me, Timmy.

And, Tim, WHY is it wall to wall noise? That is my point! IF CBers had a bit of discipline, courtesy, and knew more, as a whole, what they are doing, the noise could be decreased by quite a bit! But NO! EVERYbody has to have an amp to talk 2 miles down the road, or to the next truck right in front of him. Before the 70s, I used to lay on my bed with a BACK OF SET Radio Shack antenna and a Raytheon 5-channel CB and talk in a 5-8 mile radius. We had a regular round table most every night. Everybody was courteous, took turns, didn't use power, and we had no trouble talking--even when that roaring skip was in we could talk over it because those people weren't using extra power, either. When the BIG AMPS came along to replace self confidence lost I-don't-know-where, you couldn't talk a mile away. Now, more than ever, there are operators who think THEY have to out-talk the rest in order to feel powerful and replace the "leaking" testosterone. Hey, I don't have a magic answer because you and I both know that it \won't stop without some serious enforcement. It still boils down, nonetheless, to the fact that those truckers have those 40 channels that they can use legally. The hams have the 10 Meter band via licensure. It STILL isn't the hams' fault that those channels are screwed up, nor does it justify stealing frequencies from the rightful users--whether they are occupied or not.

I do have something of a solution, but nobody would like it. Put CB up on FRS and MURS where there is little occasion for skip, and the truckers wouldn't be bothered with all that noise. Form associations and use voluntary bandplans to separate users, so that interfer ence would be kept to a minimum. Yeah, we know that wouldn't be met with joy, don't we? We want to work "DX",

play with BIG POWER, and complain about how we can't talk without our amp.
I don't mean to be ugly, but that's what it amounts to. Really, you can't have it both ways! That is truly what needs to happen; because the general public is NOT radio savvy, VHF/UHF is where CB needs to be to prevent all those "turf" wars, skip, and racket. It WOULD make a difference. Not likely to happen soon. Still, never say never.....

Ten Meters is not being used???????? Not so. Just because they don't hear
"others" beeping and squeaking" up there doesn't mean it isn't being used. Those did-dah-dits and strings of data are being sent exactly where they are supposed to be. Just because the drivers don't understand it doesn't mean it isn't there. It is also why I will send Morse on top of a trucker anytime I hear him on 10 and hope he complains to FCC. Boy, will HE ever be in for a surprise.

BTW, I haven't used my chain saw lately. Does that mean that Bubba Trucker can just go in my shed and "use" it because I'm not? Obfuscate, twist it around, whatever, those frequencies, whether being used at a given time or not, are assigned to licensed persons who thru that license have the right, permission, authority, and reasonable expectation that said frequencies are free and available when needed---NOT occupied by some cretin jabbering , beeping and squeaking away.

99% of the time the problem is that "the neighbors" have CHEAP CONSUMER ELECTRONICS, which don't have the proper RFI protection, and you DO have a legal leg to stand on - he's trespassing AND vandalizing your property. The really nice thing to do is to offer to help him filter out the noise he's getting on his equipment. OR you can move your co-ax so he can't reach it to cut it. The best idea is to let him know that YOU know what he's doing, and try to work it out.

Don't pay any attention to Aanal Aaron, however. He's only a trolling jerk.

Bottom line..... There are a lot more truckers than hammies. Truckers deal with emergencys more often than hammies.
Truckers are more important for the operation of the country/economy than hammies. Who do you think will win?
>The international community of Amateurs. When something is illegal,
people don't,
thankfully, get rewarded for defying the law. <<

Heya Jer! This can be an interesting thread, hey? With all due respect to your time put in with the rails, the truckers can take the place of the trains, but the trains can't take the place of the truckers.

Don't count on that, either. See the RoadRailer thread that should appear here soon.

NO one is irreplacable. Fruits and veggies used to always come by train, and some if it still does. Part of my job in the 80s was checking reefer cars in the yards to see that the gennies were running and the temperatures were correct. Don't think rail CAN'T do the job; they have before and can again!
Truckers may speed a little more than the posted limit, and may have a tricked radio or three, but the majority of the land isn't intersted as long as their diet Lean Cuisines are in the frozen food isle when they go to spend what is left of their paycheck.

See above. You'd be surprised what roadrailers could do.

ticker by an owner operator is a tax write off. And if they aren't doing it, they should be.

>Ole Clinton was "important" to the country, but it didn't stop him from getting into trouble for his antics. Multi-millionaire executives are on the news regularly these days; they thought they
were "important" and above the law as well. <<

Yea, like the direct Bush ties with Enron. Or the all the Bush children that are on drugs and receiving preferential treatment.

Or the first lady of Florida declaring her purchased goods after she was caught not declaring them...

Burn them, too! Wrong is wrong.

unished for their misdeeds.
I've heard that line about truckers being so all-fired "important" everytime the issue of stealing frequencies, operating out of band--whatever one wants to call it--comes up. It will NOT fly.
There is NO justification for their lawlessness in stealing what rightfully belongs to others. They have 40 distinct channels that they can use to their hearts' content. I wonder if the Cheetah driver that got caught "being more important" than hams is willing to make the same mistake? <<

He's probably making more than he was then. I can see it now..."Dat outfit I worked fer, it was so shoddy and the equipment was so dangerous...someone done dropped a dime to the FCC, OSHA, the SSA, the INS, and the DOT and I was in one of them thar trucks that was busted and you just know the company needs a scapegoat...yes suh,,..set up like a bowlin' in.....,haven't missed a day of work in thutty yeahs and I is a real God-fearin' individual fixin' ta' retire in anudder tin or so yeahs"!

He got what he deserved, and I hope plenty more get it soon. Wrong is wrong.

line it takes to use the ether in a responsible, courteous, lawful manner that would reduce interference and make it possible for all CB operators to use the radio as needed. Nobody needs a 500 watt amp to talk to the next truck; it IS stupid! NO ham needs a 500 watt amp to talk to his local 10 meter group, either. Some operators, CB and ham both, make hardships for others. None of which justifies operating anywhere one wishes.
The simple fact is that, because of some people's lack of discipline and self-created interference, they will use such as a justification to move farther and farther afield. Those "export" radio comp- anies will respond by building cheap, single-band radios to cover those "extra" channels. It will HAVE to be stopped someday.
<<

Or, with the rapid advancement of technology, higher powered cb-type signals on SSB, AM and FM may become even more irrelevant.

That's why CB ought to be abolished. It is outdated, the technology is old, it is not expandable where it is, and cell phones, FRS, MURS and email are faster and more reliable. CB ought to be on VHF/UHF. It would stop a lot of the problems that are occurring.

for the prosecutions that have taken place concerning such communication interuptions?

?The best place to stop it (nip it, NIP IT, as Barney Fife would say) is in the 10 and 12 meter bands
before that happens. The Feds know this, and they also know that, if the illegal stuff keeps on, it
WILL bring adverse action against CB radio;<<

How much more adverse you think it can get?
What the feds do know, is they barely have a grip on hammies, ,,,,,they know they can't handle cbers....its why they gave up in the first place.

> you can count on it. And it won't make any difference HOW important anybody thinks they are. Bottom line: no matter what truckers think about their importance, CB radio occupies the lowest rung on the ladder of communications; if it didn't, it would be CB instead of Amateur Radio that has, and will have more, protections against
state, local, and association regulations against antennas. <<g>> Jerry
<<

This can go both ways. If a neighborhood was to complain about a cbers antenna with no legal or just cause, and the cber was made to take it down...he can always sling a small yagi or dipole IN the attic with a KIXAZZ amplifier pushing way too many watts....which would YOU rather have?
IF that got him in trouble, he may choose to become a nocode to spread his anger.
Common sense works much better.

Criminal activity is criminal activity. As to the "antics" of hams, the majority of Amateurs are law-abiding, prefessionally operating stations. Yes, there are a few bad apples, and they should lose their privileges. I wish they would. I have no sympathy for them. There are far more illegal CBers than illegal hams, and I would be willing to bet on it IF solid stats could be found. I have no doubt of the above being fact.

I still say that if these kinds of lawless activities continue, no matter
HOW many people are doing it, mob rule is not a justifiable defense; numbers don't make something right.
Radio cannot be allowed to be turned into a mess like the regular 40 channels have---and it would most certainly do so if the gates were to be opened to allow non-technical, non-trained, BIG POWER, ratchet-jawing people to just operate anywhere they like. If nothing is done to defend 10 Meters

(and it is and WILL be),
how long do you think it would be before it would be just like 11 meters?
How long before 12 meters sounded the same way? Or 20 Meters, or 17 MHZ, or anywhere the drivers roamed? It CAN'T be allowed to happen, and it will not be allowed to happen. Oh, damn it! I wish I lived in the 1930s; at least, people had more discipline about themselves then. I wonder if we could survive a Depression like they did because everybody is so damned "ME" centered nowadays!

Seems he has designed this class A amp that has 50% efficiency.
Now it doesn't work for AM, because the efficiency is too high.
If he gets the amp to drop in efficiency to 25%, like all other class
A amps, it works great with AM and SSB. For some strange reason, it just won't work crrectly when the efficiency is high. What should he do? Drop the drive level?

I don't know about him, but I am on 28.085 a lot. I like CW, and run it pretty regularly. Besides,
it's "my" frequency, not his'n (the trucker, that is). LOL!

Do NOT confront him face to face, that could cause a fight, which could turn deadly depending on the parties involved.
Simply make a police report and let them view the tape if they desire.
He has no right to destroy your property regardless of what you are doing,
and you should be compensated for the damages.
You are however eternally screwed because everything that happens to his t.v. etc will be blamed on you.

Good show, Scott. There may be a few bad apples in any group, but I'd bet that a trucker would fear any traffic violation far more than you or I. They value their license and are almost entirely professional in every way. If a few do stray on 10 meters, I would tend to blame the industry for simply wanting to make more bucks. Heck, if I buy something in the store which is offered for sale, I want to use it. Any warning you may find nowadays are usually written in small print (at least in comparison to the rest of the operator's manual). While I may not enjoy hearing them in 10 meters, I, for one, would not enjoy seeing someone loose his or her job over it. Education is the key, and the vendors are the folks that have access to both the key AND the buyers (but don't bet on them changing their attitudes anytime soon).

In any case, I applaud your apology and that puts you far above many of us in the group.

The maximum theoretical efficiency for a class A amp is 50%. That implies a sine wave running rail to rail (just touching saturation and cutoff). With no input signal, the dissipation remains exactly the same as when running the maximum signal (which means efficiency approaches ZERO at low level inputs). Since pure sine waves are not readily found in nature (our voices are complex waveforms), a class A amplifier typically runs around 25% efficiency at maximum output while still not distorting. If you drive that class A amp so it is putting out as much as it dissipates (50% efficiency), you will NOT be linear; you will be distorting (clipping).

A class AB amp will usually run 50 to 60% maximum efficiency; class B amps will run close to 65%. A class C amp biased to conduct 90 degrees or so of the sine wave will run close to 75%. Class C amps are NOT linear. Switchmode amplifiers can run well over 90% efficiency. It is possible, with extra external circuitry, to use them in a linear fashion.

See my other response. Yes, with a sine wave running rail to rail, efficiency will hit a maximum theoretical 50%. Unfortunately, our voices are not pure single tone sine waves and typical efficiencies run in the 25% range (to remain linear).

Tim, now we are getting comparisons to running equipment where it shouldn't be. The best advice anyone has given is to hide any illegal stuff should he decide to press charges. Myself, I'd hide the stuff, then show the neighbor a COPY of the original video and suggest he hire someone to replace the cut coax. That puts the ball in the neighbor's lap and no one has threatened any legal action. Now, the neighbor has to start thinking ... if he has any smarts at all, he'll realize that anything overpower or whatever is gone or he would not have been shown the video. The ONLY evidence of anything is the videotape of the guy cutting the coax. Oh, you might hook the coax to a scanner .... LOL

As W. C. Fields replied when asked if this was gambling, "not the way I play it".

I'd show it to the neighbor and ask him to replace the coax. No police. However, should the coax cutting neighbor invoke the police (not too bright, as the video shows said neighbor cutting the coax), I'm sure the damaged individual could show the police the scanner connected to the coax inside his house.

Hi guys, long time listener, first time caller and g'day from Australia, the land down under.

I have a question of you technical types out there, I have been causing considerable interference to the neighbour's television, now before anyone accuses me of running illegal power, don't bother. With 12 Watts PEP I am wiping out the television and FM radio next door. My question is this, will a quality in line TVI filter fix this problem or am I better off making a coaxial stub type filter for her equipment? If so, has anyone got instructions for making one of these filters?

What can be done about FM radio interference?

I am at my wits end here, I want to fix this problem so I can get on with chatting to you guys on channel 38.

Thanks for the time to read my post, take care.

That's good, Jerry...real good. Just try and remember that when you're on the side of the road receiving your summons from that nice officer for interference caused by your CB.

JO: "But officer, I'm an amateur radio operator, here's my lic..."

LEO: "That's nice, tell it to the judge. I see an antenna and a microphone. If it looks waddles like a duck, and quacks like a duck, it must be a duck! Like I said, tell it to the judge."

JO: "Hey, we're exempt from..." (At least you didn't get the "I know my rights!" line out. That only pisses 'em off more.)

LEO: <Rip, as ticket gets handed to the newly crowned duck.> "You tellin' me my job! We've had enough of your kind with your leen-yars. You'll get your day in court. Is that clear...or should I say tain-fahr?"

Be careful with that wide paint brush, Jerry. Some of that lacquer may "splash" on you as well. <<snicker, snicker>>

Not around here. Wages have been dropping FAST around here. Our company went from around 61,000 employees to around 22,000. Other companies have been following suit. I'm getting nervous reading ads screaming what great jobs are available - only perhaps 5 years experience as a degreed engineer for THIRTY FIVE K????? Non-degreed jobs run $7.00 to $12.00 per hour - and they demand a lot for that $12.00. Notes, Excel, Word, Visio (Visio?) ... I'm glad I'm nearing retirement. What scares me is how much bs some folks can push off on management and they believe it. I just wrote a proceedure and added some layouts of equipment and was asked what drawing program I used. They guessed Visio since it is on the PC. Heck, I simply used Word - it wasn't that complex and who wants to keep switching around several programs for something that (at least for something relatively simple) is built into the program? They hired one guy because he was computer literate. I found out a year later the only thing he ever did before on a PC was play games. Sigh ...

Hi Freak, (Never thought I'd say that line with such respect.)

Get a good Low-Pass-Filter (LPF) and a good Unun and make sure you have a good RF ground and I'll bet your problem goes away. (You ever see so many 'and's in one sentence? <ggg>) My personal favotites are the Bencher LPF and The Radio Works Line Isolator. (Particularly the 6-meter one for 11-meter work.It's called the T-6.) Line Isolator is just a fancy word for a RF choke designed to couple two unbalanced feedlines, hence, Unun. Unadilla also makes the W2DU Line Isolator too. Good stuff, I hear. Here are the links, good luck.

I have to assume you are not actually getting into the FM; rather, you are getting into the audio of the system. Is it a component system (rather than, say, a single radio)? I'll bet it is. All the filters in the world on your signal won't help. You'll likely have to examine the audio leads (and their length) on her equipment. There are some steps you can take, but you won't want to actually work on her system or you might be held liable if her washing machine oversuds! E-mail me at aa2qa@frontiernet.net and perhaps we can put our heads together and figure out what steps can be taken to reduce or eliminate the problem.

Aaron, perhaps we both jumped the gun. I gave a reply which implied that he WAS running illegal power. He may be, but there is a post further down the newsgroup from someone down under (Australia) who has this problem with a STOCK 12 watt pep rig. I've seen some real kludges for stereo systems with unshielded long cable runs and a shielded cabinet removed. In fact, everyone seems to have jumped on the 'fact' that the person in question is running illegal power. This is, at least for now, unknown and none of us has offered much in the way of advice. Perhaps some of us should have enquired as to his equipment?

ps - I own two Hammond X-66s and those organs are about the most sensitive things I've ever seen as far as rf goes. Yes, they used to pick up stock, legal cb radios several hundred feet away.

The FCC enforcement went downhill long before 1996. Part of the problem is the HF isn't such a big deal anymore. Corporations want UHF and microwave frequencies. Communications via radio often means via satellite. The saving grace may be that, with the government really running in the red (yep, they thought big tobacco was going to save the day for them and they kept spending. Dipped into Social Insecurity again. Despite their best efforts to grab more money, they are running HUGE deficits), they might actually figure out that pumping a few tens of millions into the FCC enforcement just might be a way to raise a ton of money. Oh, not the individuals so much as the companies - trucking, fishing, whatever. Of course, recreational boats large enough to accomodate high power and/or low frequencies will probably be valuable enough to make it worth the government's time to go after them. Go from a dozen or so NALs a year (most of which will either be lowered or not collectable) to a few hundred collectable at $20,000 a piece ... The large numbers of dollars into the FCC would be one time - to reopen old monitoring stations and actually staff them. Get some vans and put their people back on the road. After the initial cost, a few million a year to collect as much or more in NALs just might interest them. Right now, about the only way to get caught is to try and set up a broadcast station on the American AM or FM broadcast band. A few corporations own most of the broadcast stations and they have HUGE wallets. They WILL get the FCC to act in those situations.

It will dismay you to learn that I've already added a 4th choice (and trying to bad-mouth it won't work, because I've already put copies safely into circulation): built a better mousetrap. In this law code, walking naked in public, as well as RF jamming which does not result in someone else's death or injury, cannot be considered crimes, PERIOD... and anyone who thinks they'd try to get a bureaucracy together to outlaw such freedoms, would be subject to execution within 72 hours after conviction---with no appeal unless the trial was corrupt. Their assets would be confiscated & handed out to victims of REAL crimes.

To be brief, never get nasty with a witch doctor who has put away demons wealthier than you.

Where did I say that? I didn't. Try reading for content instead of troll fodder. Here's what I said (for the fifth time):

"You can use a Class A amp for AM just fine; in fact, most of the small-signal amplifiers in your radio are working Class A. But for a power amplifier it's not very efficient...."

...which is absolutely true.

>If he gets the amp to drop in efficiency to 25%, like all other class

I have NO idea where you came up with THAT.

> For some strange reason, it >just won't work crrectly when the efficiency is high. What should he >do? Drop the drive level?

I guess I DO have to draw you a picture.

Class A means that the amp is conducting for the full 360 degrees of the cycle. Which means that every part of the wave is being amplified, peaks and all. That necessarily means that the positive peak must be below or equal to B+ and the negative peak must be above or equal to ground. Since the purpose of Class A is a clean signal, the amp is biased so the centerline of the signal is centered on the linear part of the transconductance curve. Assuming a perfectly linear tube, the ideal location for the centerline of that sine wave is going to be halfway between ground and B+, or 0.5 * B+. Therefore, without any signal at all, the plate is going to dissipate Vp * Ip, or 1/2B+ * Ip.
Now with no signal there is no change in voltage, therefore no change in power, and the efficiency is null. But if we add a carrier of amplitude Xp-p, we will have a power output of IXp-p. Let's set the plate current at 10 mA and B+ at 180 volts. Bias is therefore set so the plate voltage is 90 volts. Even without a signal the plate must dissipate 90 * .01 = 900 mW, and not suprisingly that happens to be the drain on the power supply (duh). Then we add a signal at the grid which causes an output voltage of 2Vp-p. We already know our plate load is 90 / .01 = 9000 ohms, so we can calculate our output power to be (.707 / 9000) * .707 = .055 mW RMS or .22 mW PEP, for a peak efficiency of .00022 / .9 = .025%. Not very good, is it? But what happens if we feed the grid to get a maximum output of 90Vp-p? Well, our output power increases to (31.8 / 9000) * 31.8 = 112.5 mW RMS or 450 mW PEP, which gives us a peak efficiency of 50%. Right on the button, by golly!

Now you should have noticed that none of this accounts for plate resistance, interelectrode capacitance, non-linearity, etc. Practically, a Class A amplifier is going to be less efficient than 50%.

And if that's not enough, check this out:

"Vacuum-tube voltage amplifiers are always biased to class A. Bias can be obtained by any of the methods mentioned previously. Theoretically, in power amplifiers the plate-circuit efficiency can be 50%, but they are usually operated at about 20%. If the plate circuit draws 10 W from its power supply, only about 2 W of the undistored audio power can be produced." pg. 303

"...Ten watts applied by the power supply to a class A stage may produce only about 2.5 W of ac output (25% efficiency). The same tube, biased to class C, may be able to produce 6 W output (60% efficiency). To do this, however, it is necessary to change the sine-wave input signal to pulses of plate current in the output circuit and then rely on the flywheel effect of the plate-circuit tuned coil and capacitor to restore the sine-wave shape to the output signal ac." pg. 332

Robert L. Shrader, "Electronic Communication", McGraw-Hill, 1975.

Or maybe you would like a practical example? Check a datasheet for, say, the gool 'ol 71A, a classic power triode. For a plate voltage of 180 volts and a plate current of 20 mA, the power output of the tube is capable of a maximum of 700 mW. I think even YOU are capable of the math, but then again you can't seem to comprehend simple English, so:

180 * .02 = 3.6 W of plate dissipation
0.7 / 3.6 = 19.44% efficiency

...which happens to be almost exactly the same efficiency as described by Shrader.

Now do you have any more stupid remarks, Ken?

Nothing boring about the FRN. It's been a very useful site since you were forced to leave for causing trouble and slandering people. And just sos you know, theres only 1 administrator on the FRN. The owner.
He has a couple of people acting as moderators to keep things in line.
I've lurked in the UseNet groups for years, bobbie-girl.

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a

Seems to me that if the RR is soooo much better , that the truckers would have been out of work long ago.

A low-pass filter is always a good idea, but try to eliminate the problem at it's source. First thing to do is to get your radio checked. A good shop will test your radio on a spectrum analyzer to see if it's pumping out harmonics. If it is, get it fixed. Your final may have slipped into Class C, perhaps due to a defective component somewhere else. Also, some base antennas are 'noisy', and a low-pass filter will not eliminate noise from an antenna. You can check this by trying a different radio (I have an A-99 which works fine, but if I install their "ground plane" it messes with every TV within a couple hundred feet). If there is nothing wrong with your system then you need to check out the neighbor's system and maybe install some high-pass filters.

On all my rotary clocks, the hands move 1/60th of a degree for every minute.
Nothing wrong with that, as a minute (angle) IS equal to1/60th of a degree.
For every minute of rotation, it has moved 1/60th of a degree.

A "minute" could refer to a minute of time or an angle of 1 minute.

I think it is a shame that they are freebanding on 10 meters. This is what gets some in trouble. Why would they do this with so many other frequencies available? I am a ham for 11 years and a CBer for 27 years. Just study and take the test.

Start with getting rid of the A-99 antanna.
Next step is to install filters (low pass) on your equipment AND on the equipment you are screwing with (high pass) on the neighbors side.

Hello Freak:

Not a lot of material is written on the neighbor interference to consumer electronics problems. But the ARRL has some good web sites and a good book on it. There are listed below.

Most consumer electronics is not properly designed and built to handle local communication transmitters and such, even from commercial or military radios. The constant mass production and cost cutting ways from the manufactures, (no dough being driven by bean counters) leaves a lot to be desired in proper filtering of unwanted local transmitted signals.

But the result is that your the bad guy with all those stinking antennas on your roof.

Its always best to be the good neighbor in these interference problems. I bought my neighbor new RF Proof phones that are shown in the ARRL RFI Book. It appears that I was getting into his 3 dollar K-Mart Junk phones, and so was his air compressor motor, and his Skill Saw. After the new phones arrived, all the local interference was gone, this was a very cheap way to rid a neighbor problem that could end up in a court.

Hope these web sites are a help.

Since I drive a truck for a living, I have been following this discussion with some interest.
I don't use any illegal equipment, and most of the people I work with don't either. But these type of discussions have educated me enough to tell those people that do have converted 10m radios what freqs to avoid. Every single person that I talked to had no idea that they were doing something wrong, and they stopped.
I drive up and down 85, 77, 26, and 40 in NC every day, and many of the 40 channels are totally empty, so why risk problems by using the Ham bands?
When I read Jerry O's post about the Shelby Hamfest, I went and checked it out. There were a lot more people there than I expected, and I could tell by the cars parked in the lot that most of the people were pretty well off. Lots of Mercedes, and the like, as well as expensive SUVs and PUs.
Most of the people that I talked to were very nice, and seemed interested in helping out a guy who wanted to get started in their hobby.
Bought all of the books to study, and the tapes to learn code. Maybe someday I'll take the exams...the stuff was not that difficult to learn. I don't know though. I'm not sure that I want to be involved with people that would think badly of me just because of what I do for a living.
In my opinion, if Mr. O would spend a little time talking to some drivers, telling them how cool the hobby is and all of the extra things he can do once he is licensed; and maybe spend a little less time dreaming of the day he can get a guy fired, he would be doing the hobby he loves a lot more good.
I don't mean this as a slam at Jerry, far from it. I suppose that the things he has written made me interested enough to study for the exams, and convince at least 15 of the people I work with to do the same. (This was before he started with all the "Ten fer thar driver" BS)

I dont know of one CBer/Freebander that talks in the 28 MHZ band. This post contains much bullshit! Why bother??? From 26.800 to 27.999 there are many stations and nobody has an interest in going above 28.000. Some truck drivers have been doing it, so what? They are not the norm. BACM, you can keep 28 MHZ...we dont want it!
As for the license...I got one in 1975-1976 and found it useless, filled with geeks and some true Anti-social deviates. Oh I'm sure there are a couple "regular" people with tickets but the norm there is Geek! I'll keep the CB/Freeband crowd Thankyou!

Not quite. I said that a Class A amp will never achieve 50% efficiency with an AM signal. Why are you having such a hard time understanding this?

>you try reading your own posts for content instead of troll fodder.

It's interesting how a warped and narrow-minded perception can distort the obvious meaning of a simple phrase. Instead of trolling between the lines, try seperating the different thoughts:

1. The signal must swing from B+ to ground 100% of the time to achieve
50% efficiency;
2. An AM signal does not swing from B+ to ground 100% of the time.
THEREFORE; it's not possible to reach 50% efficiency with an AM signal.

Damn, that was just too easy. I learned how to do that in grade school. What did YOU learn in grade school, Bill?

You know it's pretty pathetic when you trolls pick apart simple English looking for faults when you ignore my most obvious mistakes:

>... But what >happens if we feed the grid to get a maximum output of 90Vp-p?

If I wanted B+ to ground that signal should have been 180Vp-p. In that case the power out becomes (63.63 / 9000) * 63.63 = 450 mW, which translates into 450 / 900 = 50% efficiency.

How come none of you trolls noticed that I converted to PEP? After all, RMS is the real power. Could it be that correcting my mistake would disprove your own statements? Or that you just don't know anything about what you are talking about? I'll even suspend my waste time & money suing CBers and hams who've "victimized" me in the past. Lawsuits as a whole are a pretty retarded concept IMO anyway.

No I don't agree, and you would have seen that if you hadn't snipped the next line. Here, let my post it again for you to read more carefully:

Not a very good job of twisting my words, Timmy.

Well then if a receiver will only break squelch when it hears a specific pair of tones, do these UK signals somehow magically change their RF power into CTCSS tones? No they don't, Timmy.

No, I am just copying the same question. Maybe I should add it to my
sig. And your ONLY answer has not been very forthcoming, as you contradicted yourself in the very next line.

So do you think it's right to break a law just because it doesn't mean anything to you?

You missed the entire point, Bert. Some folks made the comment that there aren't any illegals up on 10 meters, or that they couldn't hear them. I hear them all the time.
And they say just about what I said they did---along with the "SQUEAK". So if there are AM signals on 28.085 or 28.225, etc. CB vernacular, and a bunch of squeaks, then they must be truckers!

As for the cop hassling me, I would be more than glad to go to court to see

He will feel really stupid when, in court, it is established that I don't HAVE a CB in my

Hello Ricky Parker:

The Low Pass on the radio, and the high pass filter on the TV, is a good first step, but is not a cure all.

Unfortunately the CB Grade of linear amplifiers is not very well filtered from Harmonics that will cause the TVI problem. Many CB'ers use Ham or Amateur Liner Amplifiers because they simply last longer and are much cleaner.

Using None ground plane type antennas has also show in many cases to have more interference problems, then antennas with the ground plane radials. I believe that the Ground Plane Antennas do not point as much energy towards the neighbors as compared to the none ground plane antennas.

Then theres always the overloading interference problem, that is with a stock station, you still will have local neighbor interference to consumer electronics. Just by the transmitter being to close to the electronics. This is a common problem, and is usually a interference problem with the harmonics problem to.

Consumer Electronics is not properly designed, shielded, or filtered to work within the city areas where all kinds of radio transmitters are. So to run your station you need to be the good neighbor.

Here are some web sites that cover the interference problem. The ARRL Book on RFI, is great, well worth the price.

Hope these web sites are a help.

Maybe, but don't you see that the OTR drivers CAN be replaced if it came to it? Lots of UPS traffic now goes piggyback (TOFC). We used to haul lots of Yellow Freight trailers, too.
I guess they are still doing it. Think how many OTR drivers that replaces.
Some of the freight
IS slowly coming back to rail because rail is more economical over the long haul. The rail companies ran most of that freight off in the 50s by being hidebound and set in their ways. They have had to change and adapt. That's how RoadRailer came to be. By pulling 30 or so trailers on railwheels and using trucks at the delivery point, you eliminate one OTR driver for every trailer hauled by rail. That's 1.5 million bucks saved less haulage. I don't have access to the true figures, but, if it cost $500,000 to ship those trailers, the shipper has still saved
a million bucks on salaries alone. The delivery drivers often work for the rail company anyway. Not only that, but think of the savings in highway wear caused by trucks. (Cars can't make those "wrinkles" in the pavement at intersections). The Trucking company that contracts the trailers to TOFC also saves fuel because that is a part of the haulage charged by the RR. (My figures don't reflect actual cost because I do not have tariff books)

The point is that truckers think themselves irreplaceable. No one is irreplacable. It might be somewhat awkward, but Mrs. Jones WOULD get her lettuce in Winn Dixie. It would just be
by FGE instead of truck.

He'd never know what happened! All I would do is record him, surrepticiously snap a picture, write down his tag and company name and send it to Riley. It is true that such might be risky, but, although I AM a very easygoing person, I am also kind of large framed and muscular. Slinging a sledge hammer on the railroad and lifting heavy items (pumps, hydro motors, small transmissions, etc) also helped. I'm no king on the hill, but I have been known to, shall we say, "defend" myself.
Anybody can get beat up, that includes me, but the last time that happened, it took 3 to put me on the ground; it was the 3rd one that slipped up and conked me on the head with a stick that done it.
I'm no toughie and will avoid a fight, not because I'm "skeered", but because it doesn't really solve anything and gets one into trouble with the cops. I almost got into one back in '98 when "Titanic" was in the theaters. I went with some friends, and was sitting waiting for the thing to start. An middle-aged man and his wife came down the aisle, and behind him was a guy and his date, and he was very obviously drunk. He was using obscenity, much to the chagrin of his date, and the gent in front turned and politely asked him not to talk that way in front of his wife. The drunk then became irate and hit the older man, knocking him down. The man got up and they began fighting, all the while moving back up the aisle towards us. Even drunk, the larger and younger man was getting the best of the other, and as the fight moved several rows back, I began to wonder if they would fall over us, or whether I should try to break it up. As I was deciding whether to disable the drunk with a headlock and pressure behind his ear (will render a person temporarily disabled, will kill if held too long), the security men came and stopped it. I was glad not to be involved. The drunk's
date left alone in tears from humiliation.

Hi Jason ,what it is that the wiring for the mike is different from the cobra and is as follows 1 is audio and is on all the time so if a mike doesn't let the line float then it will give a squeal when you plug it in pin 2 is shield pin 3 is rx pin 4 is TX
there you should be able to make it work with this info

Ted,

Actually, I don't mean any offense and I appreciate your efforts to educate fellow drivers more than you know. I personally KNOW truckers who are hams and, most truckers are fine people. The shocker is, I USED to drive trucks myself back in the 70's until I got laid off. I just never went back, plus I had a couple of scares. Not my fault, but scares nonetheless. So I went to the railroad, had a good career, and retired early.

I DO admit to getting irritated at the illegal operators, however, and the vendors. I don't really want to cause someone to lose their job, but you must admit that, if you were to politely tell a driver that he is operating illegally, he may tell you to go F$#& yourself, that he bought that radio and he would use it as he sees fit. There are a number of things being discussed by ARRL, FCC, and ITU to try to combat this intrusion; it's not just going to be allowed to continue in spite of what the illegals would have us believe. And again, thanks for your efforts to warn people that they could get into trouble for it. By doing so, you let people make an intelligent decision as to whether it is worth the risk of continuing to operate in the 10 meter band without license. So far, I have counted about 25 people who have gotten warned about doing it; even some CBers are finding that FCC is going after amps within the 40 channels. More so than in the past.

I wish you luck in obtaining your ticket. It will open up an whole world of endeavor for you and allow you to explore---even space communications with the shuttle and space station!

Hey Dave,

If you are hearing the same recording I think you are It's along the...well now I can't remember I had it just before I sat down to type this. At any rate when I took my vacation time this year we drove to Colorado. Is the recording some thing like.

"Any drivers out there like there wheels and tanks polished" "We got high speed machine buffers and......."

To be honest I can't remember the second part or the rest of the recording. Thought it was through New Mexico or Arizona I heard it.
Should be near Flagstaff if my girlfriend remembers right. Got a beam? Turn it towards Flagstaff and see if you can decode it. I'd kick the tank wipes ass if he used jewelers screws on my rig. hehe.

No kidding. That's great! Dave hall said it best months ago:

There are many people out there that are "on the fence" with regard to whether or not to follow the law or not. Those are the people that will hopefully read what is discussed here and decide that it might not be a good idea to break the law. THOSE are the people that we're trying to reach. Those that are hopelessly incorrigable will continue their anti-social ways until the law finally catches up with them.

I was recently given a Midland base station Model 13-898B, it is missing its power cord and mic, i got a power cord to work for it, powers up fine, the backlights for panel seem to be burned out but it seems to recive fine, the main problem is that i cant get a mic to work for it. I plugged a cobra mic in it but the only thing it will do is make a clicking noise when the key is pressed, i was wondering if it needs a special mic, or does this indicate a major problem with the unit, is it something that can be fixed, or was this why it was given away?

Any info would be apreciated,

I agree partially with Jay's post, cheaply made CB amplifiers with no harmonic sheilding driven by overmodulated CB transceivers coupled to antennas with poor RF grounds virtually GUARANTEE that you'll have neighbor problems. BUT.... I don't suggest simply buying a ham amplifier. Using ham gear on CB is not a "foolproof" solution to RFI.

Unlike amateur radio, CB was created with low power restrictions so that people could enjoy it -without- having to understand the principles of how their gear operated or take responsibility for operating high power components without creating interference.

Once you go outside the CB rules, you're on shaky ground. You're doing things that could potentially create harmful interference, but you don't understand the causes of it or even how to prevent it. For this reason, I suggest not using an amplifier at all.

Tell me, just how does this work when delivering goods to Ridgecrest? The trains haven't come through Ridgecrest in years. In fact the rails have been ripped up? Inyokern? No rails. What now? Still need truckers in some fashion. What about rural Colorado? Last time I was there (2 months ago) The farmers were pissed at the rail companies cause they don't come through anymore.

Just because you don't know of any doesn't mean they not there. I hear a lot of illegal operators up above 28.3 that are not truckers. I have never seen a duckbilled platypus either, but that doesn't mean they don't exist.

Does anybody know the value resistor network RA1, which pulls down pins 11 through 14 of the synthesizer chip. I picked up this unit at a hamfest last Sunday, and discovered that this part was missing. I am trying to restore the unit to original condition, but unfortunately, the schematic doesn't have any value for this part. I would suspect that it will be between 10K and 100KOhms.
On another note, if you replace D15, the RF Gain shunt diode with an HP1N5767 PIN diode, intermodulation performance will be improved.

Hello Randy:

Thanks for the reply there.

Yes you need to use the antenna at its lowest SWR for the Low Pass filter to work the best.

Grounding is essential, at both the radio, amp, and the antenna.

Yes call the radio/tv station engineer, if you talk interested to them, many times they will invite you to the transmitter site at Mount Wilson, over looking all of Southern California. They can tell you the stations effective range and service areas. These broadcast engineers are usually old Ham Radio guys who have learned quit a few tricks, talking to them or even talking a station tour is well worth the time.

Many times in interference problems the TV Transmitter is located many miles away from the TV set, and the transmitted signal is many dB down from being a proper level. So that in these cases even the power from a 1/2 watt FRS Hand held radio will interfere with the TV set and the Lawn Mower, Shavers, Refrigerator Motors, ect. And in these cases they don't stand a chance by a TVI Committee. So separate transmitter and TV times are recommended, as a semi fix.

Yes some TV's will go nuts with the least amount or RF Energy near by.
Our TVI Committee uses a Sony Portable TV that is a year old and is reasonable shielded, but still lacks internal circuit filtering to reduce or eliminate interfere from near by transmitters. We also have a few High Pass filters and torrid that we wrap the coax in on the TV side, and it has mixed results. There just isn't a cure all. Each case is different.

Before you approach the neighbors read the ARRL's Interference Handbook, its well worth the price. Let me know how it goes. Its at:

When God Made Truck Drivers

When the Lord was creating Truck Drivers, he was into his sixth day of overtime when an angel appeared and said, "You're doing a lot of fiddling around on this one." And the Lord said, "Have you read the spec on this order? A truck driver has to be able to be able to drive 10-12 hours per day, through any type of weather, on any type of road, know the highway traffic laws of 48 states and 10 provinces, be able to unload 40,000 lbs of cargo after driving through the night, sleep in areas of town that police refuse to patrol." "He has to be able to live in his truck 24 hours a day 7 days a week for weeks on end, offer first aid and motorist assistance and still meet just in time schedules, maintain an even and controlled composure when all around him have gone mad." "He has to be in top physical condition at all times running on black coffee and half-eaten meals. And he has to have six pairs of hands." The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands... no way." "It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said the Lord, "it's the three pairs of eyes a driver has to have." "That's on the standard model?" asked the angel. The Lord nodded, One pair that sees the herd of deer in the thickets 3 miles away, "Another pair here in the side of his head for the blind spots that motorists love to hide in, And another pair of eyes here in front that can look reassuringly at a bleeding victim of a drunk driver that crashed into his ICC bumper at 70 MPH and say, 'You'll be all right ma'am, when he knows it isn't so."

"Lord," said the angel, touching his sleeve, "rest and work on this tomorrow." "I can't," said the Lord, "I already have a model that can drive 650 miles a day, without incident and raise a family of five without ever seeing them, on 30 cents a mile." The angel circled the model of the truck driver very slowly, then she asked, "Can it think?" "You bet," said the Lord. "It can tell you the elements of every HAZMAT load invented; recite Federal Motor Carrier Regulations in its sleep; deliver, pickup, be a father, offer timely advice to strangers, search for missing children, defend a women's or children's rights, get 8 hours of good rest on the street and raise a family of Law respecting citizens, without ever going home ... and still it keeps its sense of humor. This driver also has phenomenal personal control. He can deal with delivery and pickup areas created from scenes painted in hell, coax a lumper to actually work for his money, comfort an accident victim's family, and then read in the daily paper how truck drivers are nothing more than killers on wheels and have no respect for the rights of others while using the nations highways
Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek of the truck driver. "There's a leak," she pronounced. "I told you that you were trying to put too much into this model."
"That's not a leak," said the lord, "it's a tear."

"What's the tear for?" asked the angel.
"It's for bottled-up emotions, for fallen comrades, for commitment to that funny piece of cloth called the flag, for justice, for the family without its father."
"You're a genius," said the angel.

The Lord looked somber, "I didn't put it there," he said.

sure it will hurt it frankie. you go to 29.620 and try to work simplex tone encoded between two mobiles and see if the power house repeaters that come

I particularly like this line from his Mixing Crystals auction:
http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll?ViewItem&item=1383327371)

"There are 25 mixing crystals on there showing, but I will add 25 more to make it interesting.Plus 10 more to the high bidder.what a deal."

So, how many do we actually get? Sounds like and Infomercial!

Up for auction we have 25 "Mixing Crystals". "I don't know any thing about them", but I do know they are mixing crystals. BUT WAIT! THAT'S NOT ALL! For this auction and this auction only, I'm going to DOUBLE YOUR PURCHASE "to make it more interesting"! I'm going to thrown in 25 more! WHAT A DEAL! DON'T PASS THIS UP! "They all look like new"! Can you believe it folks! Fifty Mixing Crystals for one LOW price! BUT WAIT! THAT'S NOT ALL! If you are the "HIGH BIDDER", I'll throw in 10 additional Crystals Just for the hell of it! That's 60 Crystals in all! Can you find a better deal anywhere??

PH

P.S. If your the high bidder?? So, if I'm not the high bidder I only get 50 then? LOL!

maybe because there are more cb'ers than hams period?? but really all this is null because an illegal operator couldnt be a cb'er or a ham remember? dave hall said so....

Criminal activity is criminal activity. As to the "antics" of hams, the majority of Amateurs are law-abiding, prefessionally operating stations. Yes, there are a few bad apples, and they should lose their privileges. I wish they would. I have no sympathy for them. There are far more illegal CBers

Nope, that's not true. If he's not operating on 10 Meters, then I wouldn't hear him, right? So long as I am not hearing anything, then what's to report? "Making up" something to report to FCC doesn't solve the problem. The bottom line is, the truckers aren't supposed to BE up there to start with. What I want is for them to go back to CB where they belong. Crying wolf would make things worse, not better. The way to make them go away is to report factual, correct, and true incidents. As a matter of fact, I have seen quite a few trucks that I thought were operating on 10, but I didn't do anything because I could not positively identify the truck/driver that was doing it. I have to know without a doubt that it WAS, in fact, true and the right offender. The best example is the Rock Hill incident. As it was told to me, the ham passed the truck who noticed the big HF antenna and hailed him on 28.085. "How 'boucha, thar with th' big antenna, etc, etc". In that case, the ham knew it was the truck he had just passed because 1)he had his AM filter operating, 2) he had maximum attenuation on receive, 3) By what the driver said to him, indicating that the trucker
had just been passed by a car with the HF antenna.

Tim, y'all guys can do whatever between 27.405 and 28.000. I haven't said anything about that in 2 years; I leave that to the others. I don't LIKE freebanding, but it is not my area to be concerned with just as the Rescue squad frequency locally is not my beeswax, either.
But 10 Meters and all Amateur frequencies are my concern, and I will do whatever it takes to protect them from unlicensed and illegal operators--and that includes turning in bad hams. Hams are supposed to guard their bands from illegal and improper usage. So, above 28 MHZ, I will be doing whatever
I can to protect what's mine and all other licensed hams'.

BTW, according to ARRL newsletter, there are around 27 Congresspeople who have endorsed the CC & R bill. Each of those people will receive letters from me and a number of other hams outlining the other, and least known, threat to our bands; that of illegal operators just hopping on and jabbering away because "they" don't think they are causing harm. Something WILL be done about this stuff, you can count on it, and the sad thing is, it may amount to something that is rather draconian in nature. All we want is to have our bands free from interference and non-licensed ops.

Yes, he said he was "running some juice" and didn't want to attract too much attention.
Here's his post below, and I have bracketed the "juice" comment.

Jerry

People moved in next door 2 months ago. Didn't see much of them; career couple I suppose. I get off shift at 2:00am in the morning, come home and turn on the rig. Nothing. Dead Air. SWR is screwy. Antenna line is cut.

So I setup one of those low light IR wireless cameras and use Homewatcher after I replaced the coax. Talk on the rig for a few days. Sure enough I catch the guy next door cutting the cable. So I have this video but I am not sure if I want to confront him or just "guard" the coax with conduit or something.<< Since I am running some juice, etc....I don't want to draw attention from the local feds.>> On the other hand, The video plainly shows the guy trespassing and I can just go with that and have him busted, like "turning the tables". I'm stuck here with differing feelings about what to do. Sad thing is I have to live beside these people probably for many years to come.

They usually run in an arena, the only side that thing was on, was it's own. As far as it cares, it's every robot for itself... anything that moves is probably a legitimate target.
Imagine the surprise of the driver who found it coming at him.

Actually, it is not even as bad as that... compared to the standard output.

I am not too keen on the MRF455 conversion, it is much better to fit a transistor that slots straight in.

2SC1945 ratings:
Vcb = 80v
Vce = 40v
Veb = 5v
Ic = 6Amp
Tj = 150°
Hfe = 10 -180

If he cannot get attention on here, he resorts to trolling other groups

You are the one to be suspicious of as not being honest, after all, you believe it is perfectly OK to take something and use it, even thought it does not belong to you, just because you don't see

Wrong. Maximum theoretical efficiency for class "A" is 25 percent. For a class "B" amplifier it is 78.5 percent. For a class "C" amplifier it is even higher. Its truely amazing just how much plain wrong information shows up on this news group, or how some people are so quick to believe in the myths, and other voodoo practices, that keep getting passed off as being correct. A quick flip through a good basic electronics text book on power amplifiers would have yielded the correct efficiency numbers I quoted above.

The largest factor in the reduction in the efficiency of an amplifier, for RF operation at HF, below the above quoted figures is due to high losses in the tank circuits. If you bother to look at most high power RF tube amplifiers the tank circuit uses either wide flat copper strip, or large diameter copper tubing for the coils, sometimes even silver plated to reduce the skin effect resistance. For example an amplifier putting 1KW in to a 50 ohm load has to generate 4.472 amps rms of output current. A typical loaded "Q" for an output tank circuit would be around 12. The current circulating in the tank circuit would be "approximately" Q_tank*I_output, or about 53.7 amps rms. Now also assume the tank coil is made from about 3 feet of 3/8 inch O.D. copper tubing, which would be a coil of 4 turns with an I.D. of 2.5 inches. The coil at 28 MHz has a skin resistance of about 0.0472 ohms. The power loss in that coil would be 136 watts approximately. This is almost 14 percent of the output power. There are other sources of power loss in the amplifier as well.

The voice waveform shape can affect the efficiency of a class "A" amplifier, but has little to no effect for classes "B" and "C" that I can find. The maximum theoretical efficiency, for classes "B" and "C", has everything to do with the biasing, i.e. the conduction angle the power device will conduct over. Since most "linear" RF amplifiers are designed to operate class "B", a pure grounded grid amplifier for example, or class "AB1" or "AB2" depending on the whether the grid is drawing current or not. The same arguments can be made for transistor amplifiers as well.

I believe that I already quoted a "good basic electronics text book" and it said the max theoretical efficiency is 50%. I also proved it mathematically (after correcting myself).

I don't know where you come up with that figure. I have never seen any book provide a 'typical' Q for an output tank.

I'm not arguing that a tank has considerable losses, but how are you getting your figures? What is the input and output impedance of this tank? What are the values for the coil and caps?

>> Unfortunately, our voices

Are you figuring maximum theoretical efficiency when the Class A amp includes the output tank? Why? A class A amp doesn't need a tuned tank except maybe for impedance matching. And if you do include it, wouldn't max theoretical efficiency then become a factor of tank efficiency and not just a fixed value of 25%?

Here comes that 'insignificance' argument again. Well Timmy, does that mean you steal from anyone you can steal from? Expose yourself in public? Defacate on the sidewalk? Scream profanities at the mall? None of those things put lives at risk, so does that mean you do them?

Come you masters of war
You that build all the guns
You that build the death planes
You that build the big bombs
You that hide behind walls

I just want you to know
I can see through your masks
You that never done nothin
But build to destroy
You play with my world
Like its your little toy
You put a gun in my hand
And you hide from my eyes
And you turn and run farther
When the fast bullets fly
Like Judas of old
You lie and deceive
A world war can be won
You want me to believe
But I see through your eyes
And I see through your brain
Like I see through the water
That runs down my drain
You fasten the triggers
For the others to fire
Then you set back and watch
When the death count gets higher

You hide in your mansion
As young peoples blood
Flows out of their bodies
And is buried in the mud
Youve thrown the worst fear
That can ever be hurled Fear to bring children
Into the world
For threatening my baby
Unborn and unnamed
You aint worth the blood
That runs in your veins
How much do I know
To talk out of turn
You might say that Im young
You might say Im unlearned
But theres one thing I know
Though Im younger than you Even Jesus would never Forgive what you do
Let me ask you one question
Is your money that good
Will it buy you forgiveness
Do you think that it could
I think you will find
When your death takes its toll
All the money you made
Will never buy back your soul
And I hope that you die
And your deathll come soon
I will follow your casket
In the pale afternoon
And Ill watch while youre lowered
Down to your deathbed
And Ill stand oer your grave

Yep, they did. Had a guy buy a 5" magnet mount last pm. Where I was (not my shop), there was 2 in stock. One from China, one from USA. Guess which one I told him to buy? Same price, and I KNOW the American made one will outlast the Chinese one, rust & all. SO, Don't buy ANY CB equipment made by OUR ENEMIES, RED CHINA ! You'll be sowwy someday!

My mistake, the post was by an "anonymous" poster. Doesn't really matter tho, I still stand behind my reply.

As for someone that doesn't have the balls to use their real name when they post, to call someone else 'weak' is an extreme example of misplaced authority.

Should of paid $10 or less instead. They were NOT great CB's. Put switch on Calibrate & push in mic and adjust calibrate knob til needle goes to point on meter where calibrate dot is, then turn switch to SWR and that is reading, hopfully!

Yes. Conk decided to discontinue their free service but I was never notified. So, one day I tried to bring up the site to make sure everything was okay and it was all gone. I had backup files, but they weren't the latest version. Conk had an interface that made it easy to edit the files while at their site, so I got lazy when it came to downloading backups. So, I had to do some editing after we (TollFree and I) got the site up, but it's all there (except for The Darkside which I discontinued due a lack of time and interest)
and correct now.

I have a pc68 LTW. I had an exhaust system put on my car last week. Before they put my car in the garage and on the lift I took my 55" antenna off. On the way home without the antenna the cb was quiet, I switched it to weather mode and picked up the weather broadcast with no antenna at all.

You can get the stock 477 up to about 40 peak with simple tuning. A single 1969 or 2312 is good for around 25 peak in typical circuits.

I like the 455 conversion the way Uniden does it on the new Lincolns. It's really pretty simple. It goes on rear heatsink on the solder side of where the original transistor went. All that amounts to is match drilling two holes. Then a little heatsink compound and a couple of sheetmetal screws and it's mounted.
Then it's just a matter of running short wires from the leaves on the transistor to the appropriate points on the board. The hardest part is removing the rear heatsink so it can be drilled (and tapped if you don't want to use sheetmetal screws). If you don't want to do that you can fasten it to the speaker side cover.
Pick a spot, sand off the anti-rust coating, match-drill
the flange holes, put a little heatsink compound on the spot, and mount the transistor using machine screws.
Then as above, run short wires to the appropriate points on the board. With a standard 455 you'll end up with about 35 peak watts when the RF chain is peaked.
With a higher gain device like a 1446 you'll get the full 40 peak watts along with bullet-proof reliability.

It's a 15 watt device that's not in the same league as the 455 or 477. It crosses to an MRF479.

I am a newby to this news group and I like what I find on here.
Any more when I fire up my CB...All I hear is people running off at the mouth..Not talking to anyone except on channle 19 where truck drivers need directions.
What happend to the days when people would talk to eachother..Holding conversation?
I would like to talk to any CB'ers in the 513 area code for just plain conversation.
I use to do it back years ago but it seems like no one really wants to do that around here anymore. I know it sounds stupid to ask for such a things but I love CB radio and would like to chew the rag with anyone willing to take the time for good old conversation.

If it were a local traffic court, I would do so as well. But what if that citation was from a place several hundred miles away? Would you still be willing to meet an 8:30 am court time on a workday?

I wouldn't. I would write my explanation in a letter and enclose any necessary documentation. I would then hope the judge was lenient. If you mark the ticket "no contest", then the judge probably would not even read the documentation - just set the fine to whatever is usual. If you mark it "innocent", then you would have to make a court appearance - unless it is one of the rare courts that allow the matter to be settled by correspondance.

Even if you appear in court, the judge does not have to accept your license as being valid or real. How are you going to prove that it is not fake?

Actually, that is where local truckers come into the picture.

Mac is correct that, if the biased governmental regulations were eliminated, shipping most goods by rail would be less expensive. But it would require a massive overhaul of our rail system. It is totally inadequate to handle the massive amounts of material that are shipped around the country these days.

there are several , shall we say "entertainers" that are household names

Walsh and a few others hold licenses..how many actually worked him?
Being a celebrity on doesn't seem to carry the same allure on cb compared to hammies.......most of us aren't star-struck and will talk to them like normal folk. Have you ever heard a conversation between a ammie celeb and the masses? hey are peppered with everything they DON'T want to discuss. When they want to be one of the regular guys and forget their work, they come to cb :) where they can just rag chew and not be put on a pedestal. Besides, I would hardly call "In Synch" a rock band, nor would I call the little lipsingers "rockstars". I don't believe any of them can actually play an instrument.

Ha! I liked Dylan and Sabbath, but Dylan was THE consciousness of the sixties. Dylan fans were usually a bit more intellectual than Sabbath fans. While Dylan fans were for the most part actually concerned with world change, Sabbath fans were busy playing Black Magic and referring to 3 chord rock as "music"...these fans eventually gravitated toward such bands as AC/DC, Judas Priest, Iron Maiden, and other nonsensical
"metal" bands.
As I said, I like them both and Ozzy WAS fun, (but never managed to recapture the magic of the early Sabbath days) but those that can't comprehend Dylan usually blew him off and chastised him without even having the slightest inkling concerning his music. If he sucks,,,so does Hendrix, the Stones, Clapton, and a host of other stars, as they ALL copied Dylan tunes.

It;'s the "intent" part that will hang ya' each time. If they can prove you were trying to injure or maim someone, you may have a problem. If you were, say , robbed and beaten during a past home invasion, or say wheelchair bound, you may have a valid reason for having that 12 gauge aimed at your window with a string tied from the trigger to the window latch. Burglars, home invaders, carjackers, etc., don;t have many rights in the 'pile. As long as you're on your own property and it is apparent the individual was there to commit a crime and you believe your life in danger....it;'s open season on the bad guys. I've also run more wattage than is legally allowed for a number of years. I don't however, violate CB etiquette, use profanity, intentionally key on others unless they are attempting to key over my communications, etc.

Until very recently, I used the CB primarily to provide information and respond to requests for assistance on Channel 9. Nothing is more infuriating than attempting to give somebody directions and then to be keyed on by some idiot chanting the same thing over, and over, and over, and over, and over..... With a flip of a switch, I could get the travelling directions to the person requesting them. One thing that they taught us in the police academy was that there is a difference between the "letter of the law" and the "spirit of the law." When the laws limiting CB to low wattage were enacted, a license was required to operate a CB and radio traffic was minimal compared to now. Today, it is almost impossible to communicate on a CB in a major metropolitan area (read suburban Chicago) without a little extra wattage and modulation. As I previously stated, as long as proper radio etiquitte is adhered to, I don't have a problem with it.

Hope you don't want tomato or lettuce on that burger. By truck, coast to coast, two to three days. By rail, coast to coast, two to three weeks. Just check service standards published by rail and ground carriers if you doubt me.

The point is, Bill, that trucks will still be necessary.

You brought up another point, as well, and maybe something you might not have considered...

First, warehousing in addition to the railyards, plus the sorting of the loads to where they're going. The logistics are phenomenally complex, and would add greatly to the expense of shipping by rail..

In other words, for time, simplicity, and cost, shipping by truck is still the best bet, and it will be for years and years to come.

The low pass filters can't hurt, but if the guy is running an Antron or one of the end-fed dipoles such as the Antron, then the RFI is probably caused by feedline radiation. (On a side note, it is weird that the ground plane kit made the RFI worse in your case. It seems that it would have helped somewhat.)

In any case, to get rid of the feedline radiation, you will need to create an RF choke near the antenna feedpoint keep the feedline from radiating. You could try the cheap-and-dirty RF choke created by winding the coax in a 4 to 6 inch coil just below the feedpoint of the antenna. I would try winding the coax six to ten turns in the coil.
This is something fairly easy to try, as long as you have a few feet of extra coax to work with.

I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Warehousing? No more than already exists. As I said, there are RoadRailers where trailers have both road and rail wheels, easily swapped in place. They can be hauled to end point, and then delivered. They are already using these for critical
'just in time' inventory control at many plants with great success, I might add.

>
> In other words, for time, simplicity, and cost, shipping by truck is still > the best bet, and it will be for years and years to come.

That is not correct. In the RoadRailer example, think about how much is saved just on drivers' salaries. Thirty trailers pulled by one locomotive= 30 drivers not being paid to pull them + insurance and benefits. Most of those end deliveries are made by railroad drivers or pickups by the consignees themselves. Sort of like the old team track concept. Then there are the savings in wear and tear to roads (cars don't make those annoying "wrinkles" in the pavement at intersections). This is already going on on a small scale, but could be expanded if need be.

It isn't likely to happen, that's true, but it could be if necessary. The point is, nobody is irreplac-able. Methinks truckers have an exaggerated opinion of their invincibility.

Problem is, everyone thinks everone else is 'keying' over them, and is using linears 100% of the time. The need to "talk over" a million other people using illegal linears is poor justification for the use of an illegal linear.

I agree with the spirit of the law. And the spirit of the law in regard to CB is to avoid intentional interference and allow everyone a chance to communicate. That was why power limits were set. Put everone on an equal footing. No one station with "more watts" than any other.

> When the laws limiting CB to low wattage

It's become impossible to communicate BECAUSE a majority of people are running extra wattage and modulation. Surely you can see that the wattage limit was enacted to allow everyone an equal chance to communicate. The spirit of the law is equal access to communications for all. If the FCC let everyone decide their own wattage -- they'd let only SOME people (the ones with extra power) communicate -- and not others (the ones with low power).

As I previously stated, as long as proper > radio etiquitte is adhered to, I don't have a problem with it.

Proper radio etiquette is about observing limits too. What if the 40 legal channels became so polluted by high power and so unusable that the majority of CB'ers moved to unauthorized bands? Would you follow?

By pointing them to the QRZ database, by letter from FCC. The thing is my license IS valid, current, and is a Federal document. Once its validity is established (and it would be), then I would proceed to sue for damages. It is
THEIR responsibility to know the law they are trying to prosecute under.
Hams

I usually don't answer Twistedhed, but I see he's starting more CB myths in here again, and I got a pretty good laugh out of this one.
It's the usual MO. He makes some vague, outrageous claim with absolutely nothing to support it. This one is about several people on CB who are household names, but only Twist knows the big secret of who they are. I wonder what is the harm in mentioning the 'several' names?
Mentioning the 'several' names would really impress the evil hammies and enhance his credibility. So he should go ahead and mention them.
All seven. Unless they don't exist, that is. If they don't exist, he has to make up some wild excuse why the whole thing needs to be kept secret. It's fascinating to watch Twistedhed at work, because you never know what he'll come up with next. He reminds me of a kid in grammar school I knew that made things up because he wanted attention.
Once this kid told us that he had built a space ship in his back yard.
When we asked to see it, he told us it was buried 10 feet down under the grass. When we offered to dig, he said it'd do no good, because the spaceship was invisible except for 1 hour a day. He kept us going for weeks like that.

S'cool, I just wanted your opinion on the situation. I don't automatically feel that one would be "rubbish" for not providing a valid

DIIIIIIIIIIIOOOOOOOOOOO" over and over and over, no discipline, no procedures, no limits? Amateur Radio is a hobby, a learning experience, an avocation, an endeavor to be proud of, and, yes, an achievement. It is also self-policing in that illegal activity is to be prevented so that the bands can be justified and held for use by current and future generations. We do that ourselves.
It is also why hams get in trouble; it is to protect what we have, and weed out those who do not have the maturity to use radio correctly. It is possible to LOSE Amateur Radio to commercial interests if illegal activity is condoned. We are in an INTERNATIONAL community that hears us and judges by what they hear on the air. If they hear trucks, for example,
"tan fer-ing", beeping and squeaking on the ham bands, they wonder how we could be undisciplined as to allow it. It only increases the pressure for release of the frequencies for other uses. Even when the commercial interests are after 220, or 440 MHZ, they cite activity that goes on on ALL ham bands to justify the removal and reassignment of bands from hams.

Coming from what amounts to a free-for-all, anything-goes band like CB
Radio, I can understand why you think that way, but once you take the tests, understand the WHOLE picture only THEN can you understand why it IS important to keep unlicensed stations out of the ham bands. We as the users of the frequencies must do the housekeeping, as it were, and

"sweep" the unauthorized users OUT. That requires viligance and, yes, reporting illegals--even other hams who break the law.

In return for passing the tests, learning what Amateur Radio is really for (and it is much more than just yakkety, yakkety, yak), you receive wide, wide doors to a whole new plain of radio-activities and opportunities to serve that you never had before. If I told you that you won't meet some frumps and grumps, I'd be lying. The beauty is, you can take advantage of so many bands, so many endeavors that you would leave those frumps in the dust to stew in their old grumpy ways.
I, too, have run into them (one I threatened to whup if he didn't leave me alone!), but I can just QSY to other things more fun.

We are NOT on a "witch hunt", but we ARE protecting what belongs to US. You don't hear me getting into debates about what goes on on the "bowl", or "leenyars", or "freebanding" between 27.405 and 28.000 even though I don't agree with it. My concern stops at the 28.000 line of defense. What is sad is that people who insist that they have a "right" to operate anywhere they choose don't clearly see that, by so doing, they open the entire CB Radio service up to draconian measures to stop it's adherents from straying onto licensed spectrum. It is so easy for one to assess an "importance" to "his" avocations that he cannot see that others have the same protections and/or "rights" he has to use a radio without impediment. That is where those rules come in; it is what they were designed to do. Just as I mentioned the Cheetah Transportation case 2 weeks prior to its official announcement on RainReport, I DO know that there are things in the works to combat this.
The Amateur Bands WILL and ARE being defended from takeover by unlicensed operators, and if that offends CBers, I am truly sorry. If that defense so offends one in such a way that he would refrain from becoming licensed (hoping to somehow "hurt" ham radio?), the loser is only the one that passes up the license. I hope you are much smarter than that, and I believe you are.

If you are correct, then it would seem that in a democratic country, extra wattage would become legal. If you are right, fat chance of changing it. So why strain yourself over it?.

How did you get the voltage across the tube down to ZERO volts so your swing could go rail to rail?

Must be a very special tube!

The only way to increase efficiency in a class A amplifier is to make the tube spend less time in it's linear region.

That's begging. I'm in favor of social punishments, such as refusing service to lawmakers and barring them from my business premises (as an

who knows, even a lawmaker might wise up.

Hmm, guess we'll have to put the question to some of our harmless keyclowns. FYI I never put anyone in danger while working 6.5 meter off drugs when I was on 6.5. So "malicious jamming" does occasionally

From http://wireless.fcc.gov/services/amateur/licensing/changingaddress.html

"If your license has not expired, 47 C.F.R Section 97.21 requires you to apply for timely modification of the license as necessary to show your correct mailing address, name, club name, license trustee or custodian name. Revocation of your station license or suspension of your operator license may result when correspondence from the FCC is returned as undeliverable because you failed to provide the correct mailing address."

As you can see, the FCC only requires a current MAILING address, not a physical address. Hams providing a completely false address can obviously be penalized. Why are we worrying about this on the CB newsgroup in the first place?

It'll be pretty funny when the clod keeps sneaking over & filling the

Hey everybody,

I currently have a CB website up for the local cbers in my area. I've started a CB editorial section for my web site. I know, I know... that sounds silly, but if anyone would like to post articles to the site about anything radio related, please do. Email what you want me to post to...
